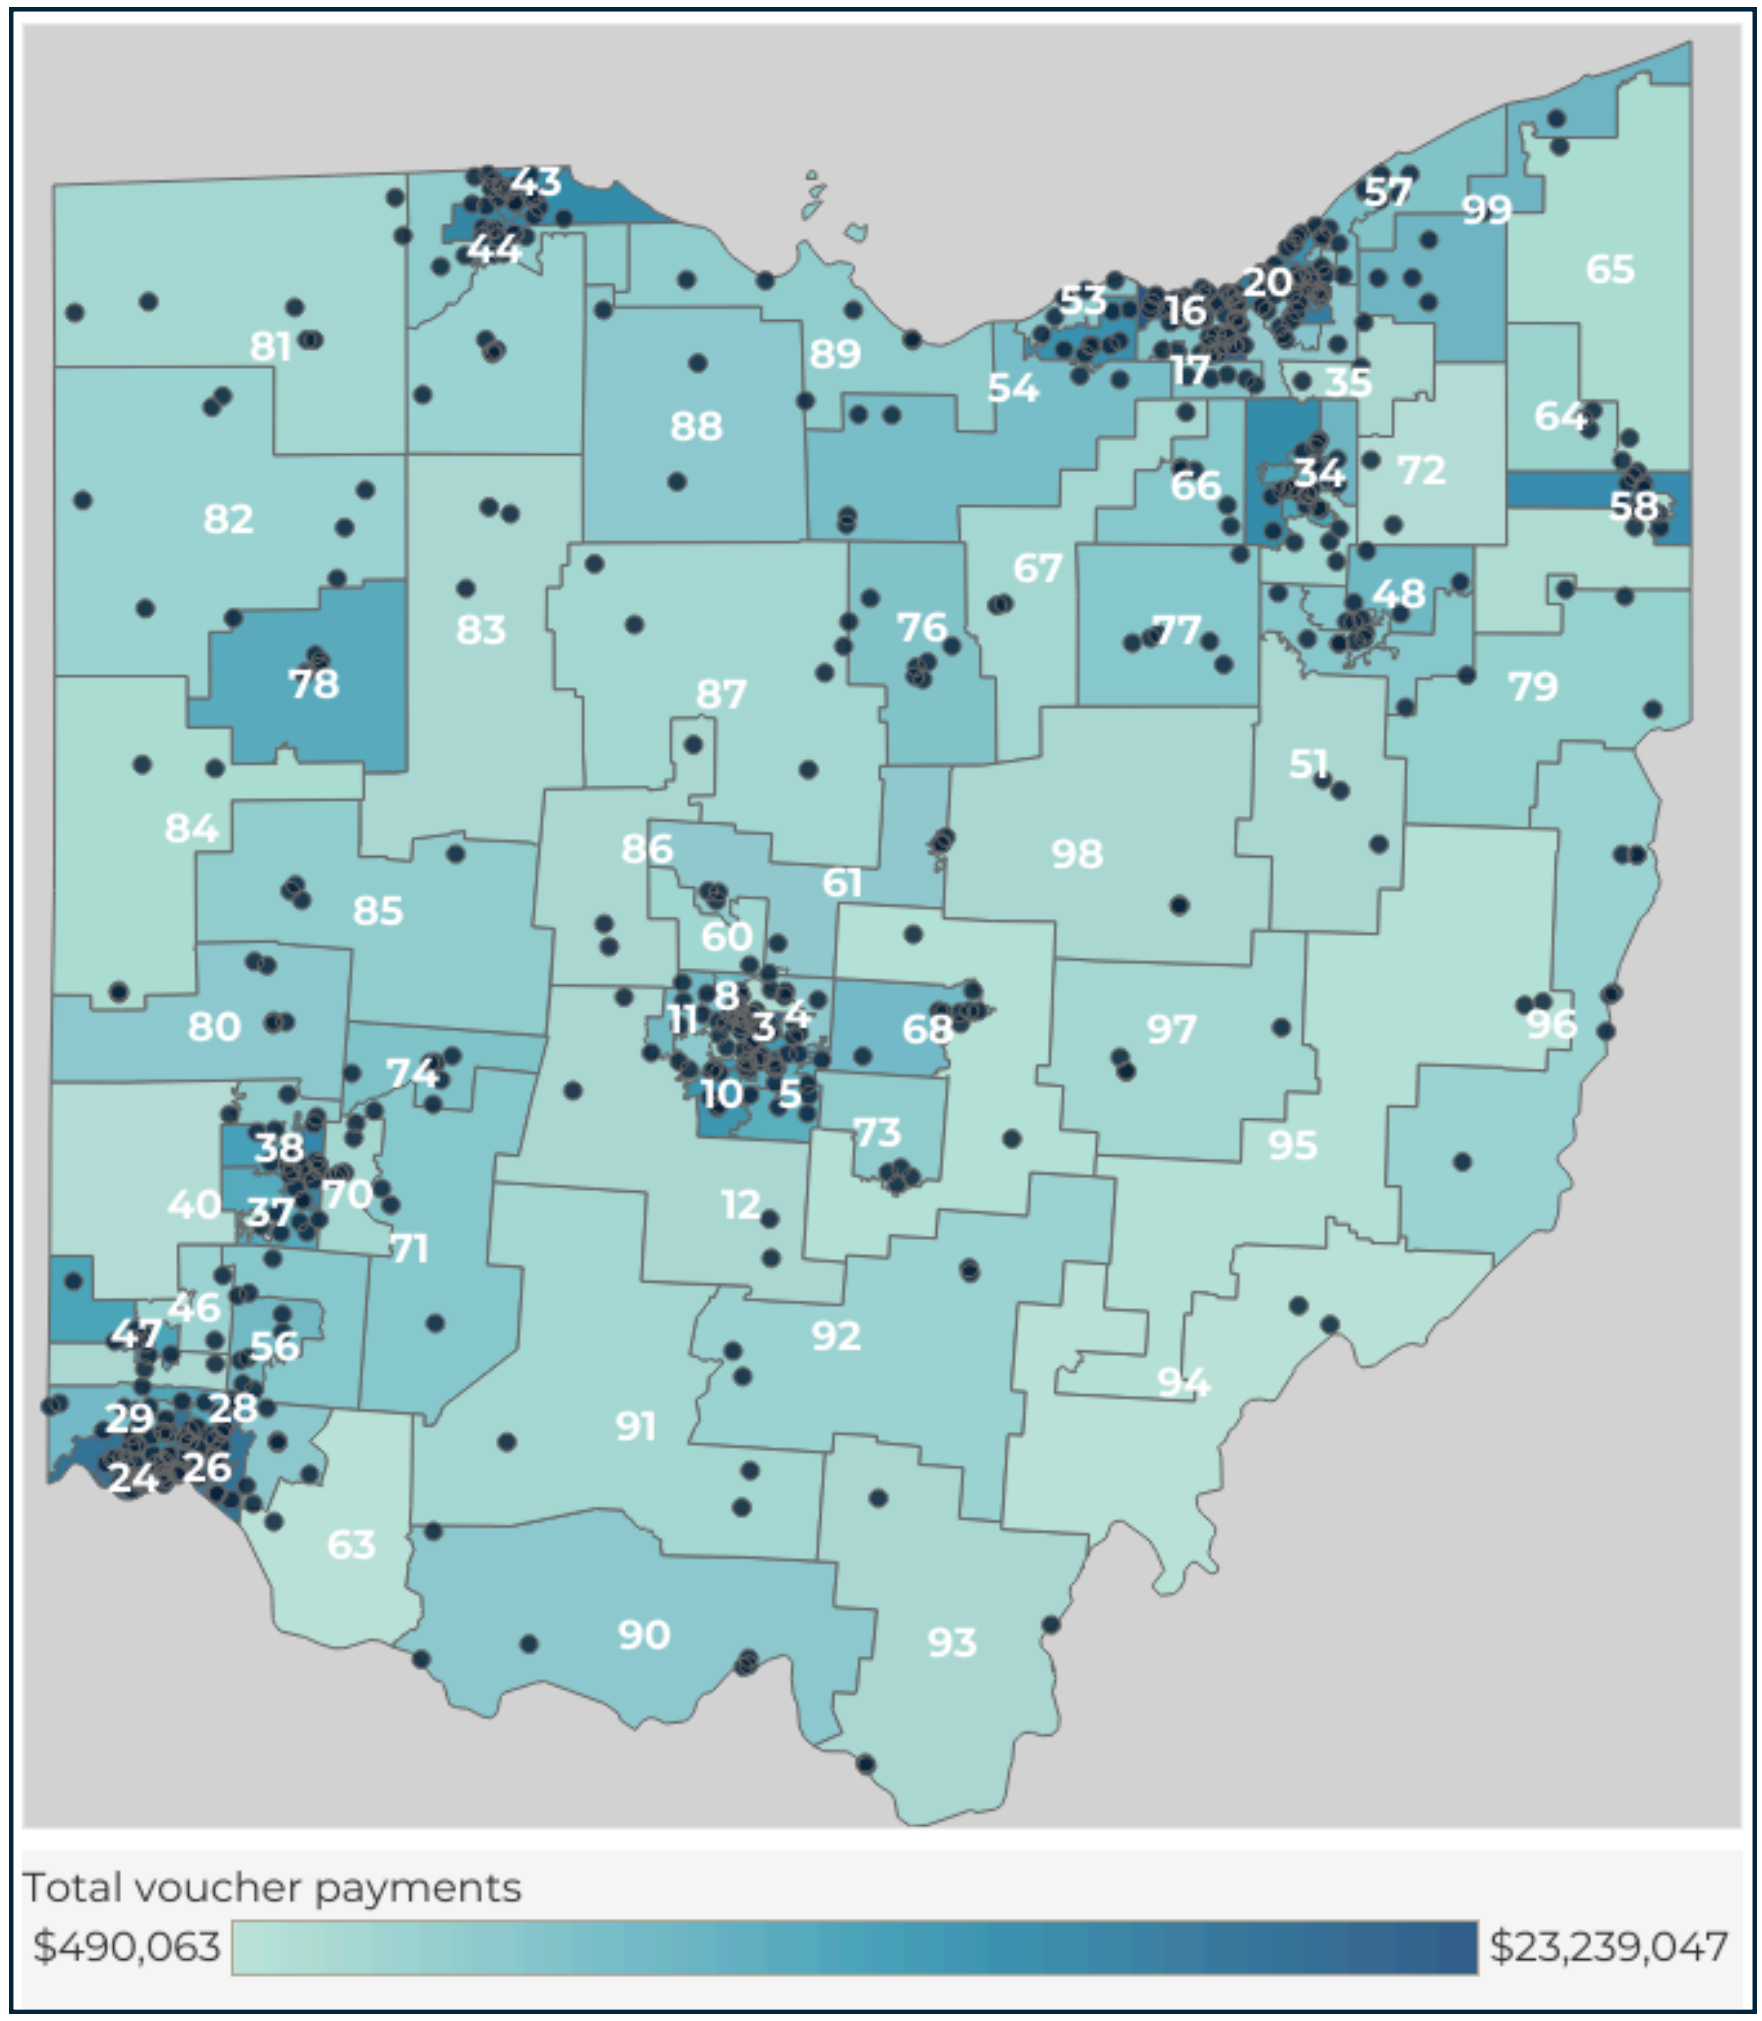
Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 1

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 1 there are 10

private voucher schools attended by 2,050

voucher students.

In District 1 there are 36 public schools attended by 11,616

students.

Contact Representative Jarrells and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

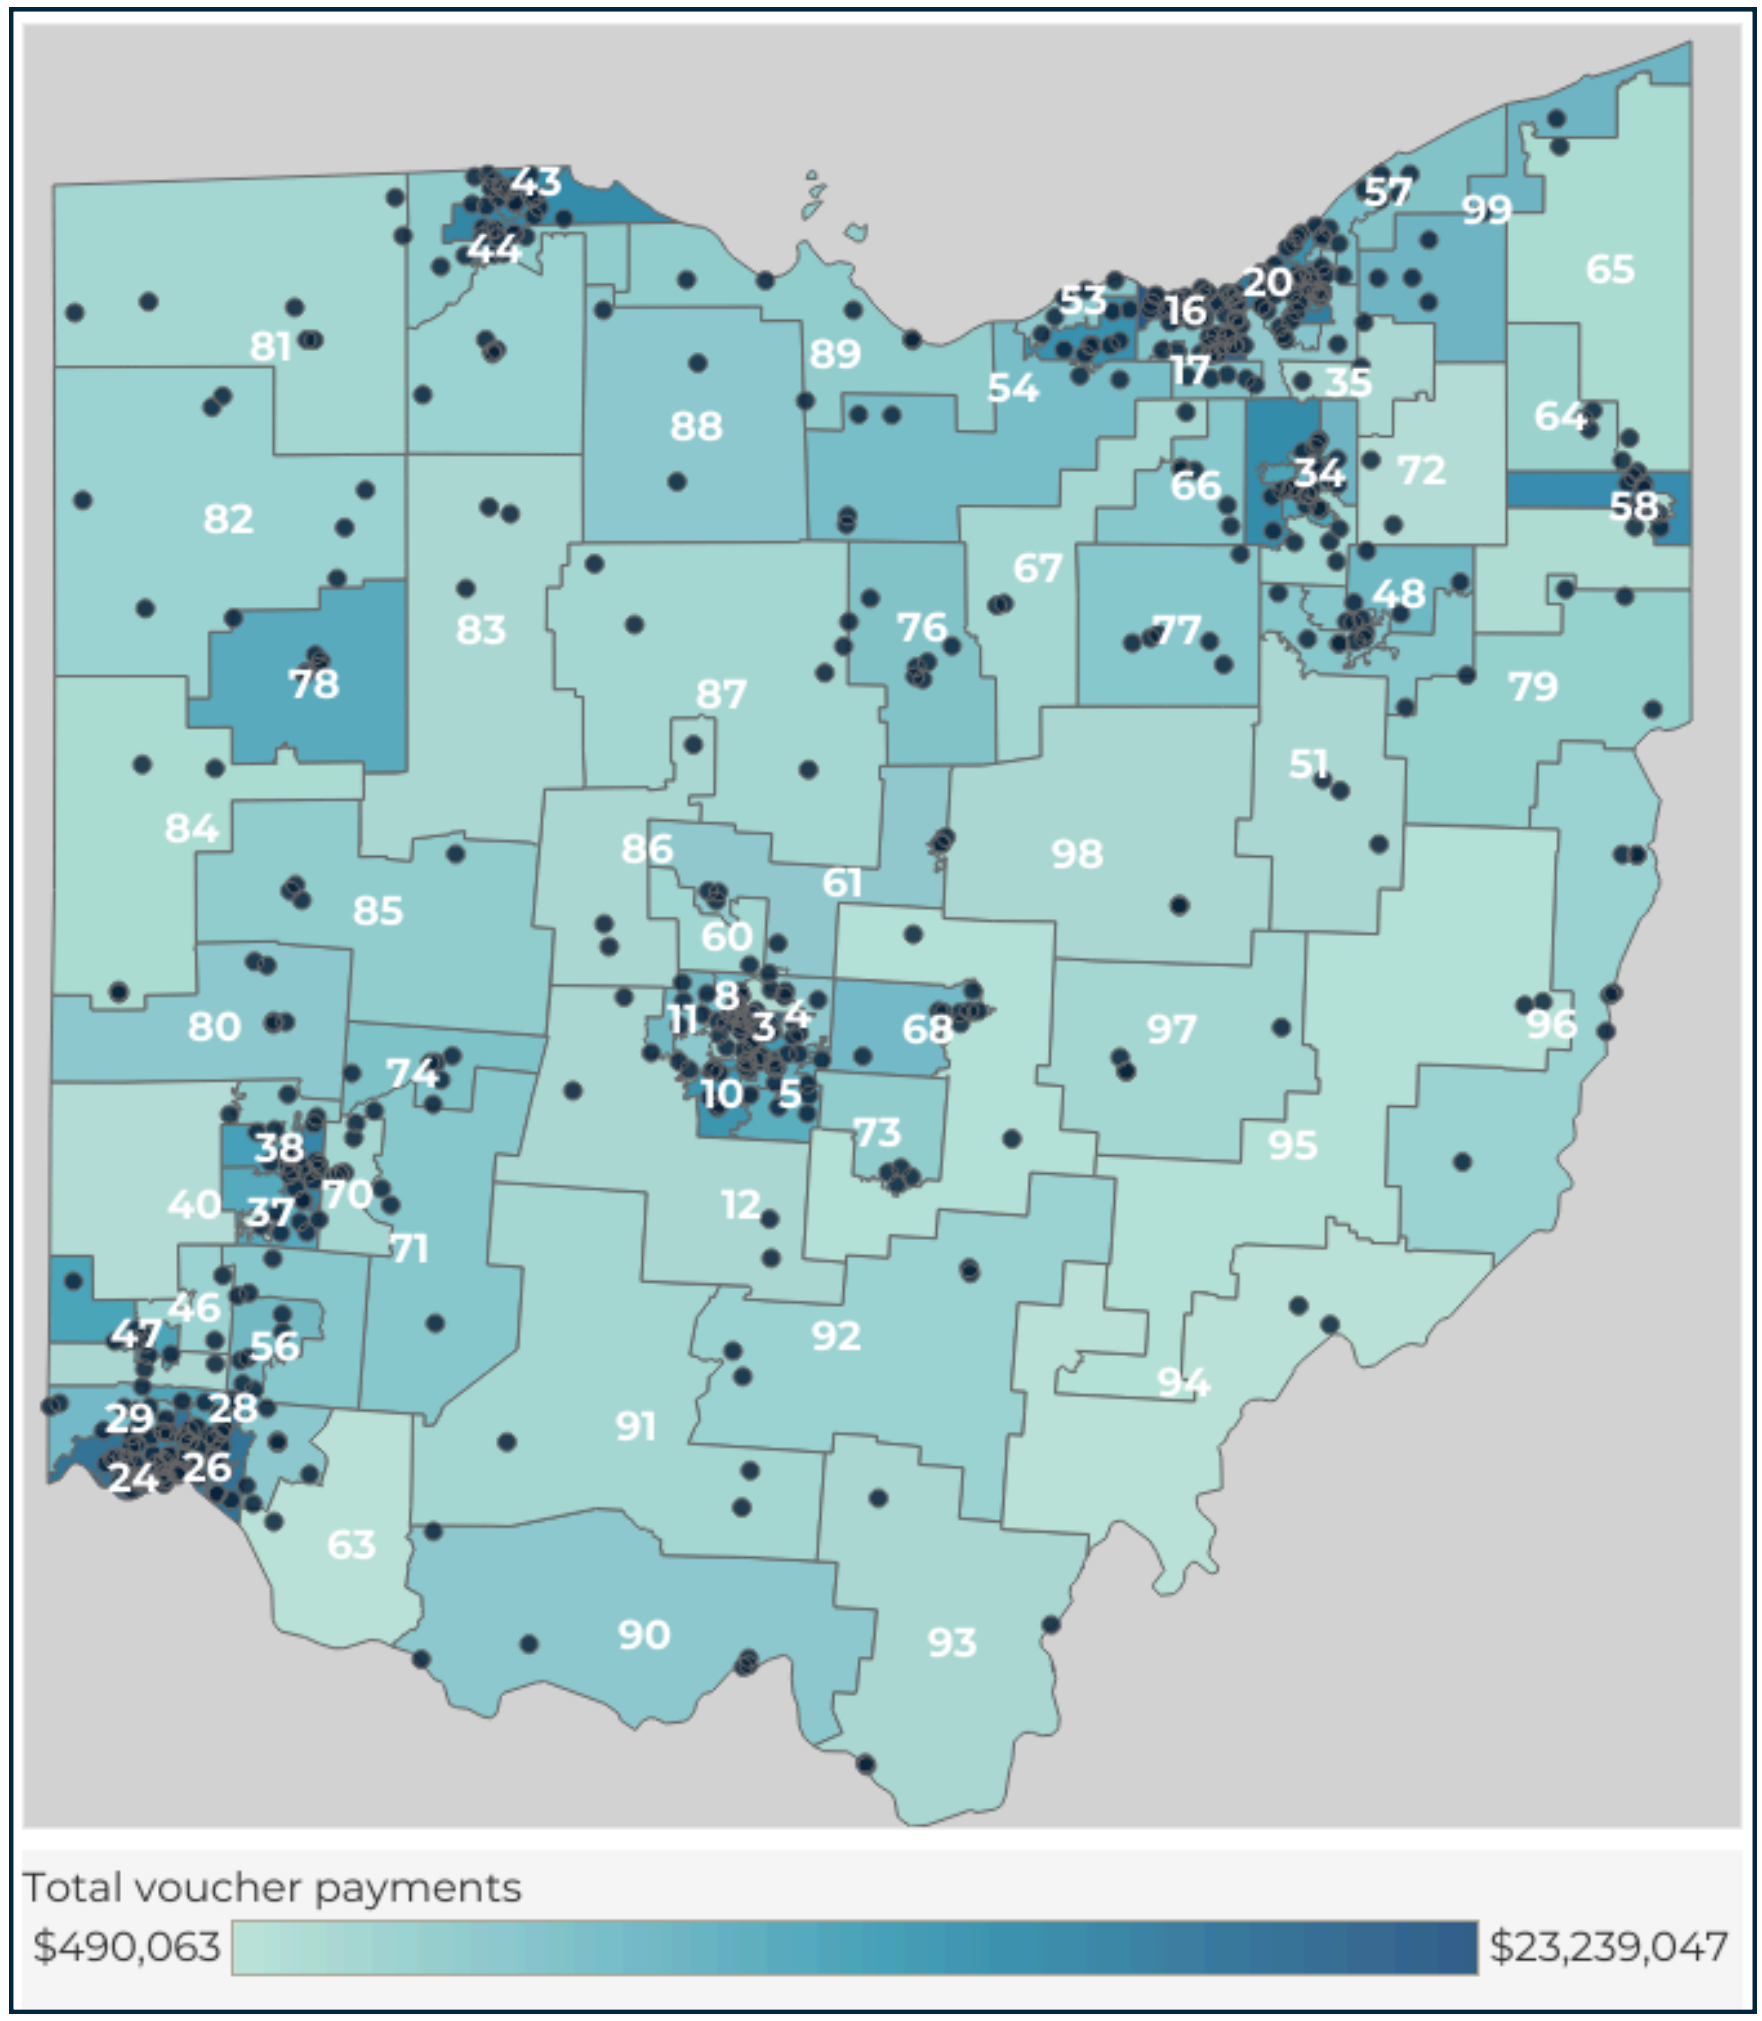
Email them at Rep01@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5343

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 10

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 10 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 2,270

voucher students.

In District 10 there are 32

public schools attended by 18,687

students.

Contact Representative Sigrist and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

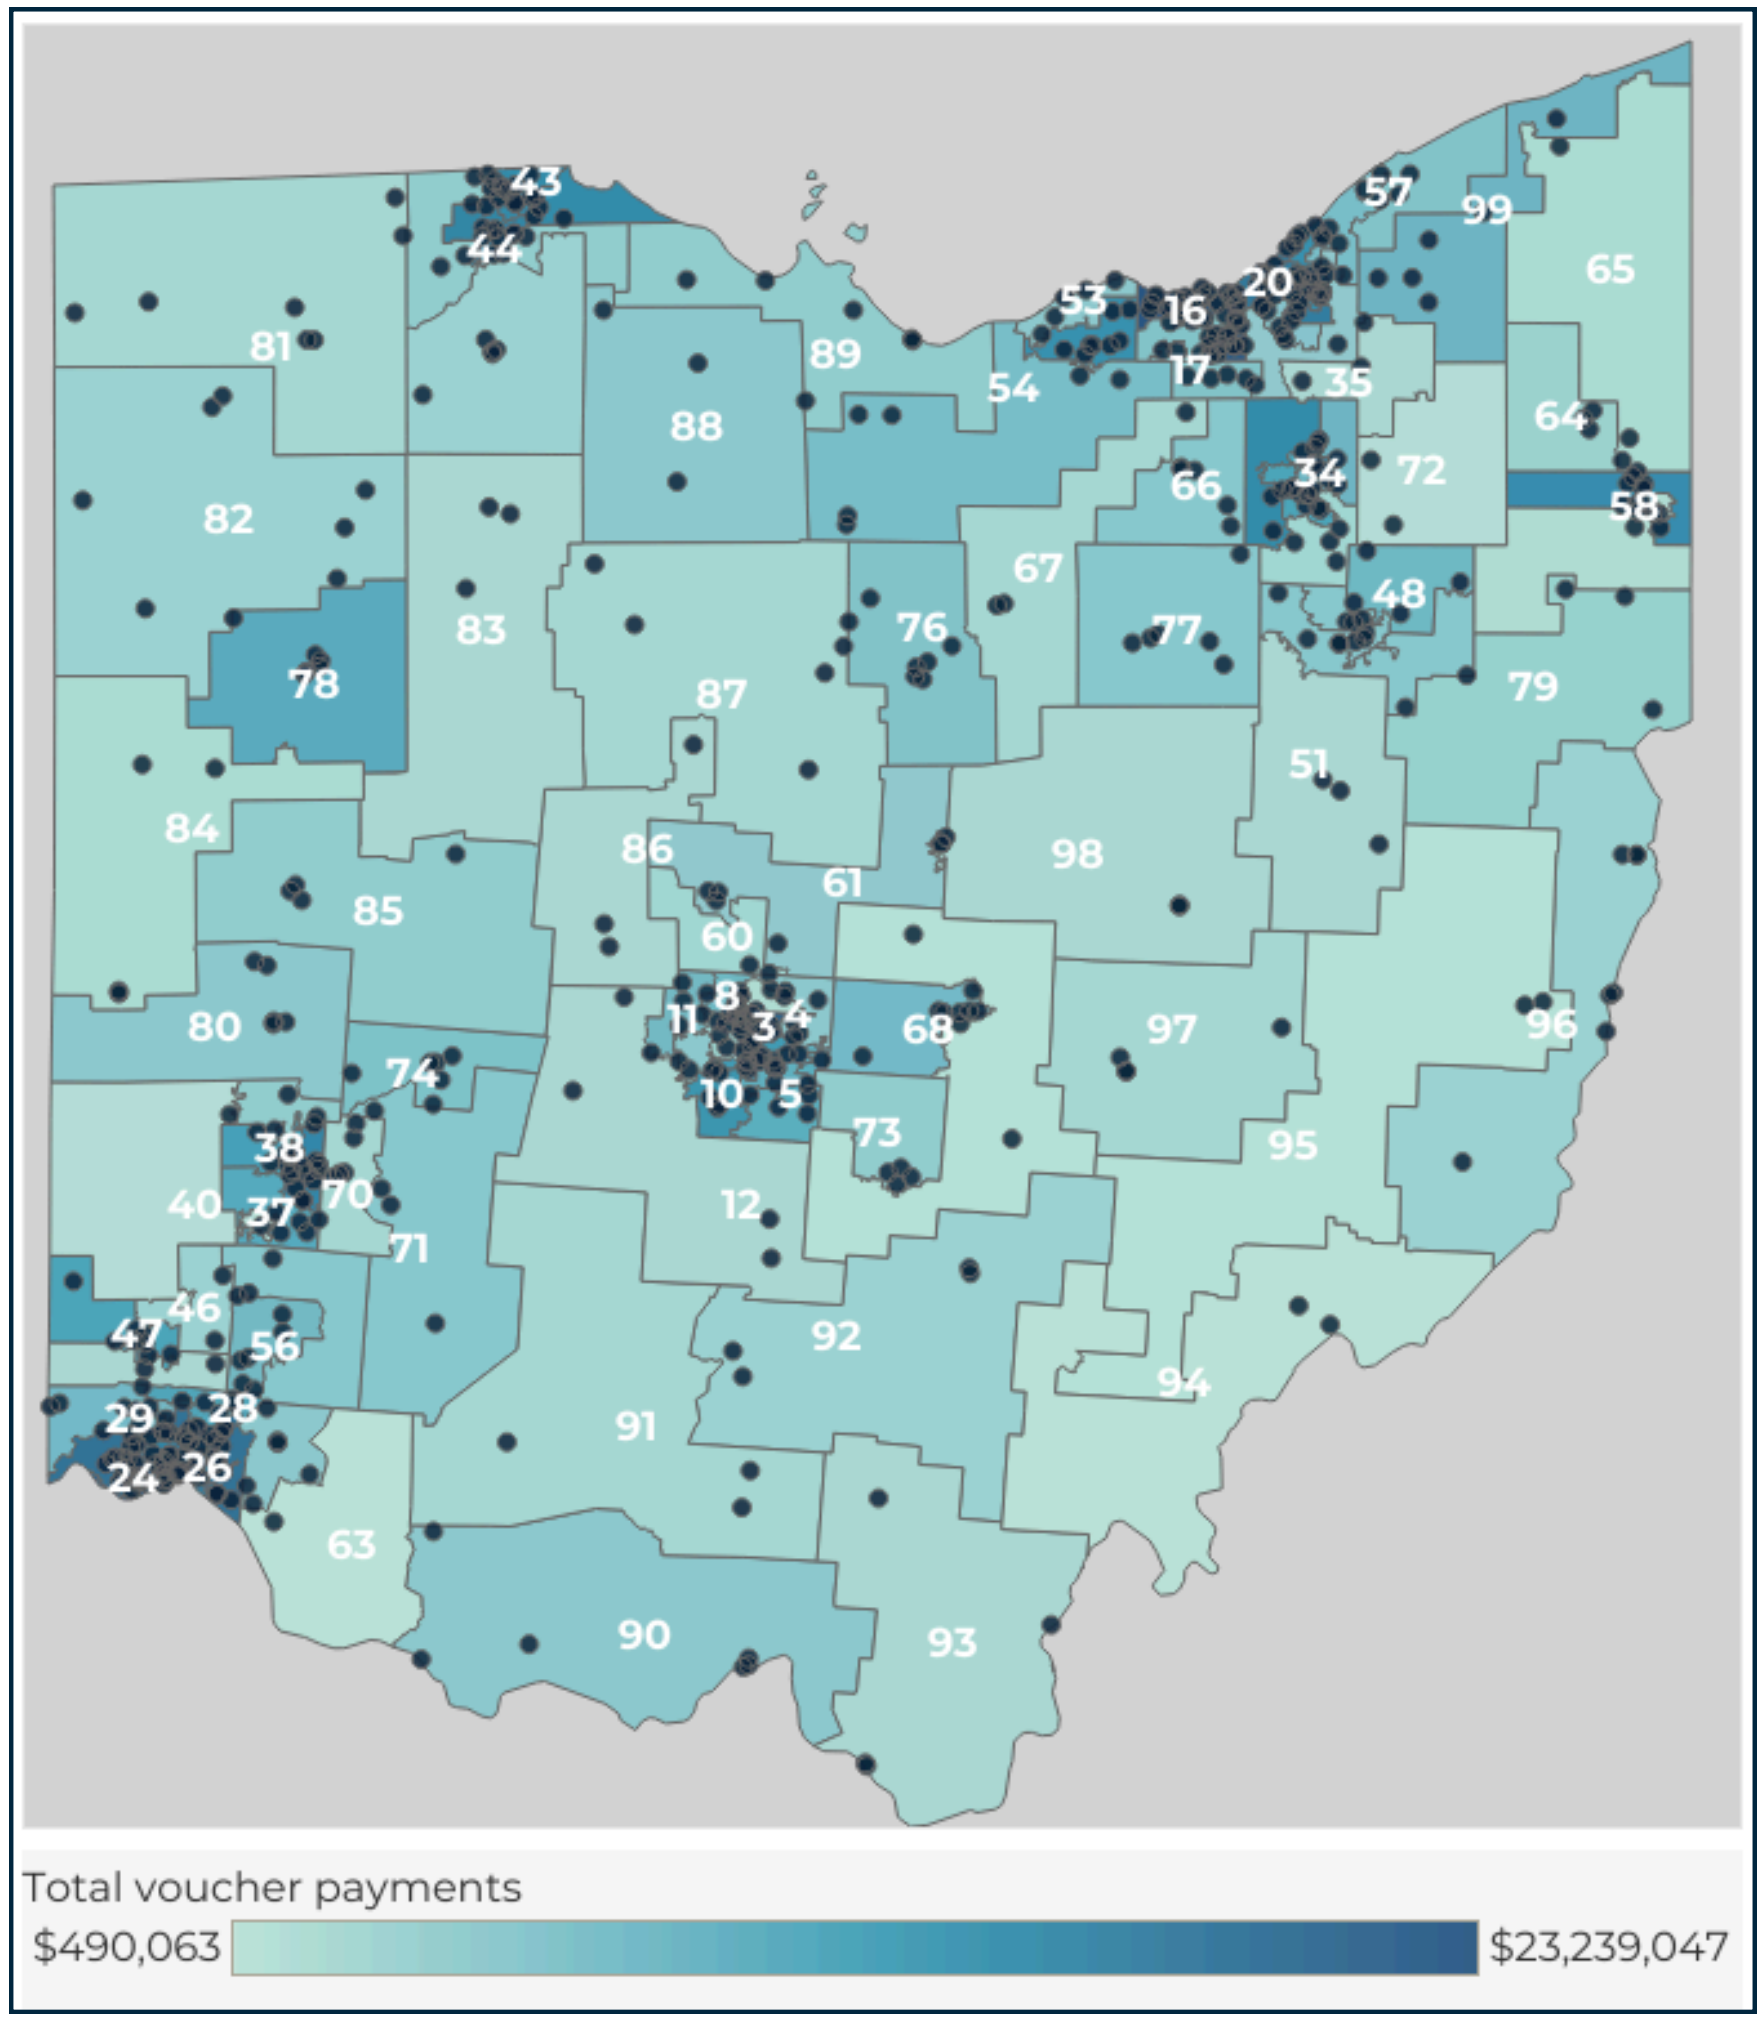
Email them at rep10@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9690

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 11

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 11 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,758

voucher students.

In District 11 there are 36

public schools attended by 24,817

students.

Contact Representative Lett and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

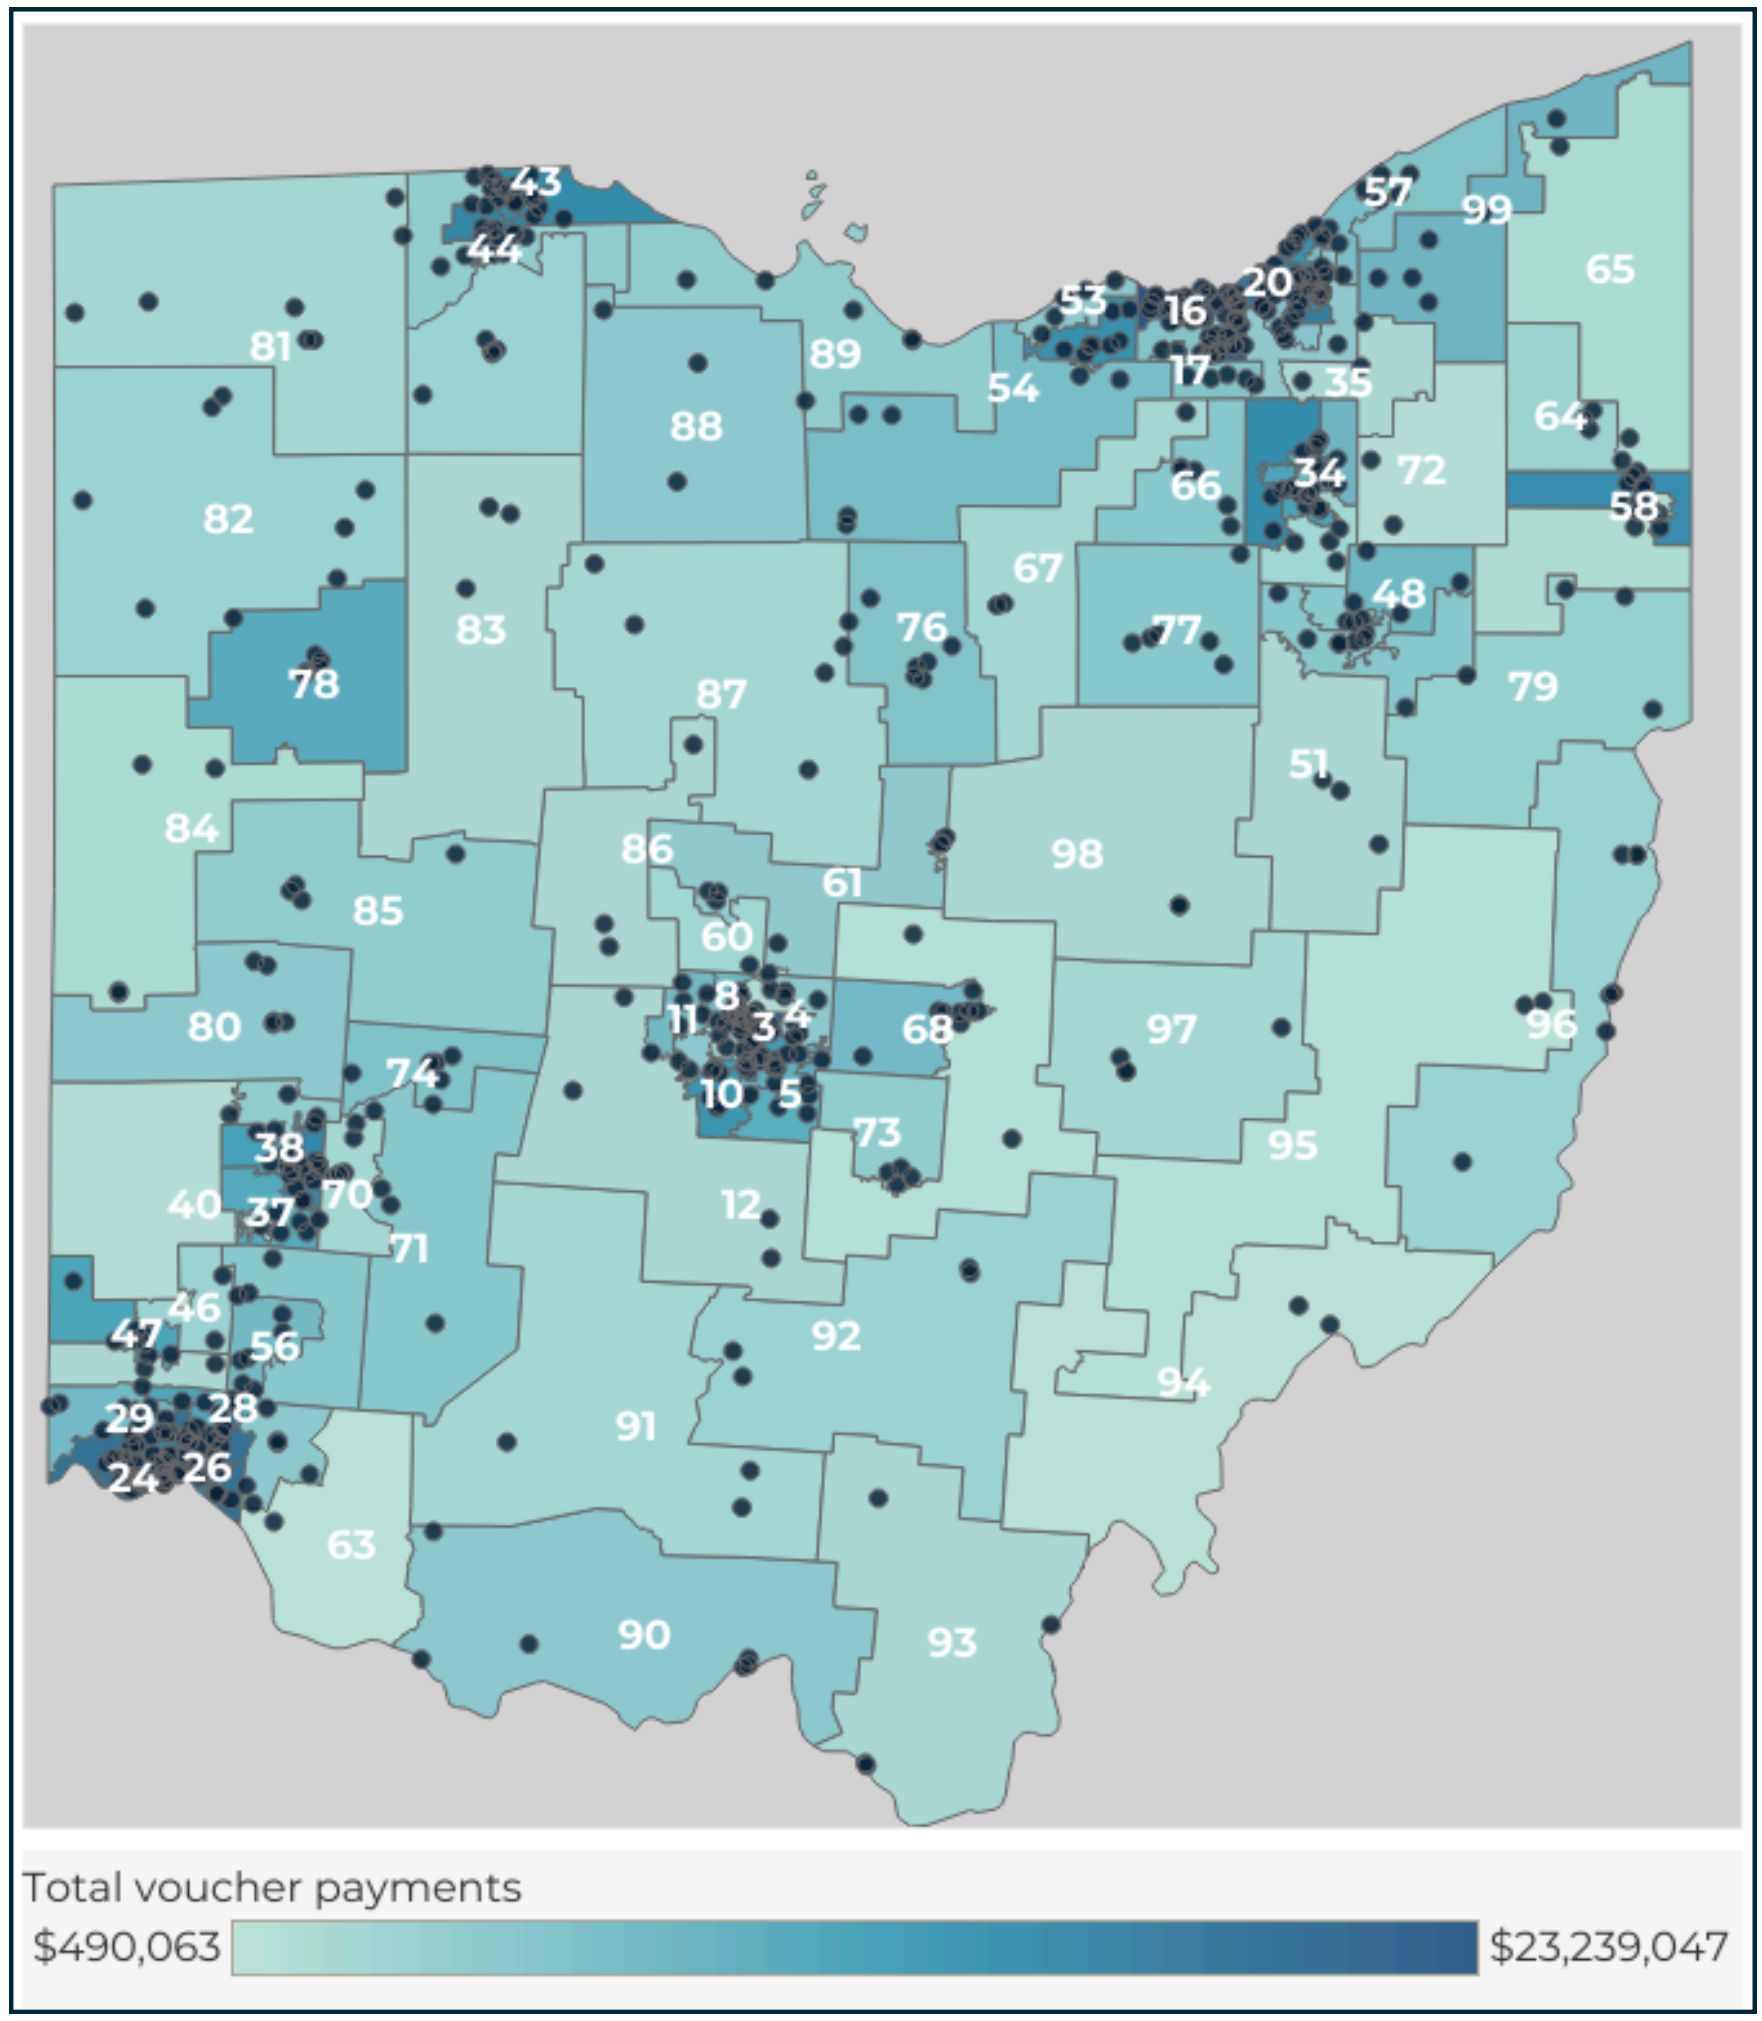
Email them at rep11@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6030

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 12

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 12 there are

4

private voucher schools attended by 436

voucher students.

In District 12 there are 32

public schools attended by 15,817

students.

Contact Representative Stewart and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

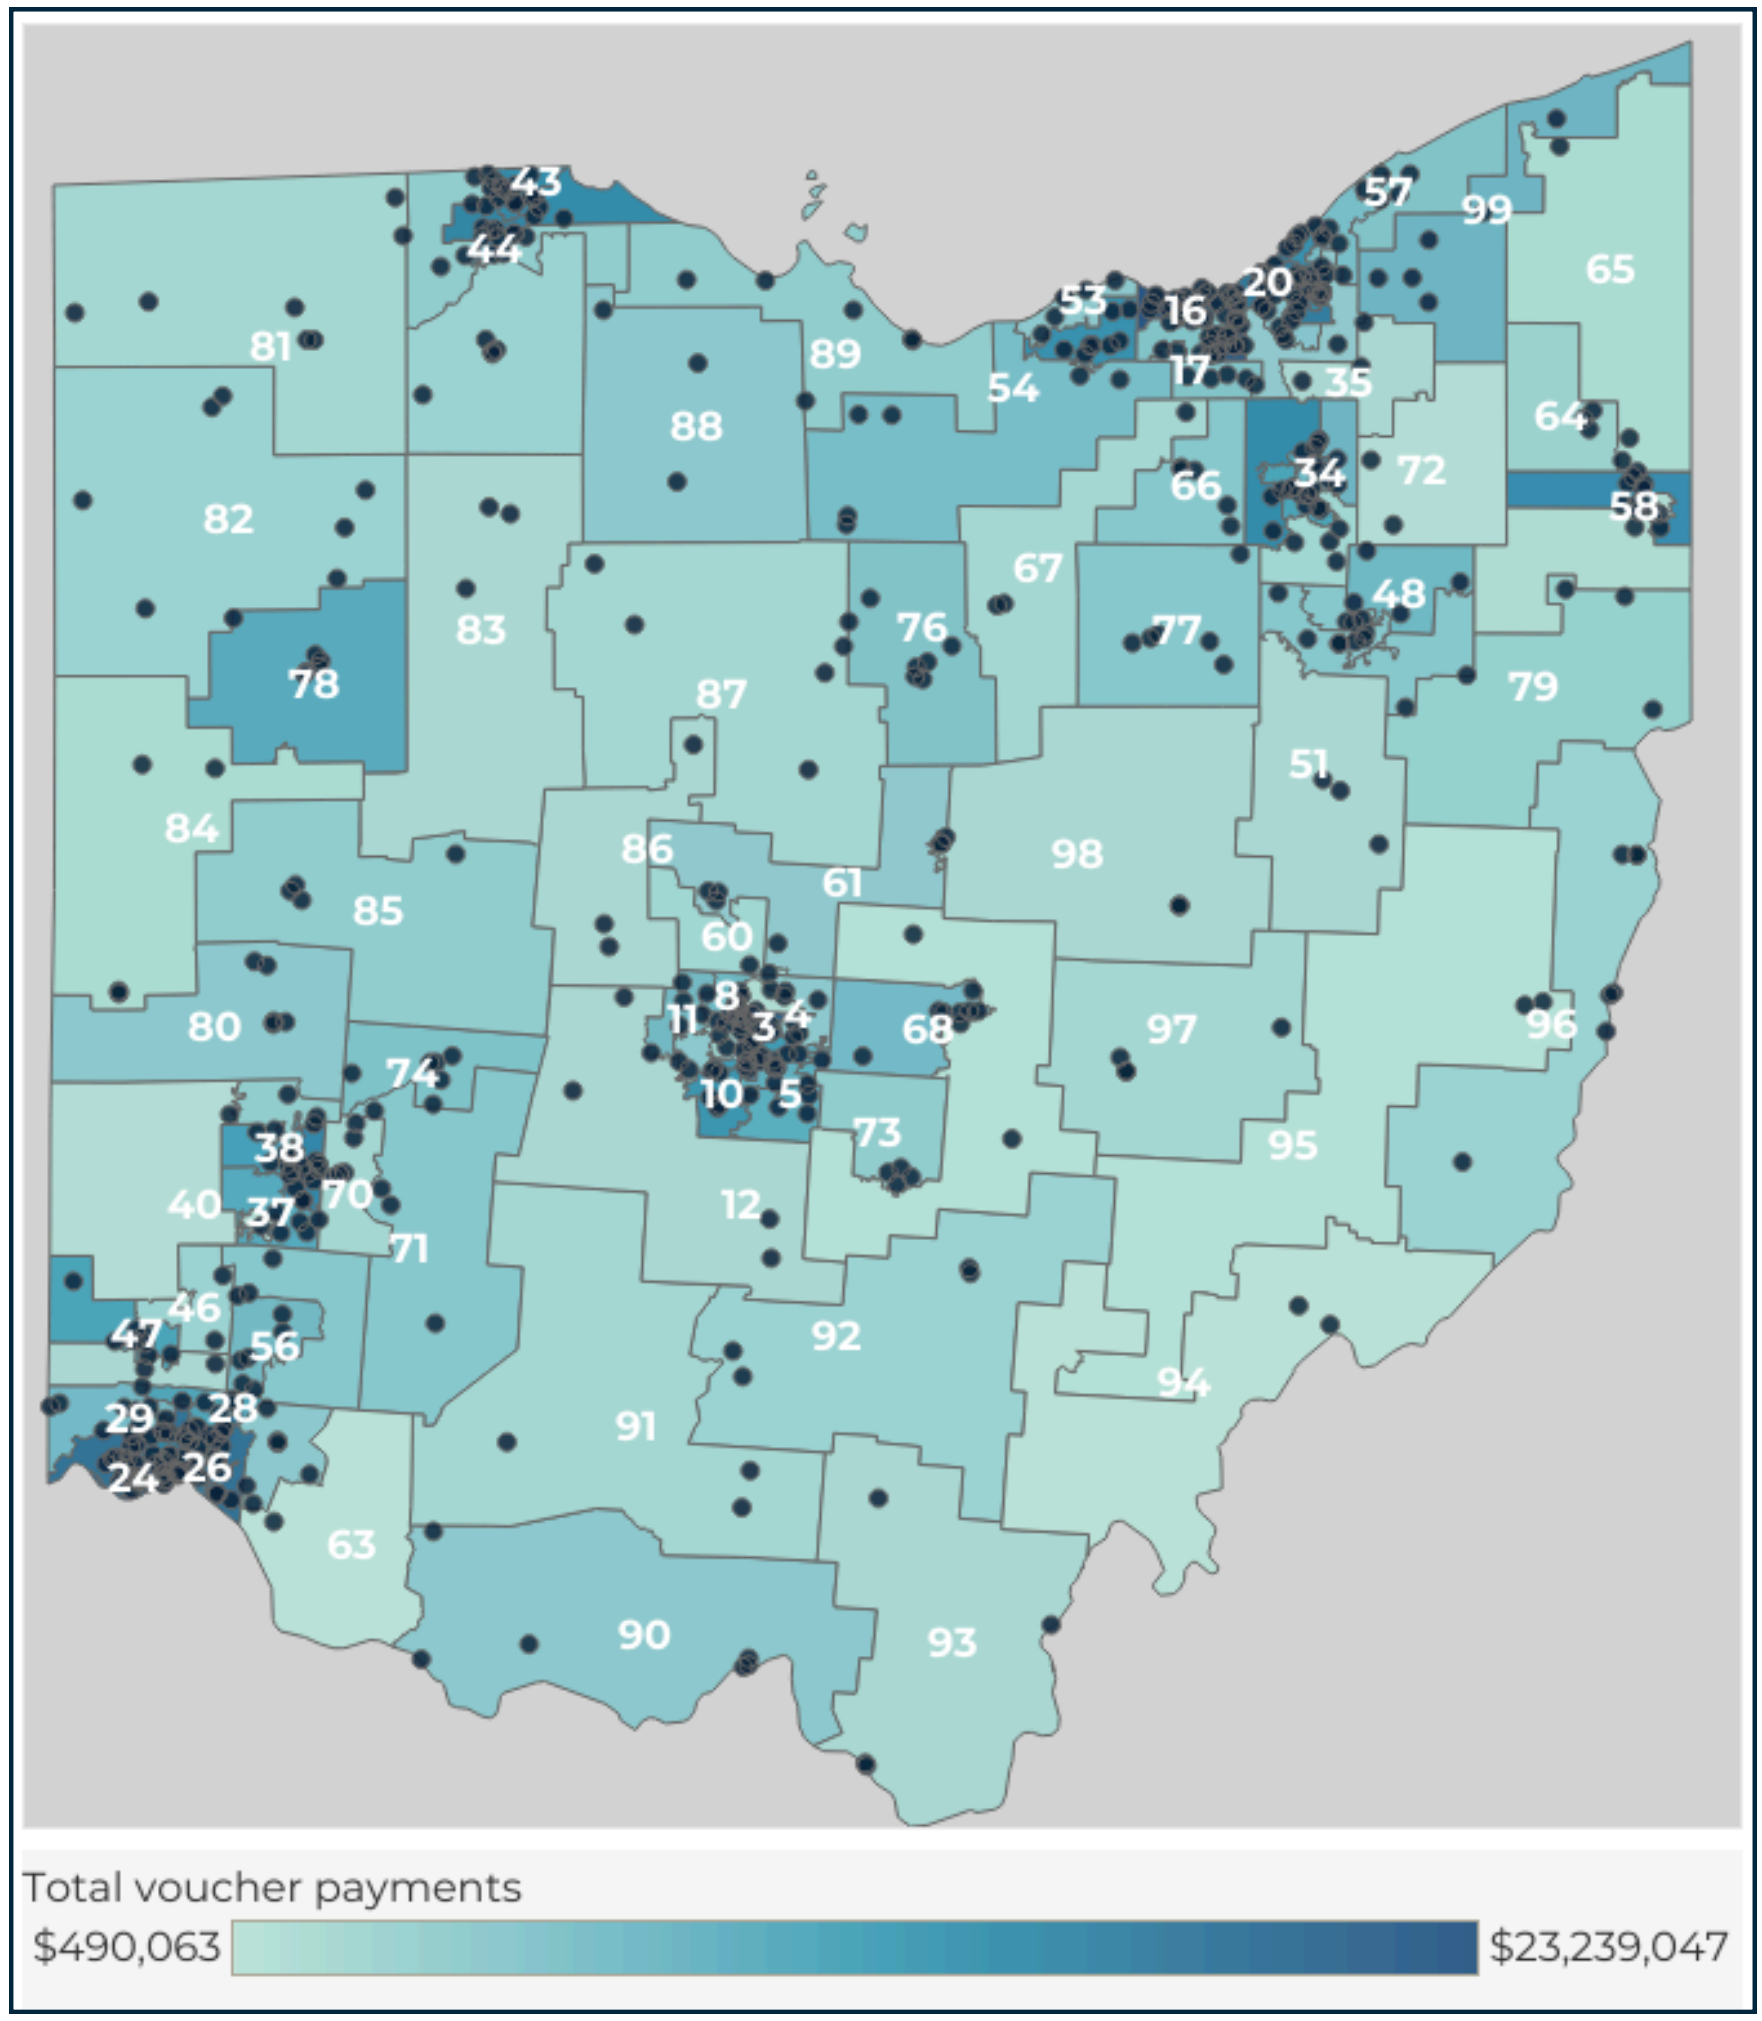
Email them at Rep12@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1464

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 13

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 13 there are

11

private voucher schools attended by 3,771

voucher students.

In District 13 there are 33

public schools attended by 13,042

students.

Contact Representative Rader and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

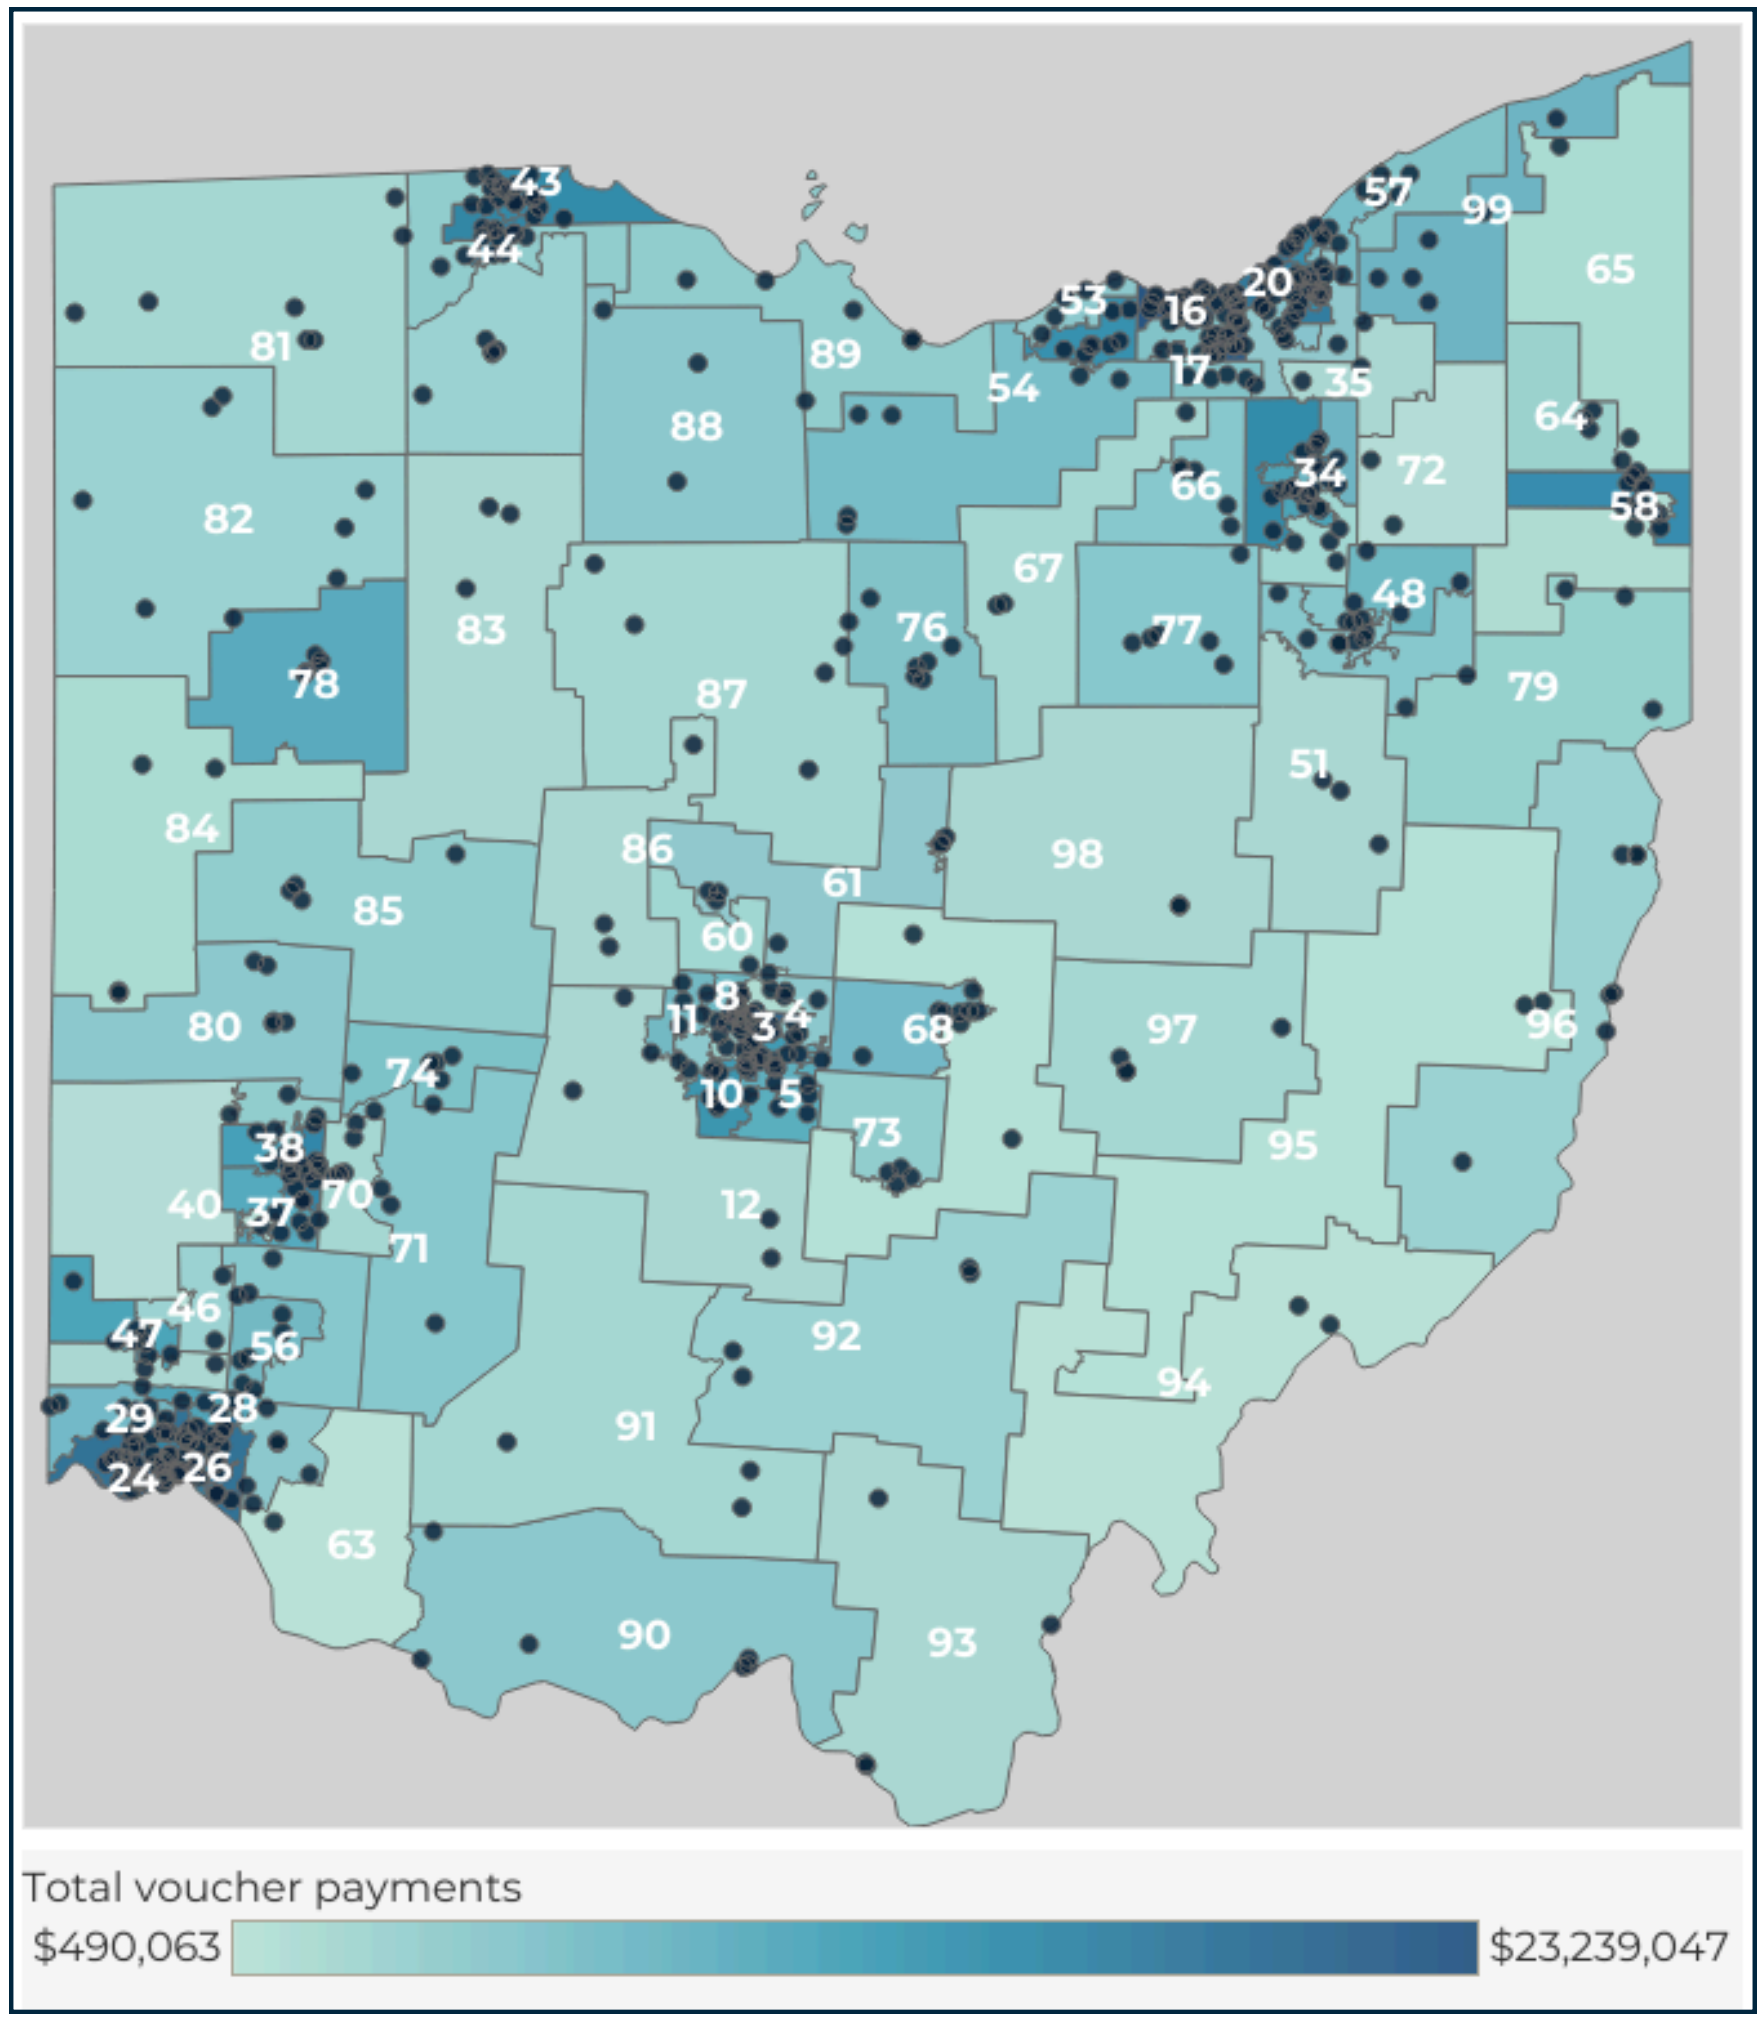
Email them at Rep13@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5921

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 14

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 14 there are

14

private voucher schools attended by 3,882

voucher students.

In District 14 there are 15 public schools attended by 9,050

students.

Contact Representative Brennan and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

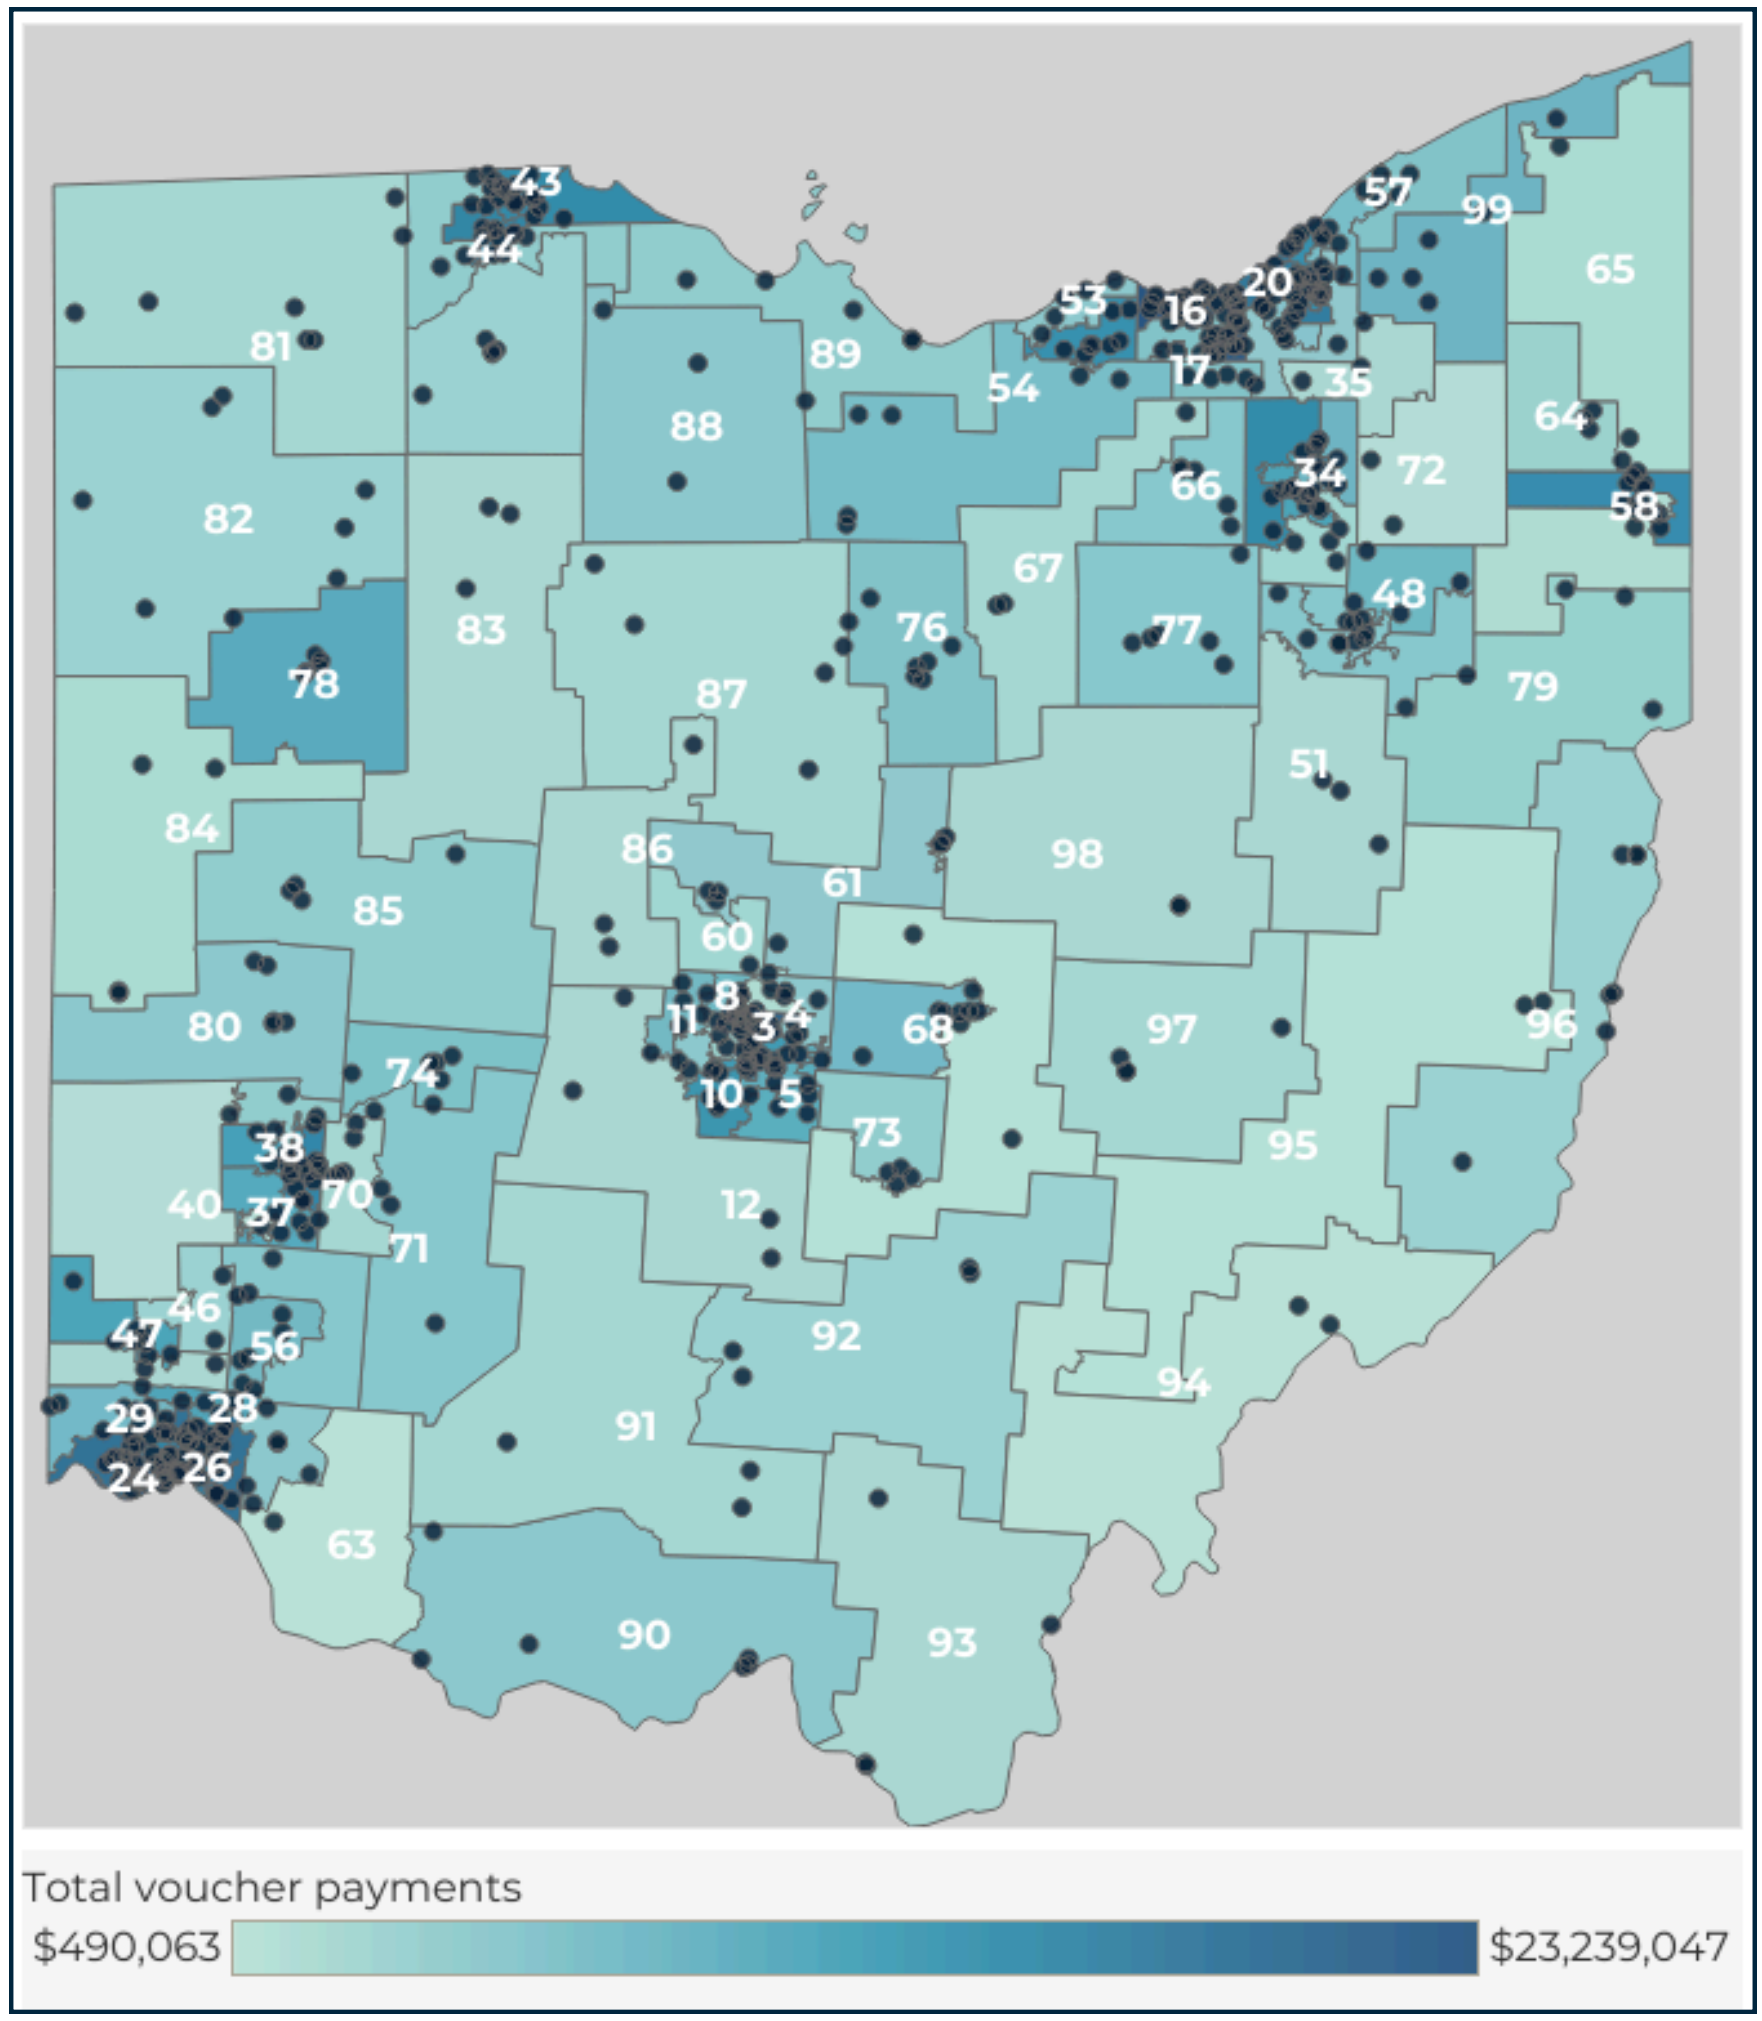
Email them at rep14@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3485

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 15

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 15 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,008

voucher students.

In District 15 there are 20

public schools attended by 12,010

students.

Contact Representative Glassburn and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

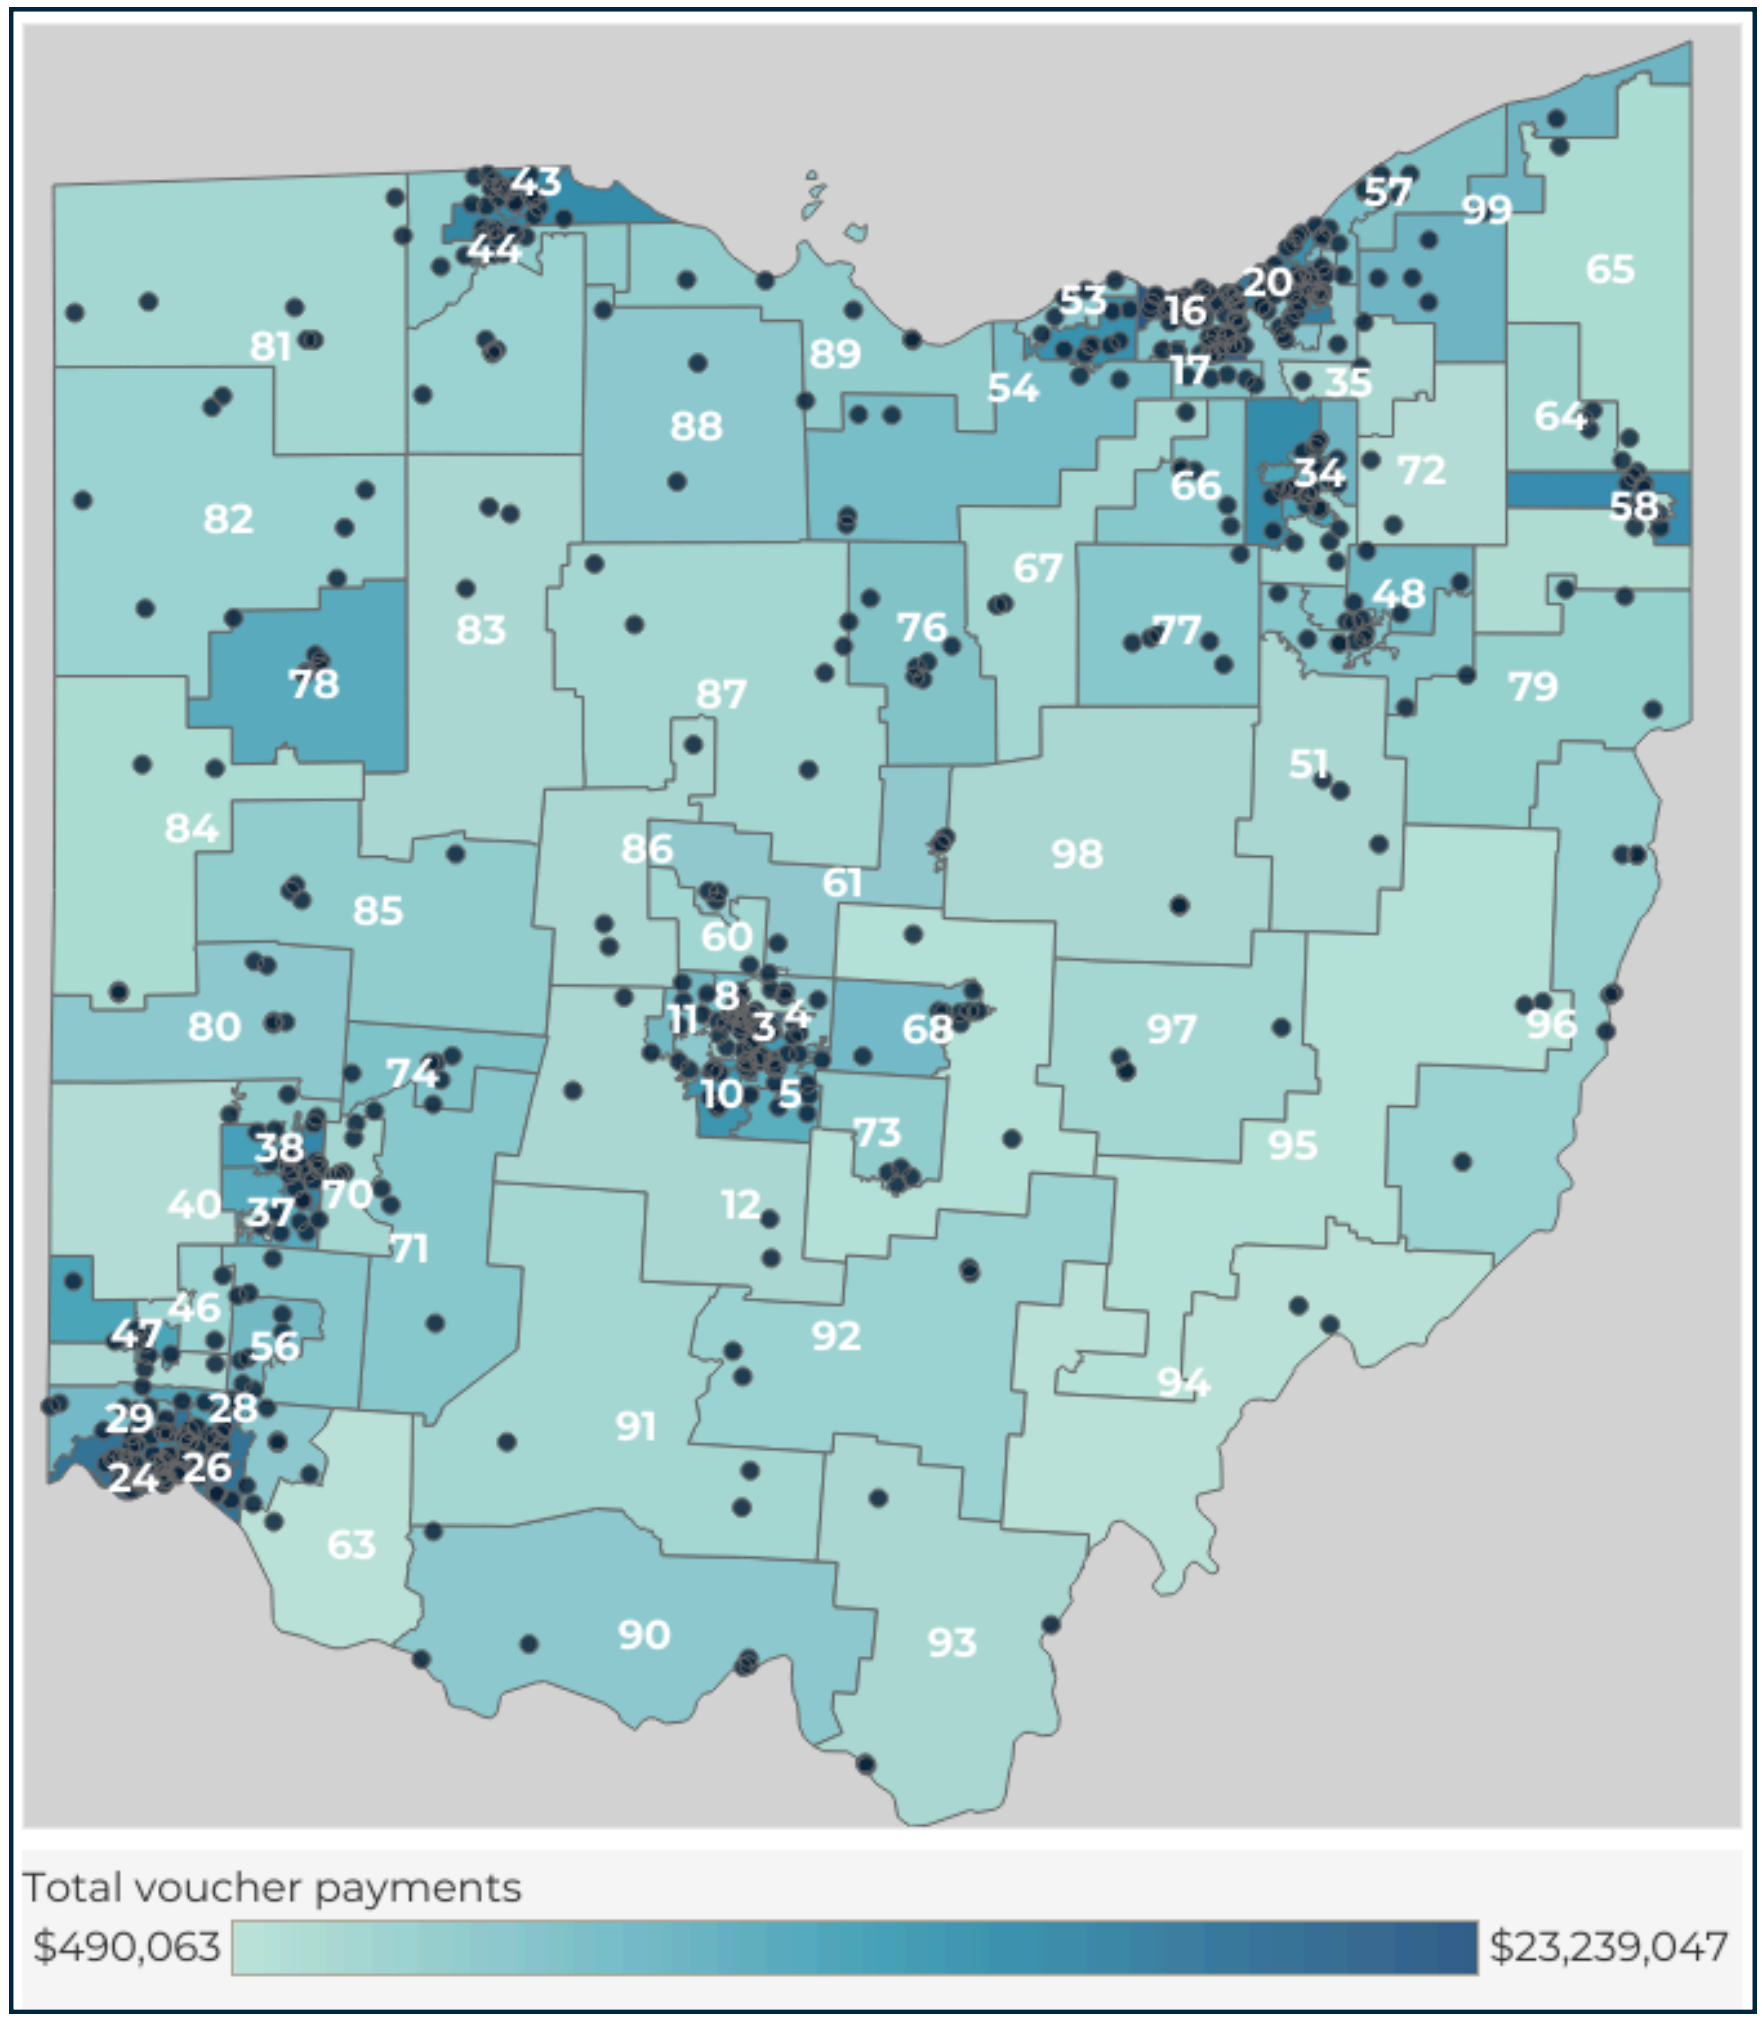
Email them at rep15@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3100

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 16

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 16 there are

16

private voucher schools attended by 4,638

voucher students.

In District 16 there are 28

public schools attended by 13,854

students.

Contact Representative Sweeney and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

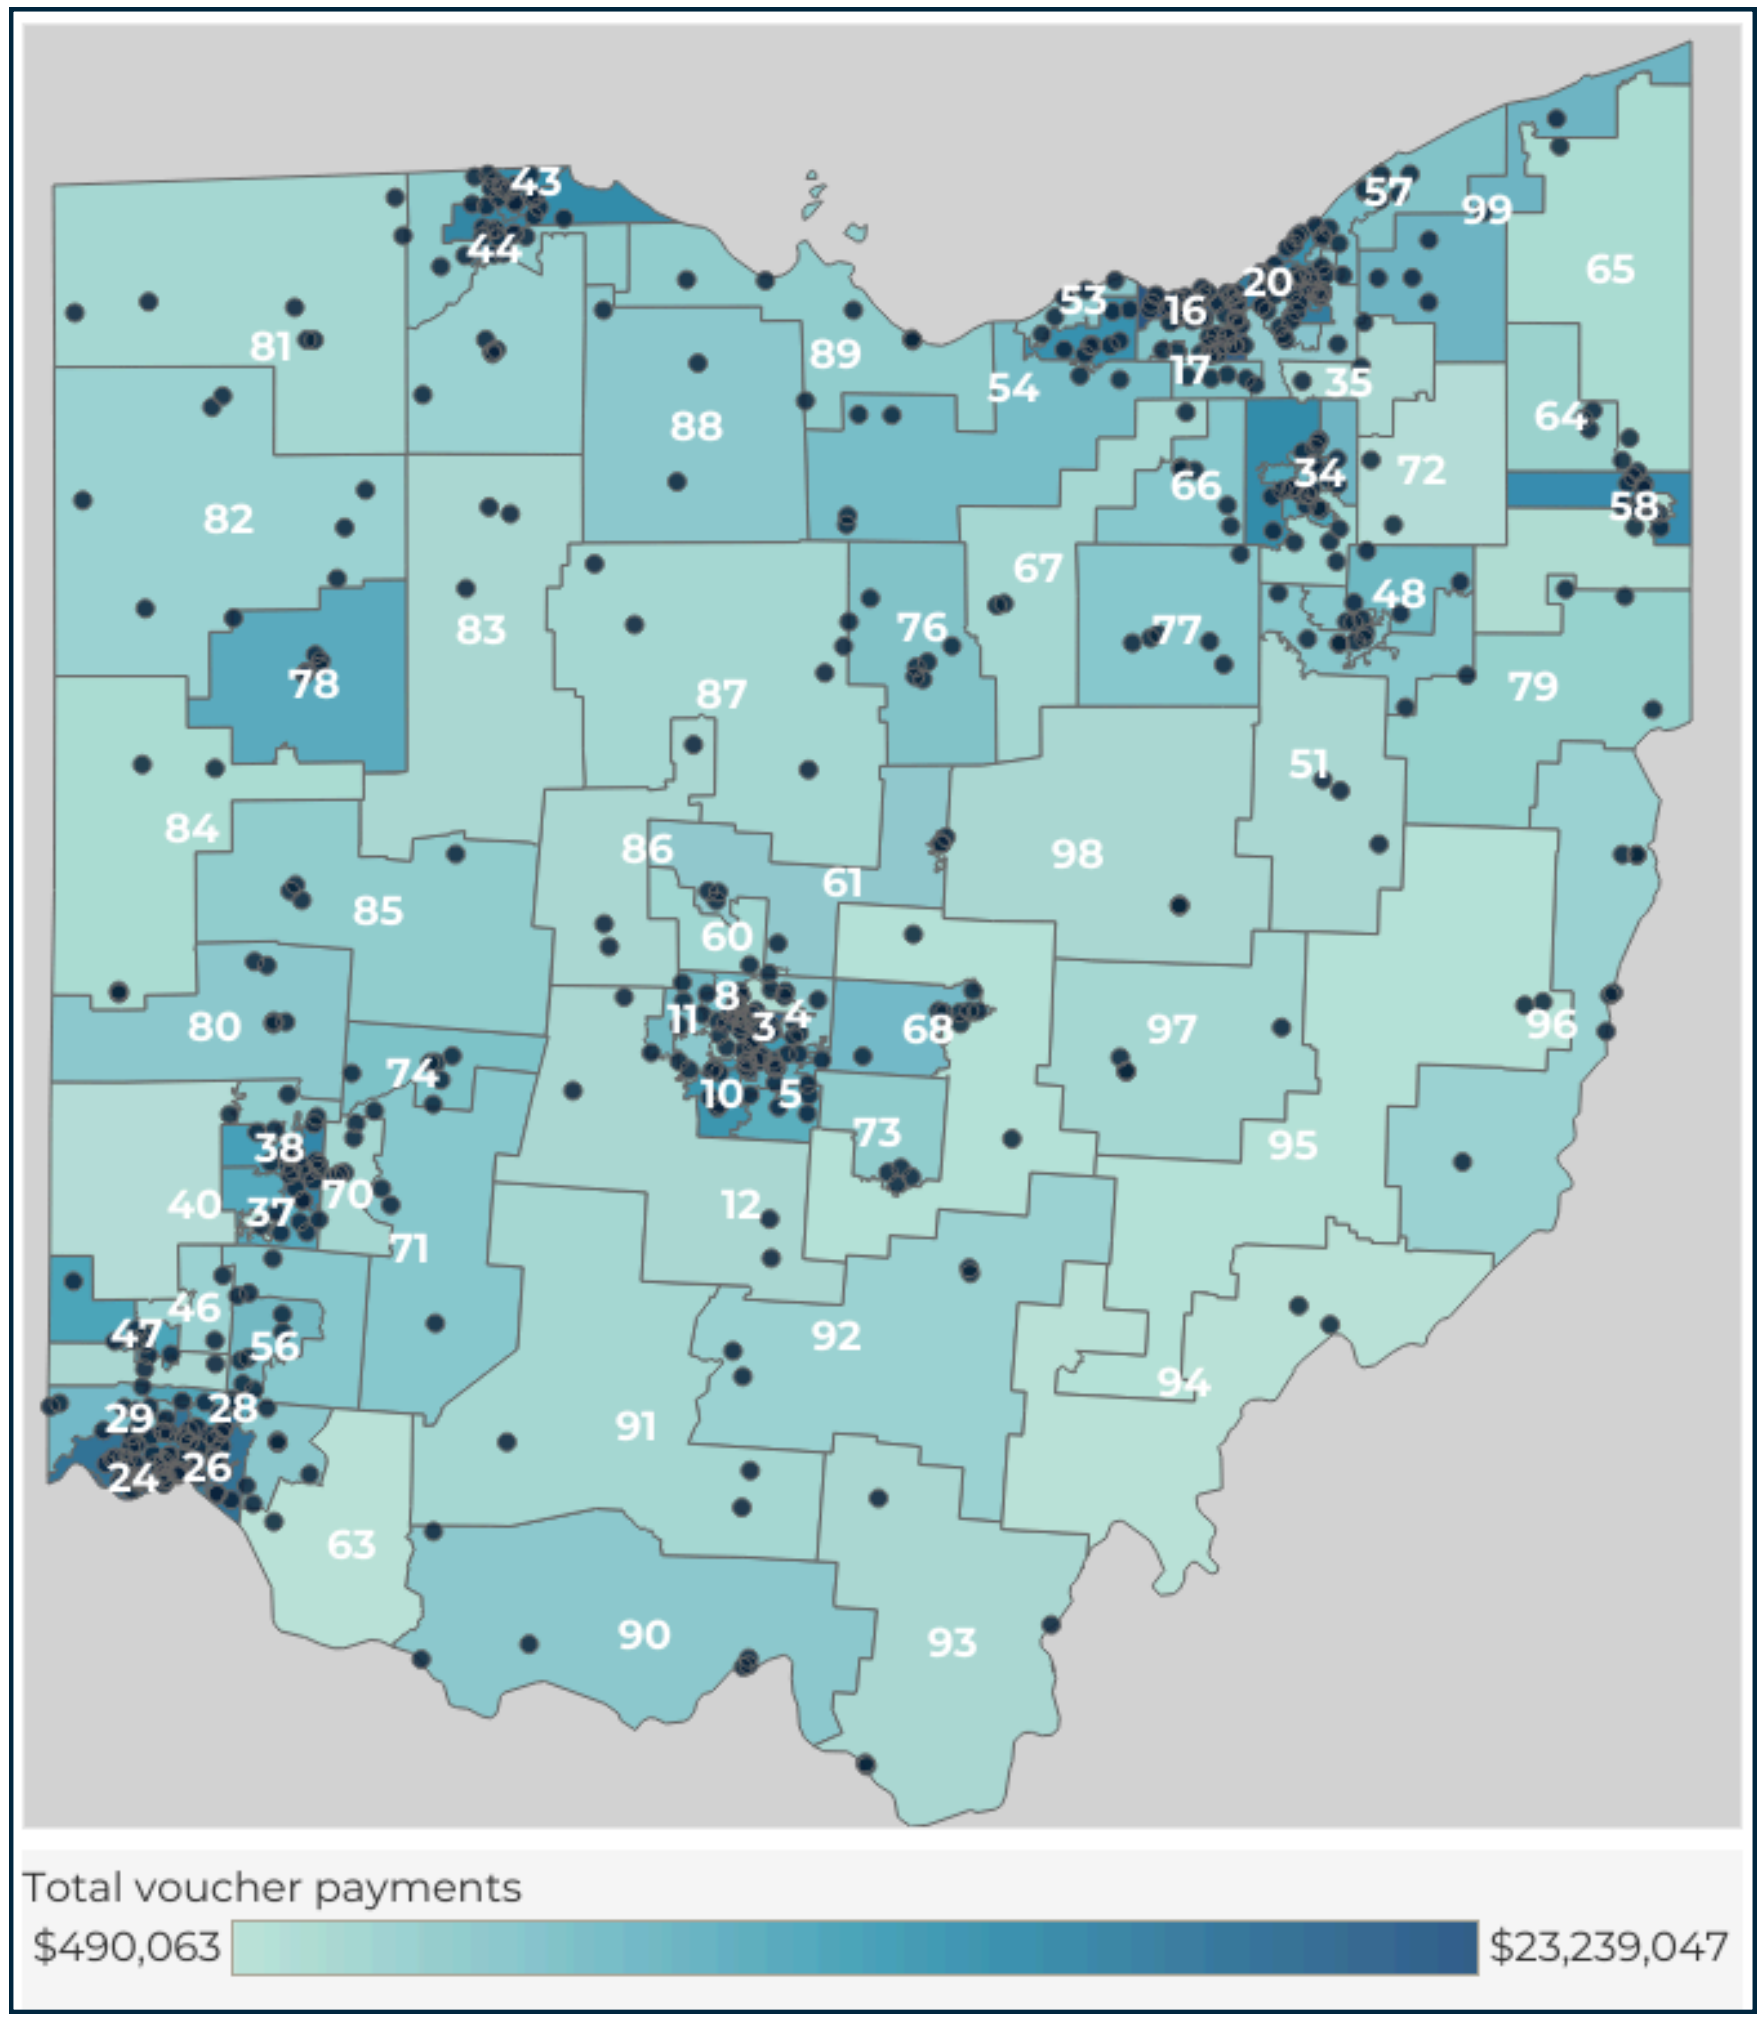
Email them at Rep16@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3350

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 17

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 17 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,814

voucher students.

In District 17 there are 16

public schools attended by 14,674

students.

Contact Representative Dovilla and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

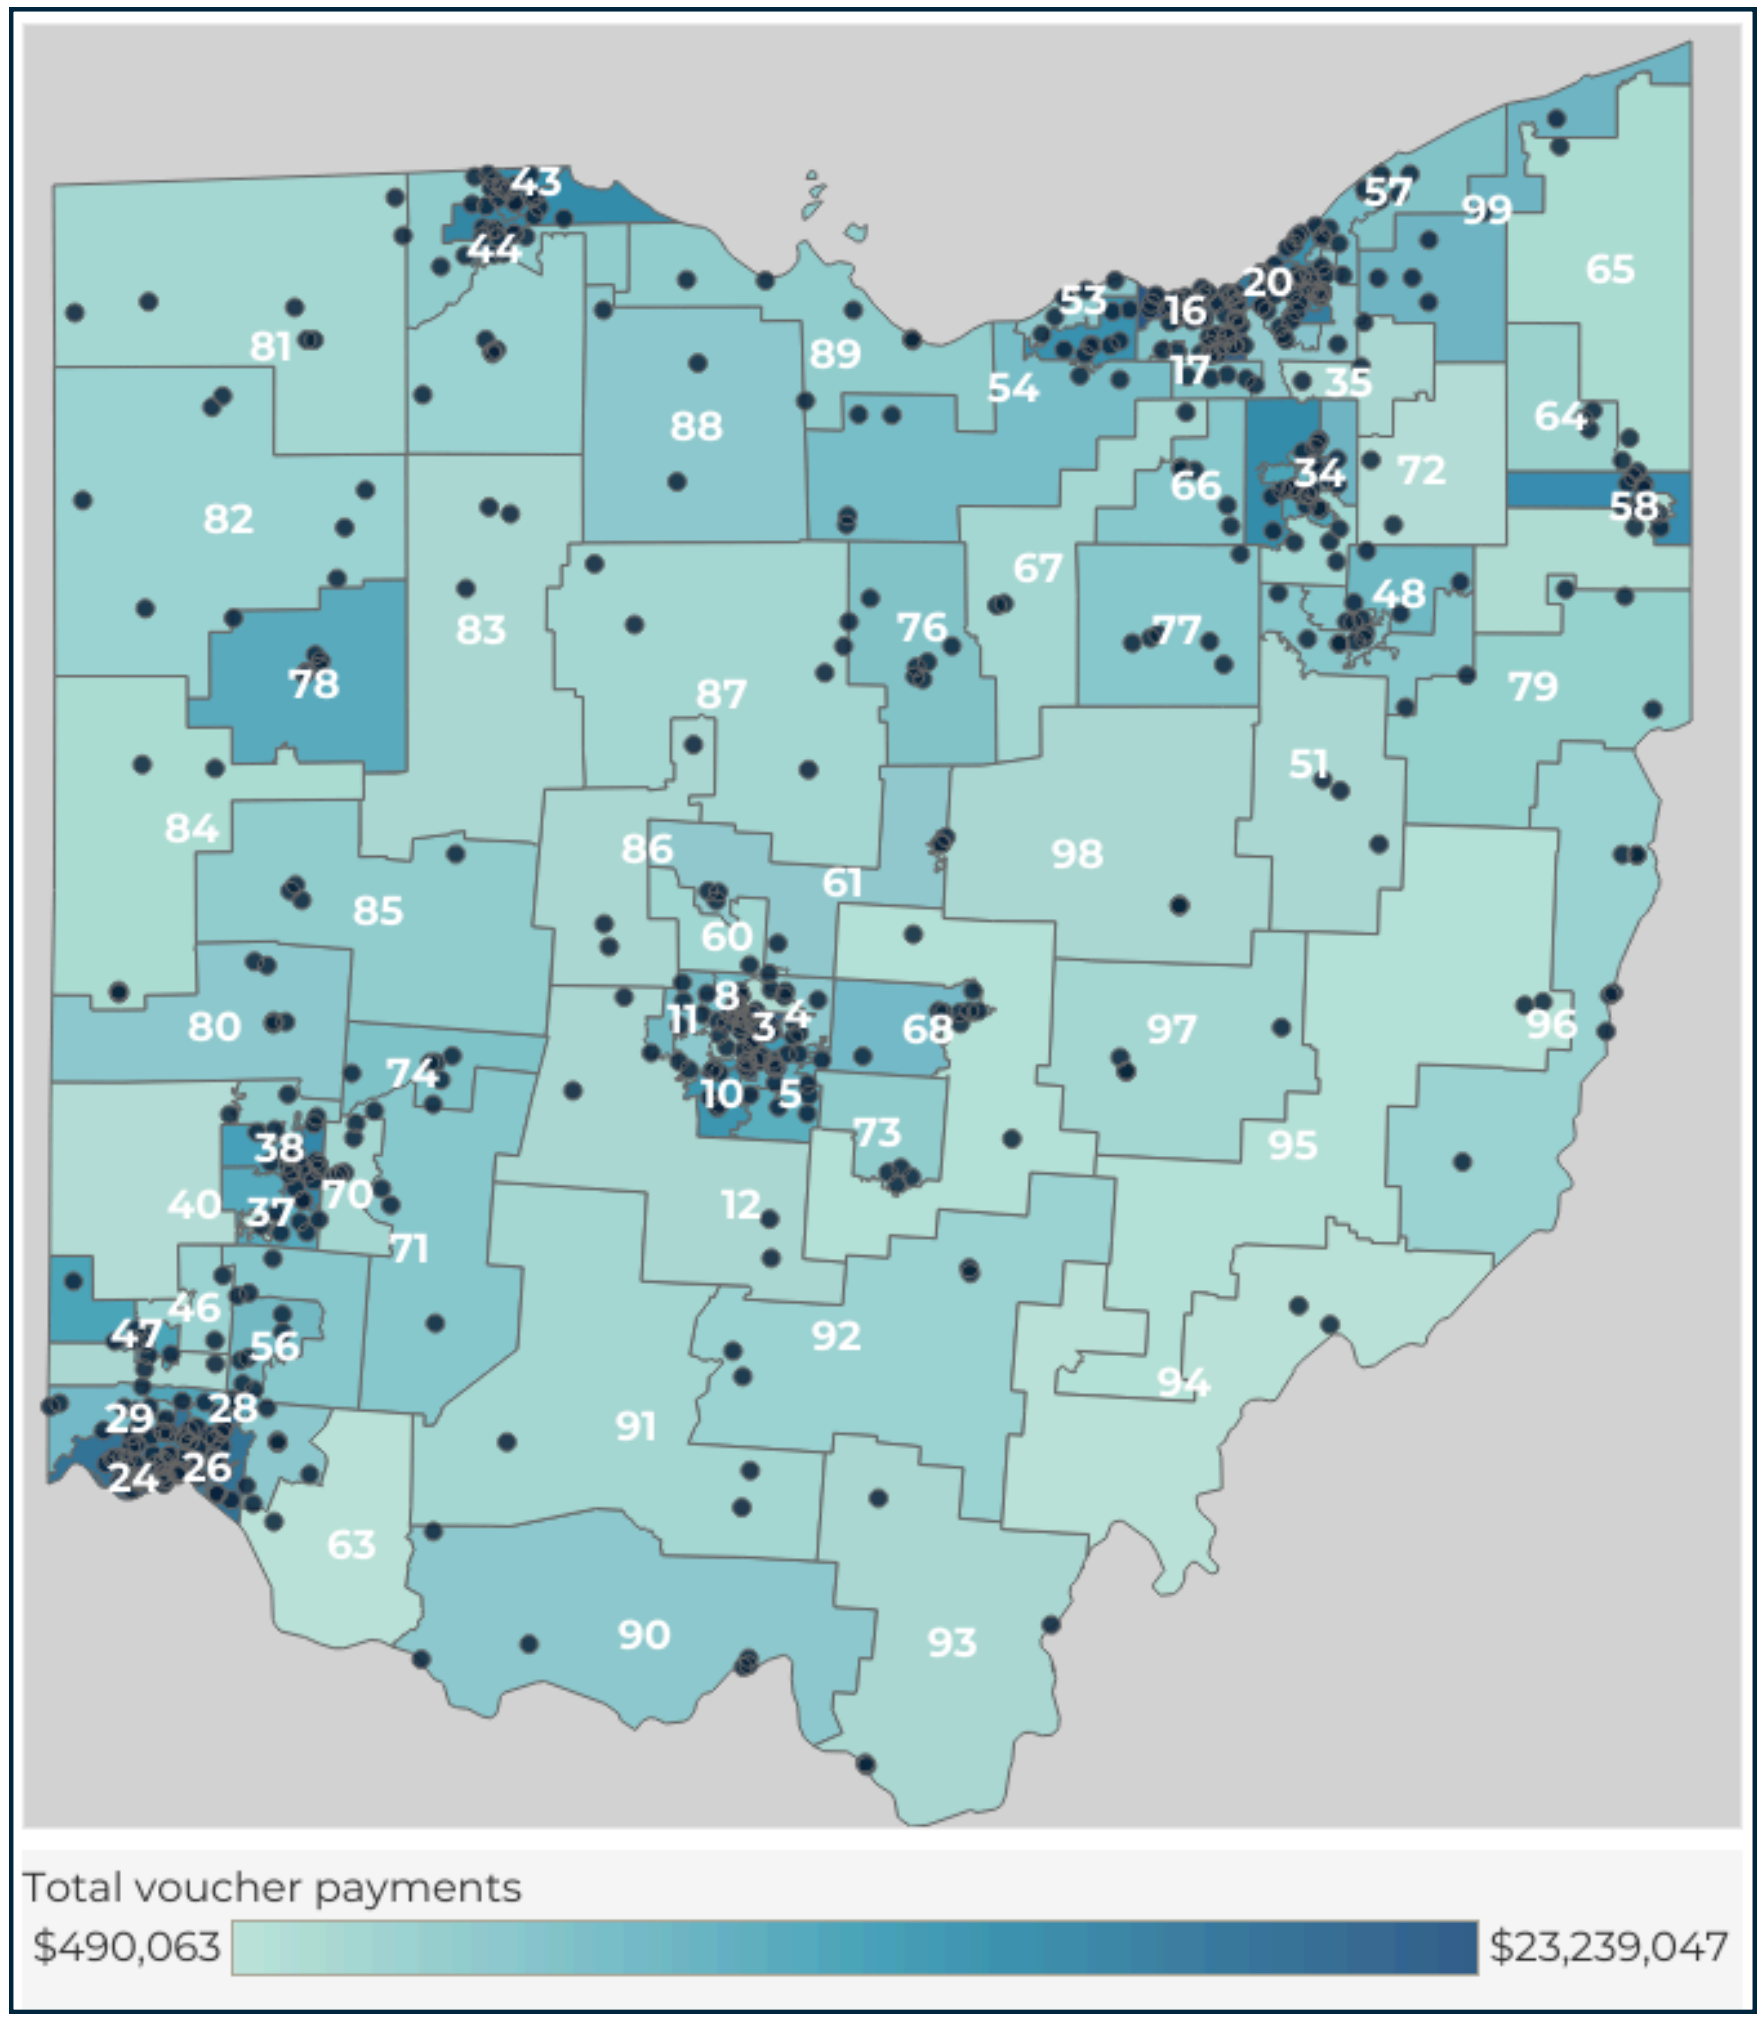
Email them at rep17@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-4895

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 18

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 18 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 2,722

voucher students.

In District 18 there are 31 public schools attended by 13,376

students.

Contact Representative Brent and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

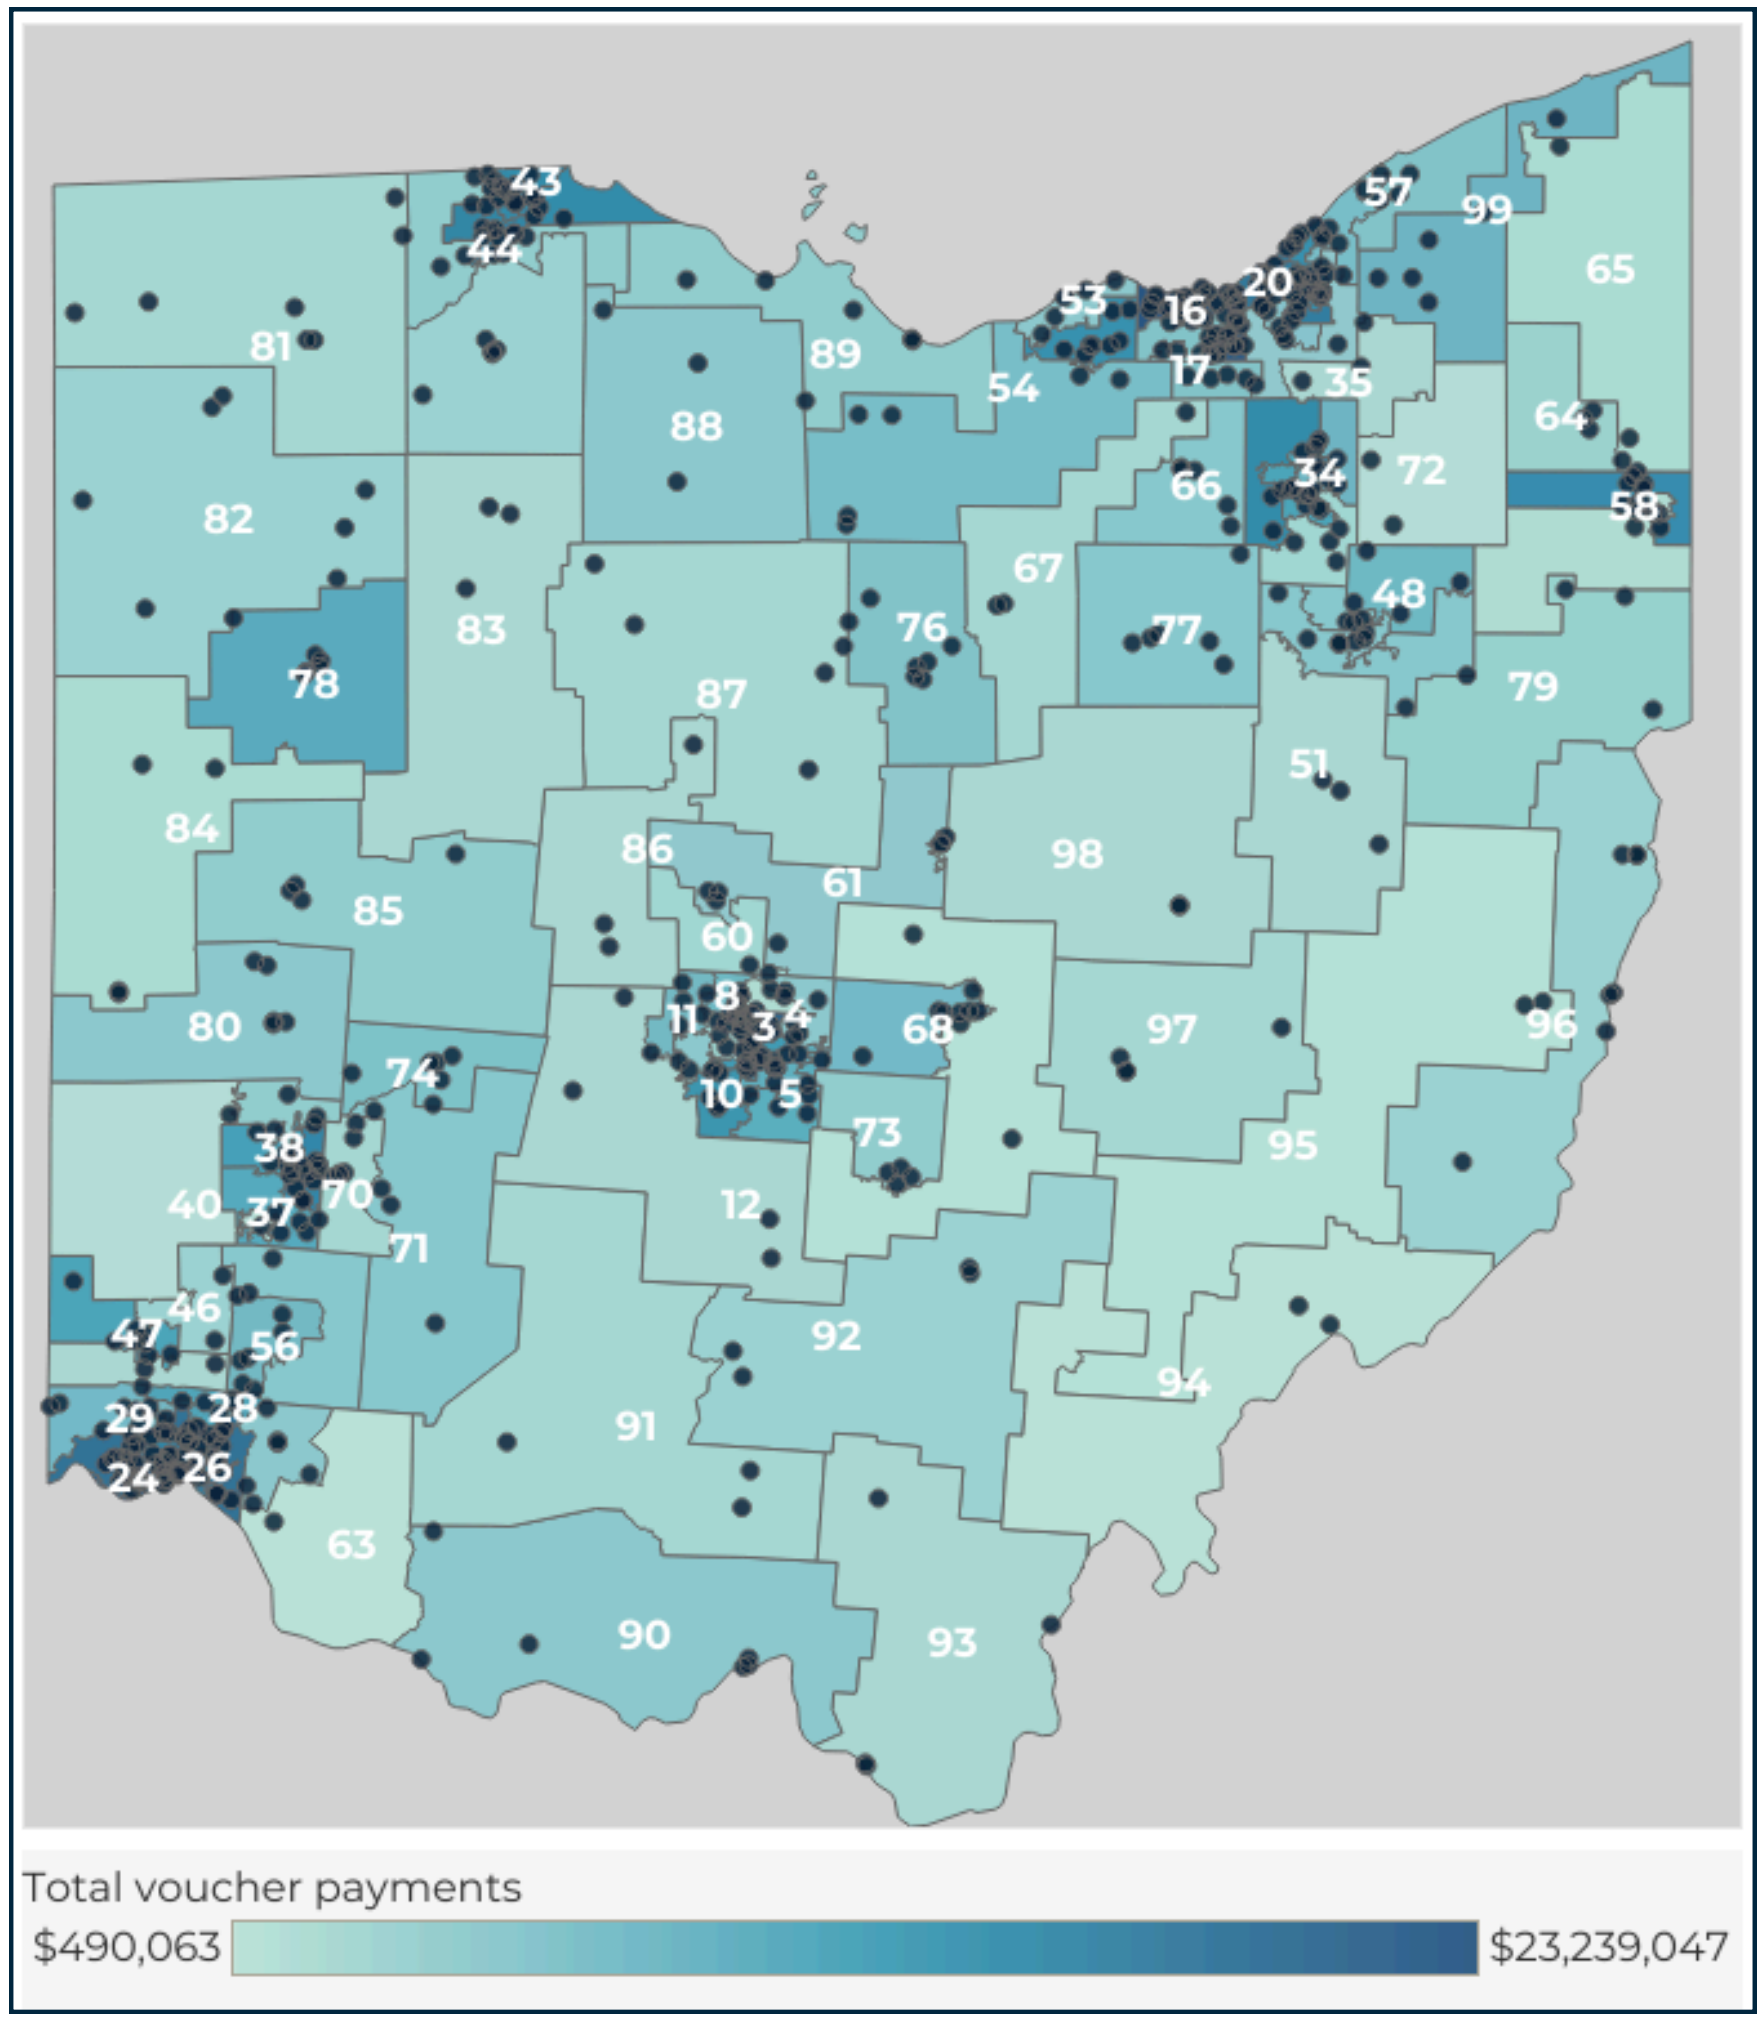
Email them at rep18@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1408

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 19

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 19 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 1,012

voucher students.

In District 19 there are 24

public schools attended by 14,047

students.

Contact Representative Robinson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

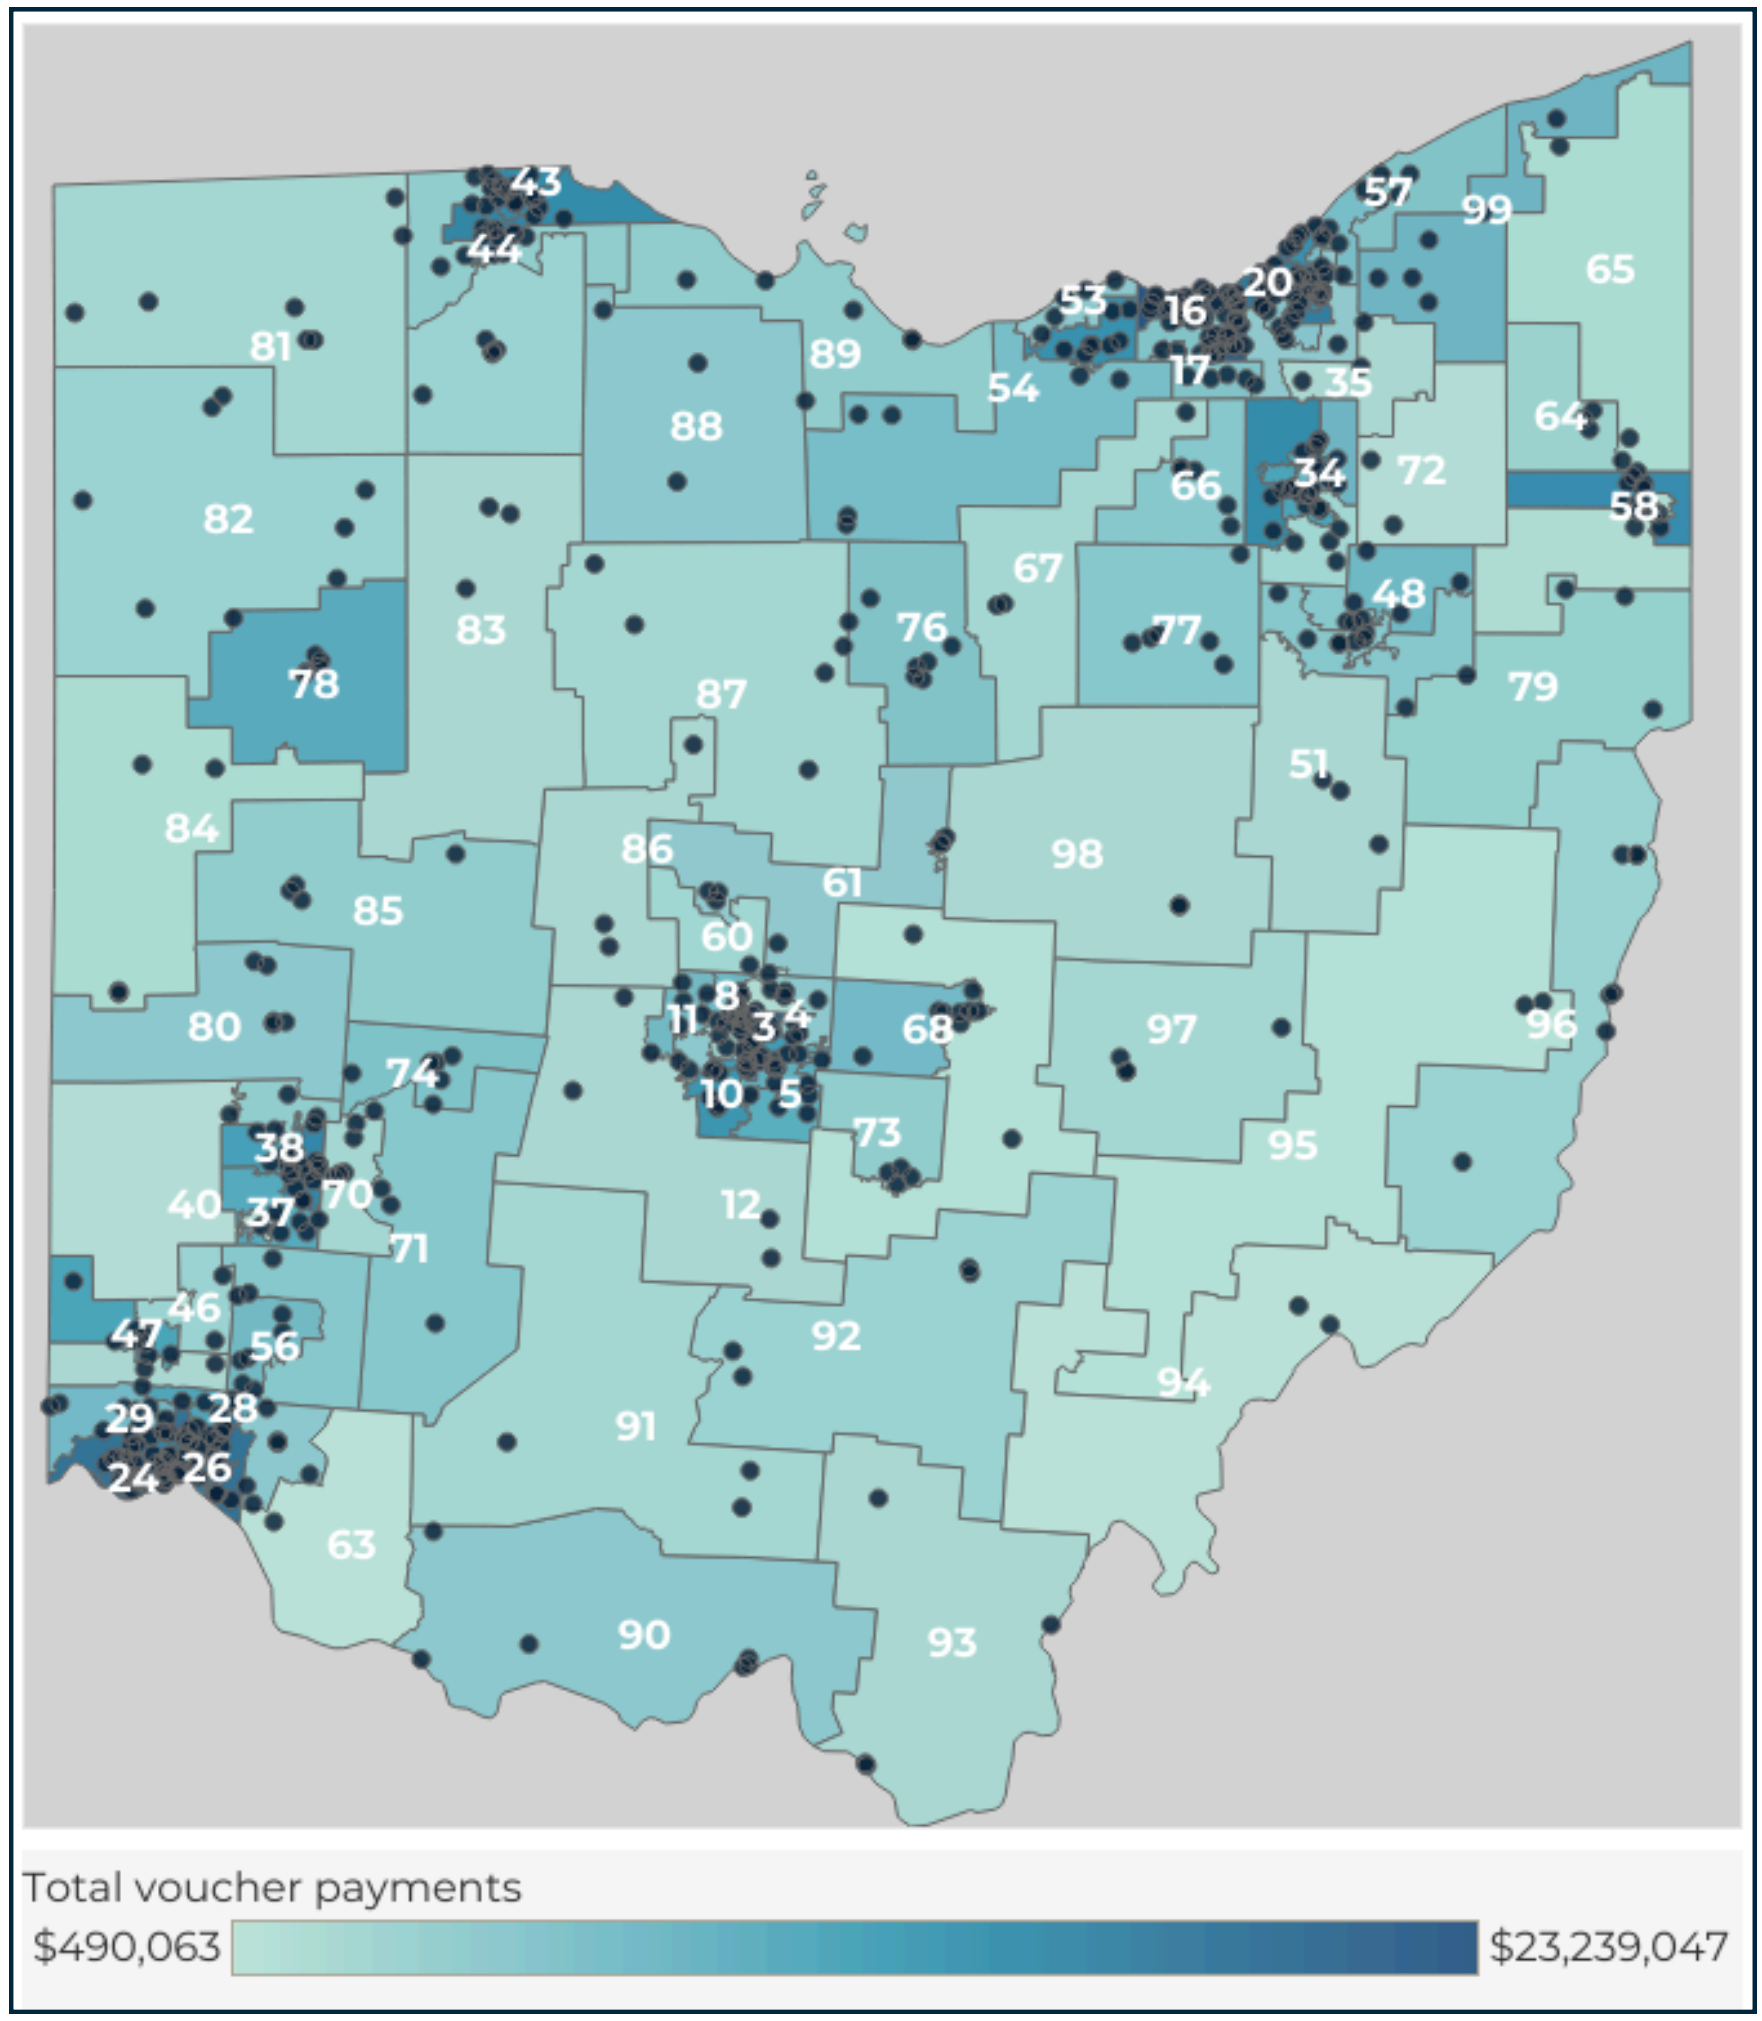
Email them at rep19@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6041

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 2

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 2 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 1,451

voucher students.

In District 2 there are 21

public schools attended by 10,351

students.

Contact Representative Humphrey and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

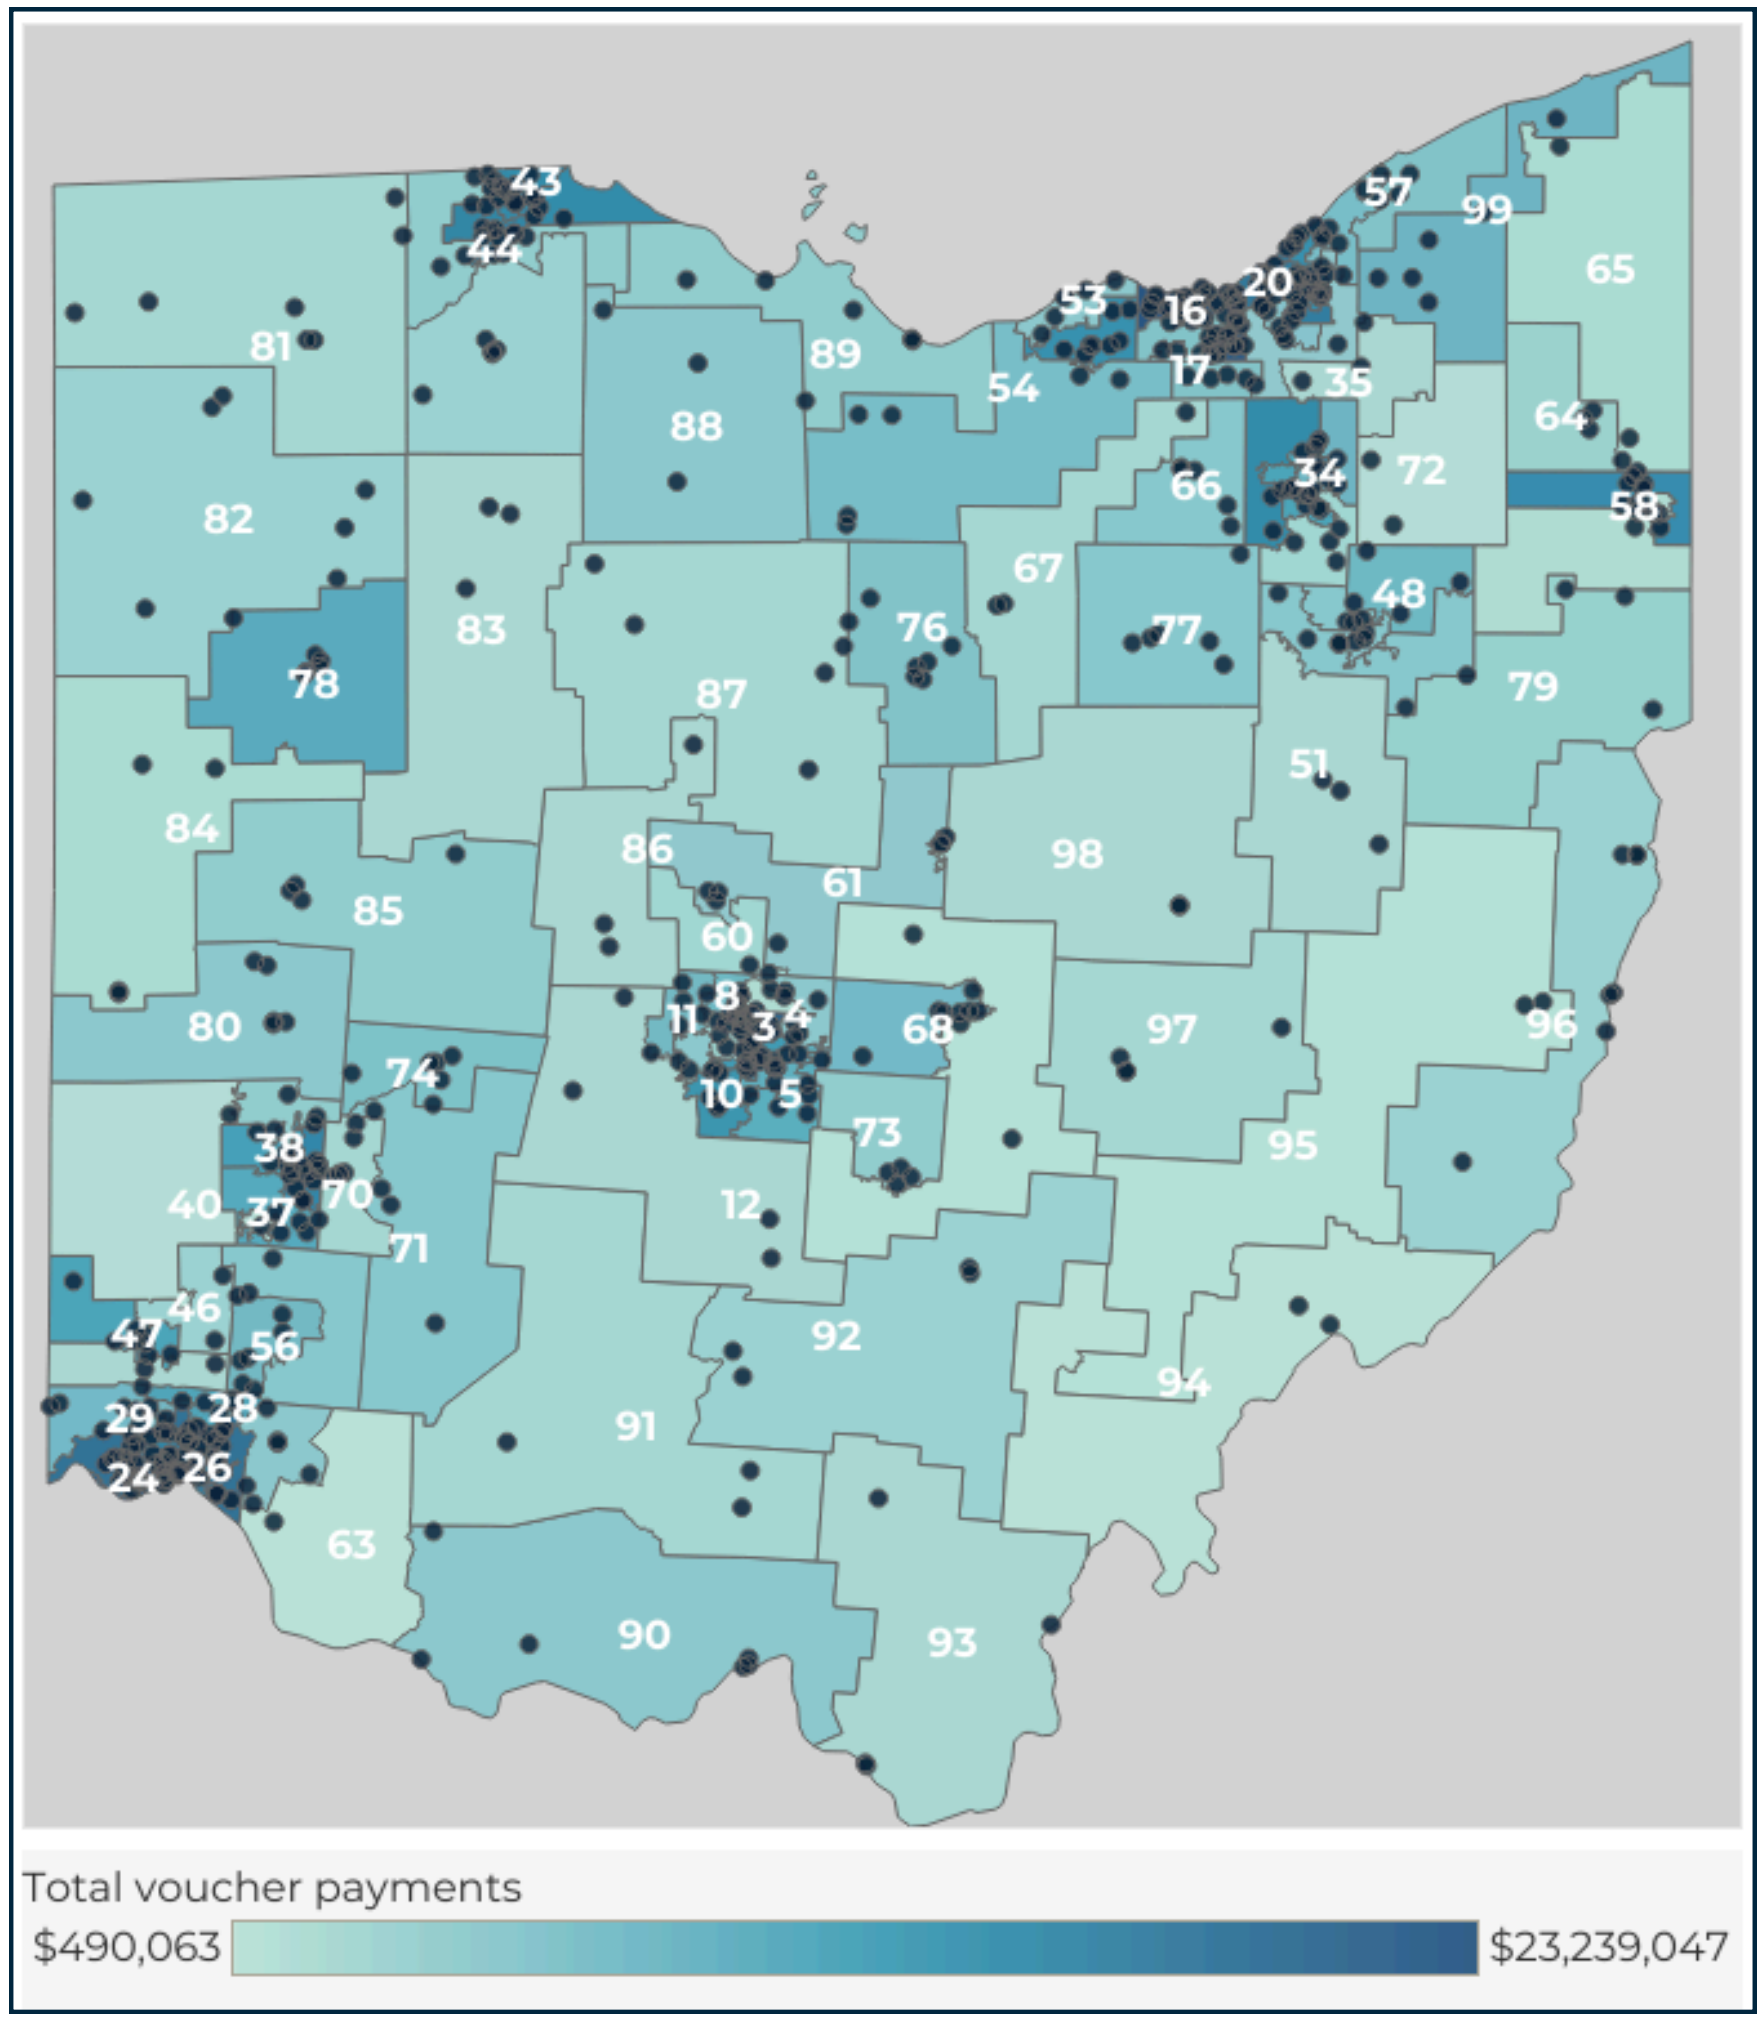
Email them at rep02@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8010

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 20

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 20 there are

14

private voucher schools attended by 2,747

voucher students.

In District 20 there are 33

public schools attended by 9,635

students.

Contact Representative Upchurch and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

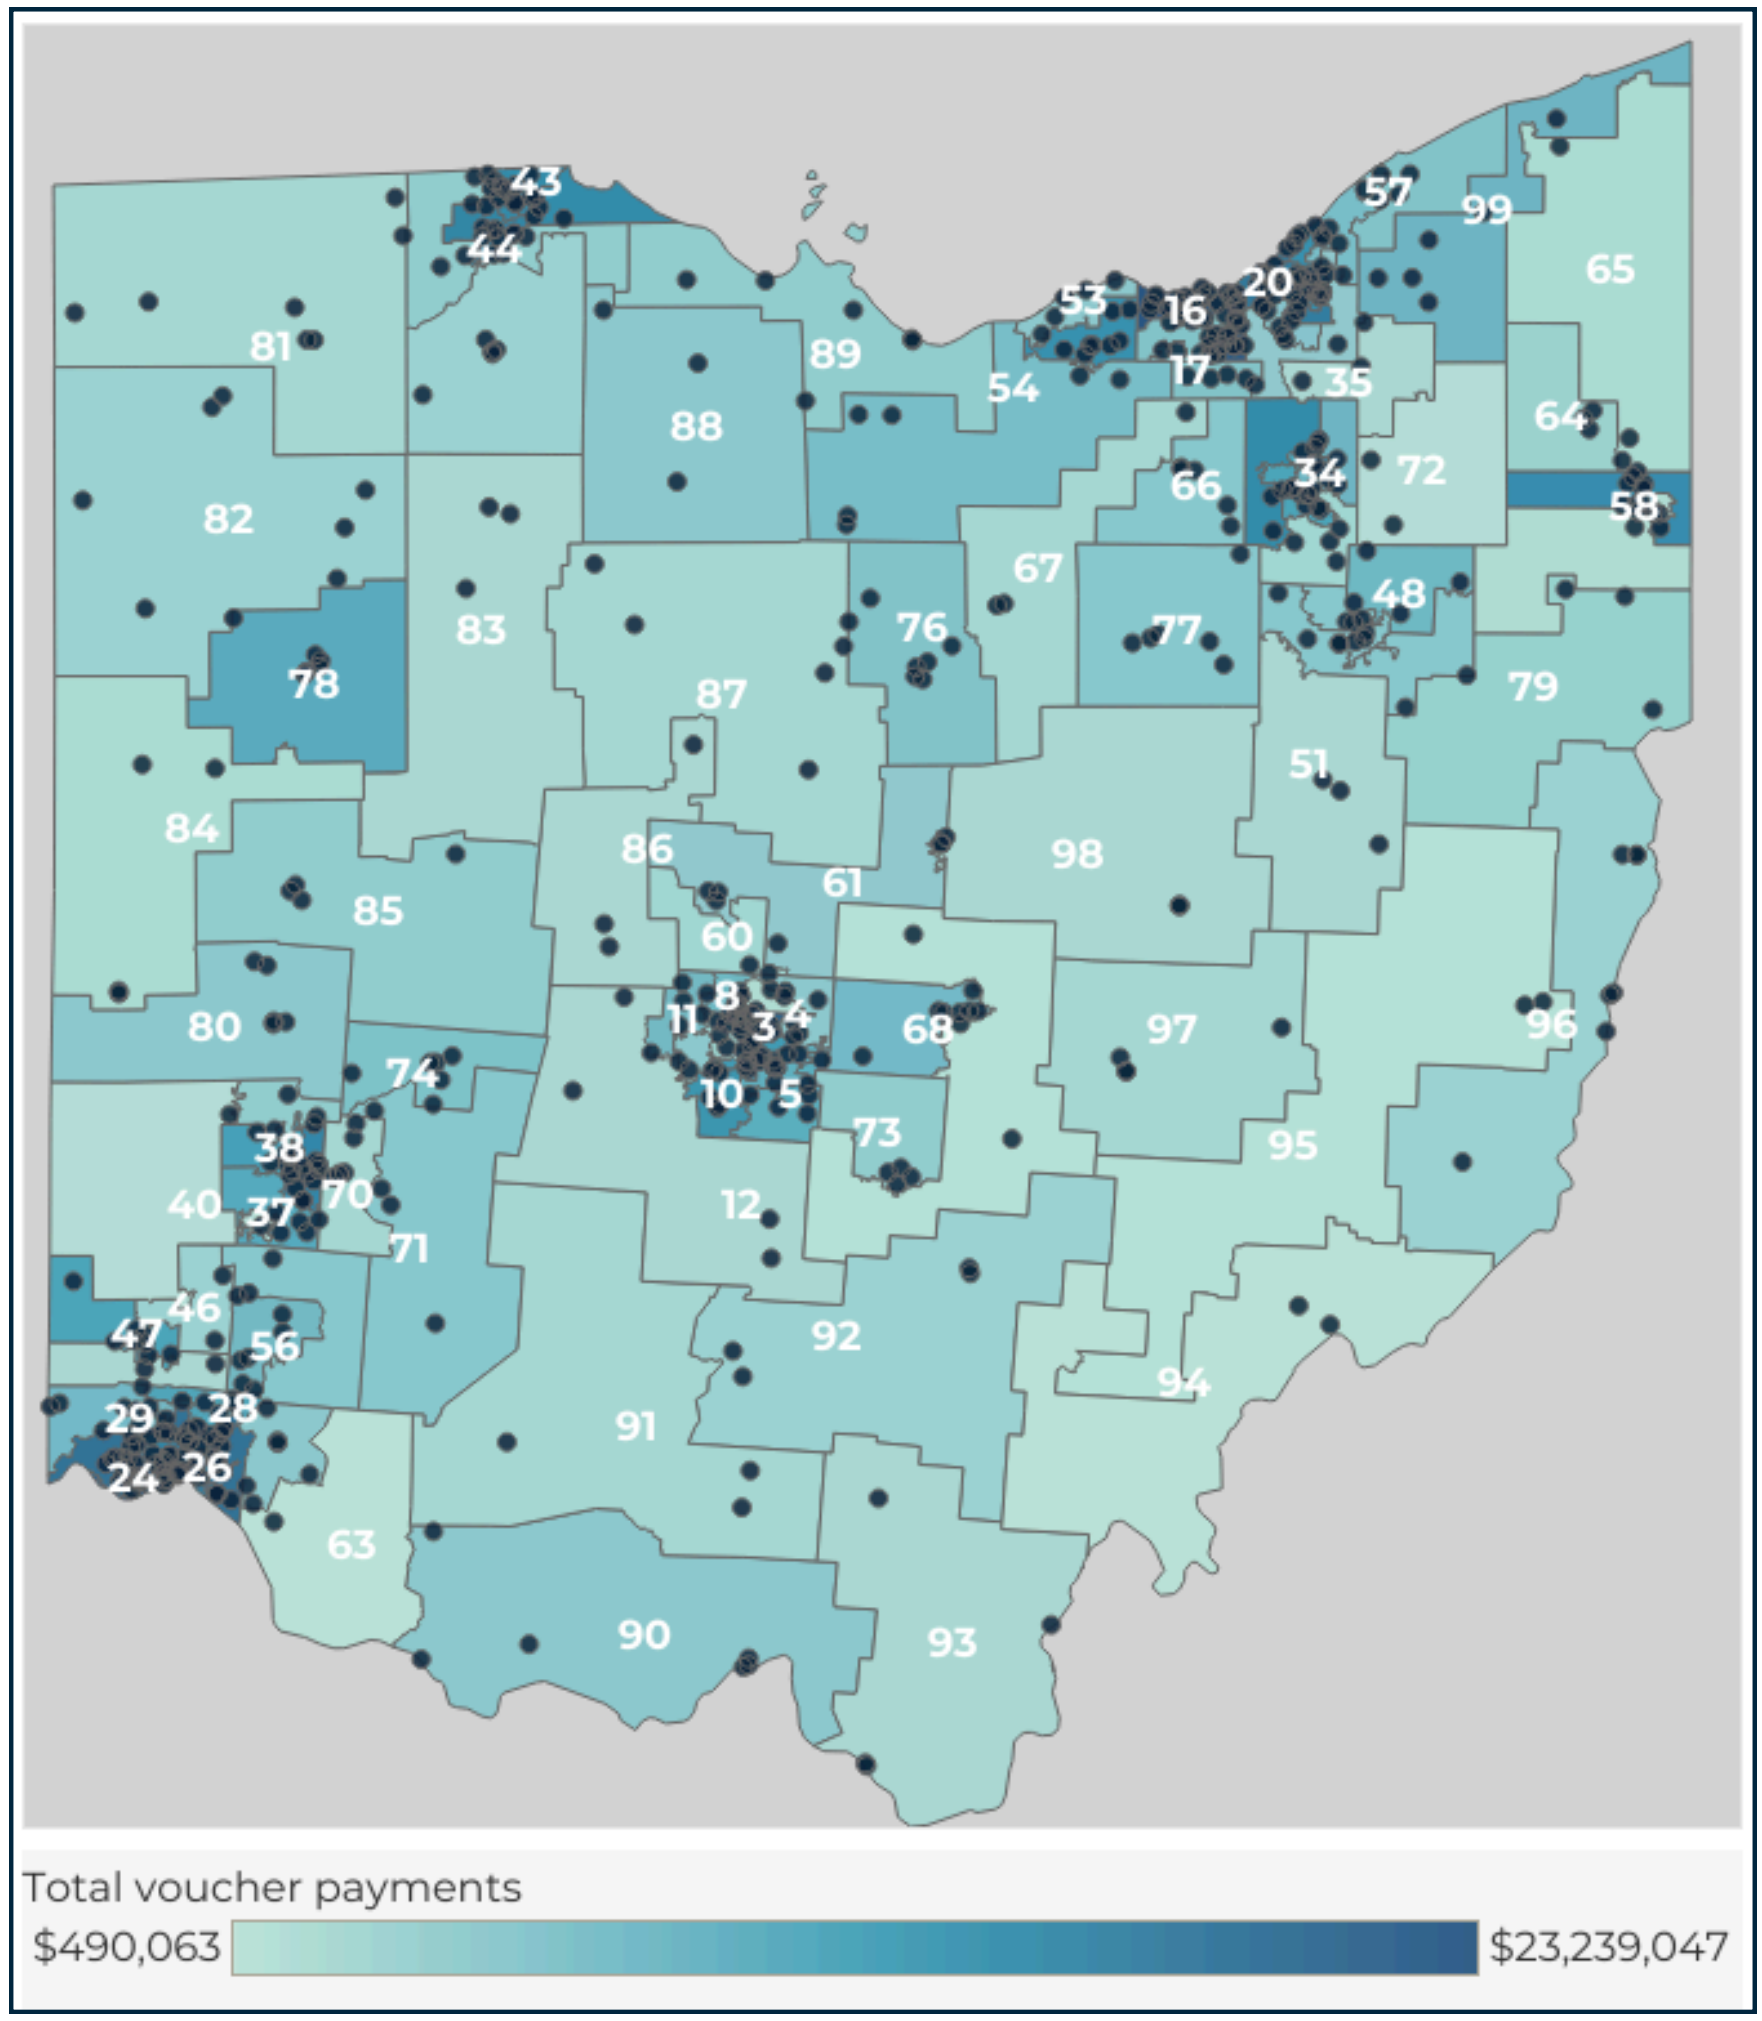
Email them at rep20@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-7954

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 21

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 21 there are

10

private voucher schools attended by 2,325

voucher students.

In District 21 there are 21

public schools attended by 9,778

students.

Contact Representative Synenberg and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

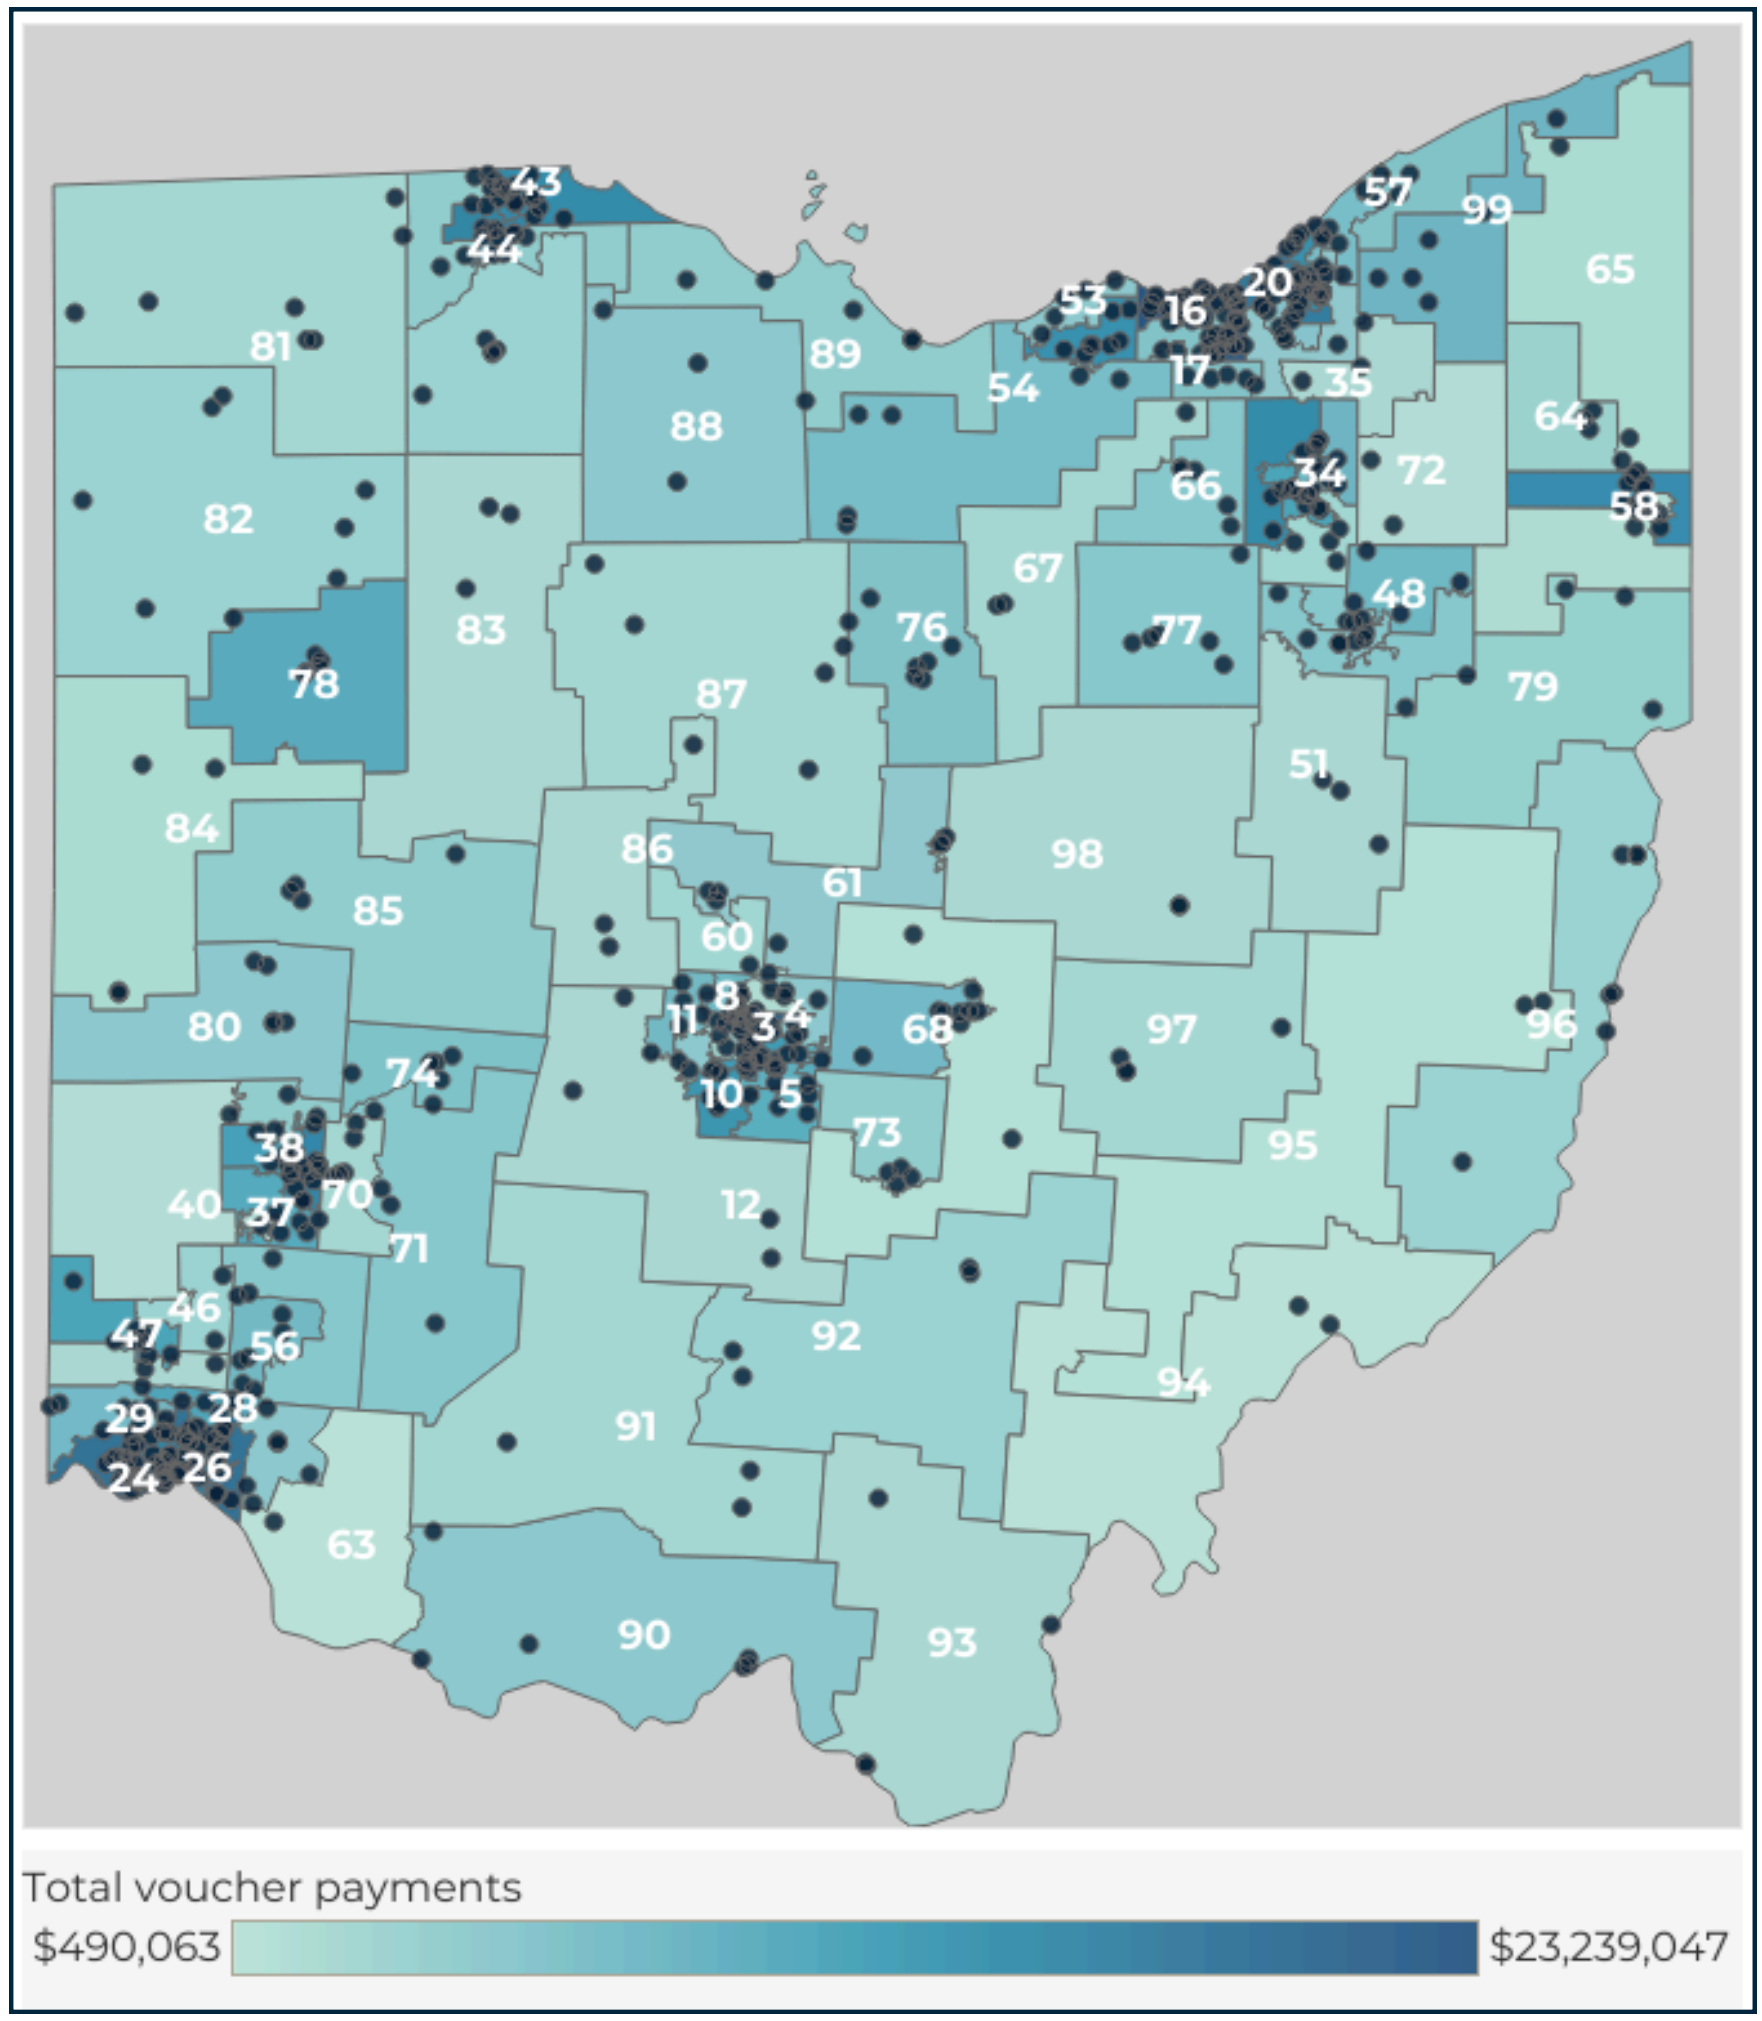
Email them at rep21@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5079

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 22

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 22 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 796

voucher students.

In District 22 there are 27

public schools attended by 12,456

students.

Contact Representative Brewer and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

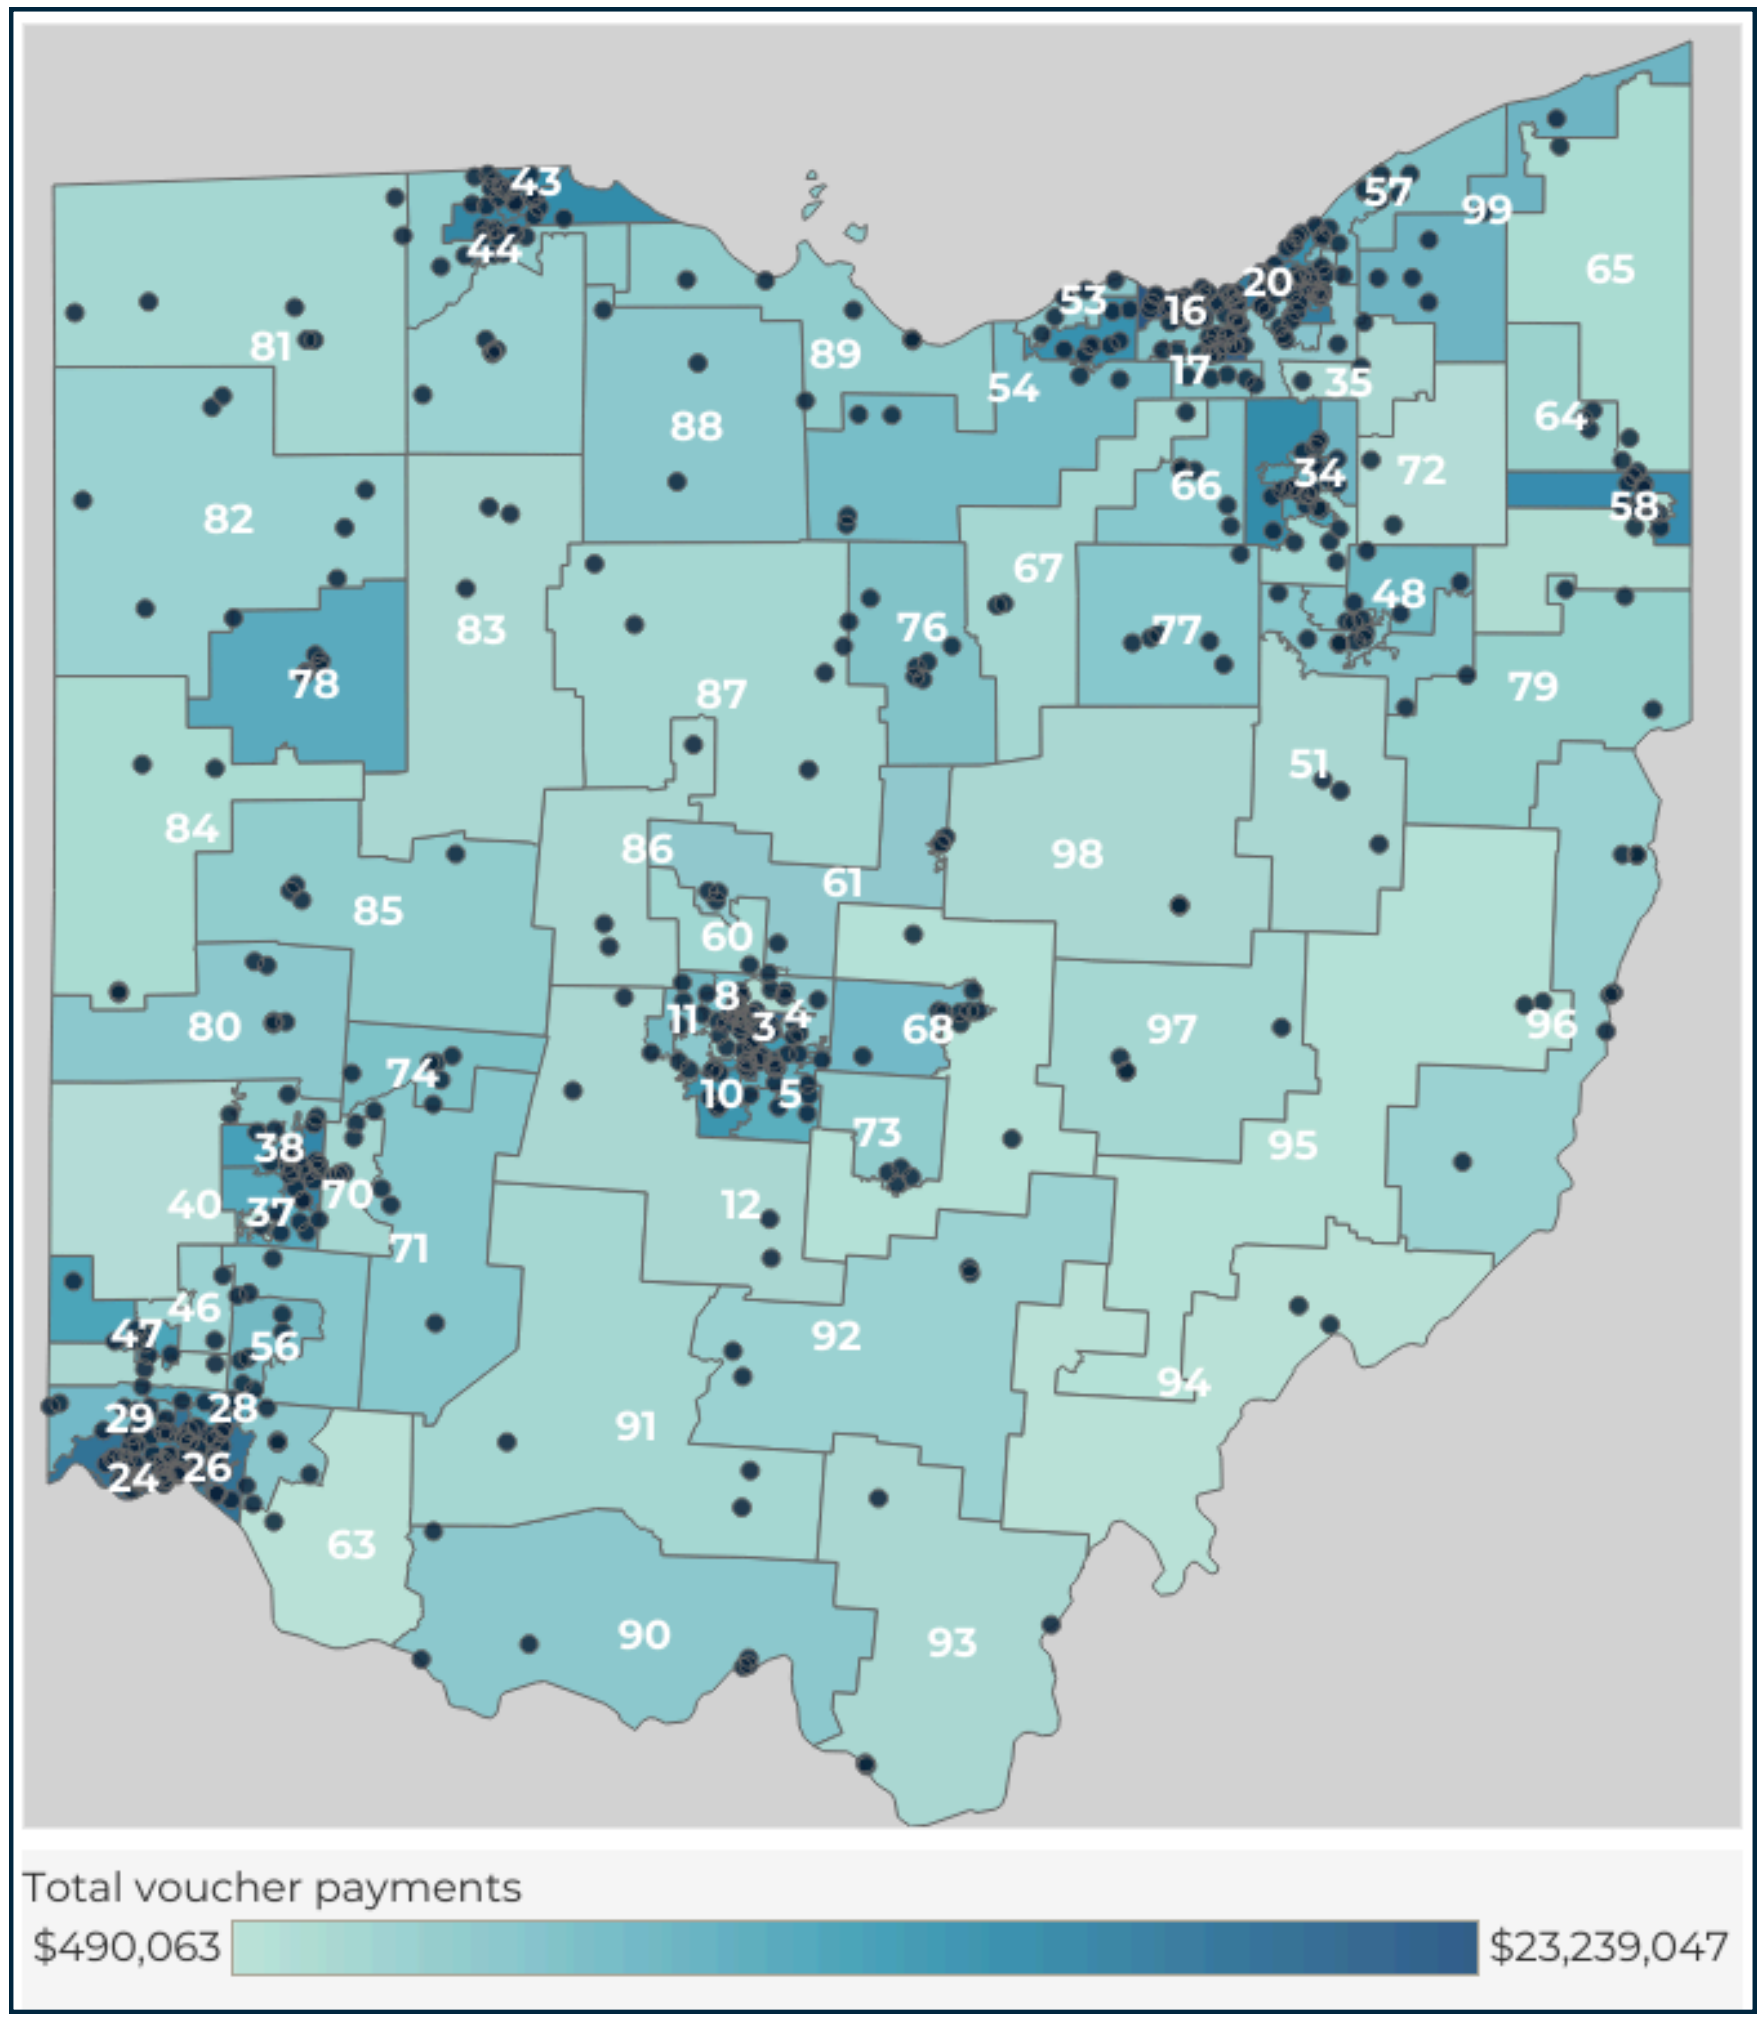
Email them at rep22@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1414

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 23

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 23 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,434

voucher students.

In District 23 there are 26

public schools attended by 15,425

students.

Contact Representative Troy and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

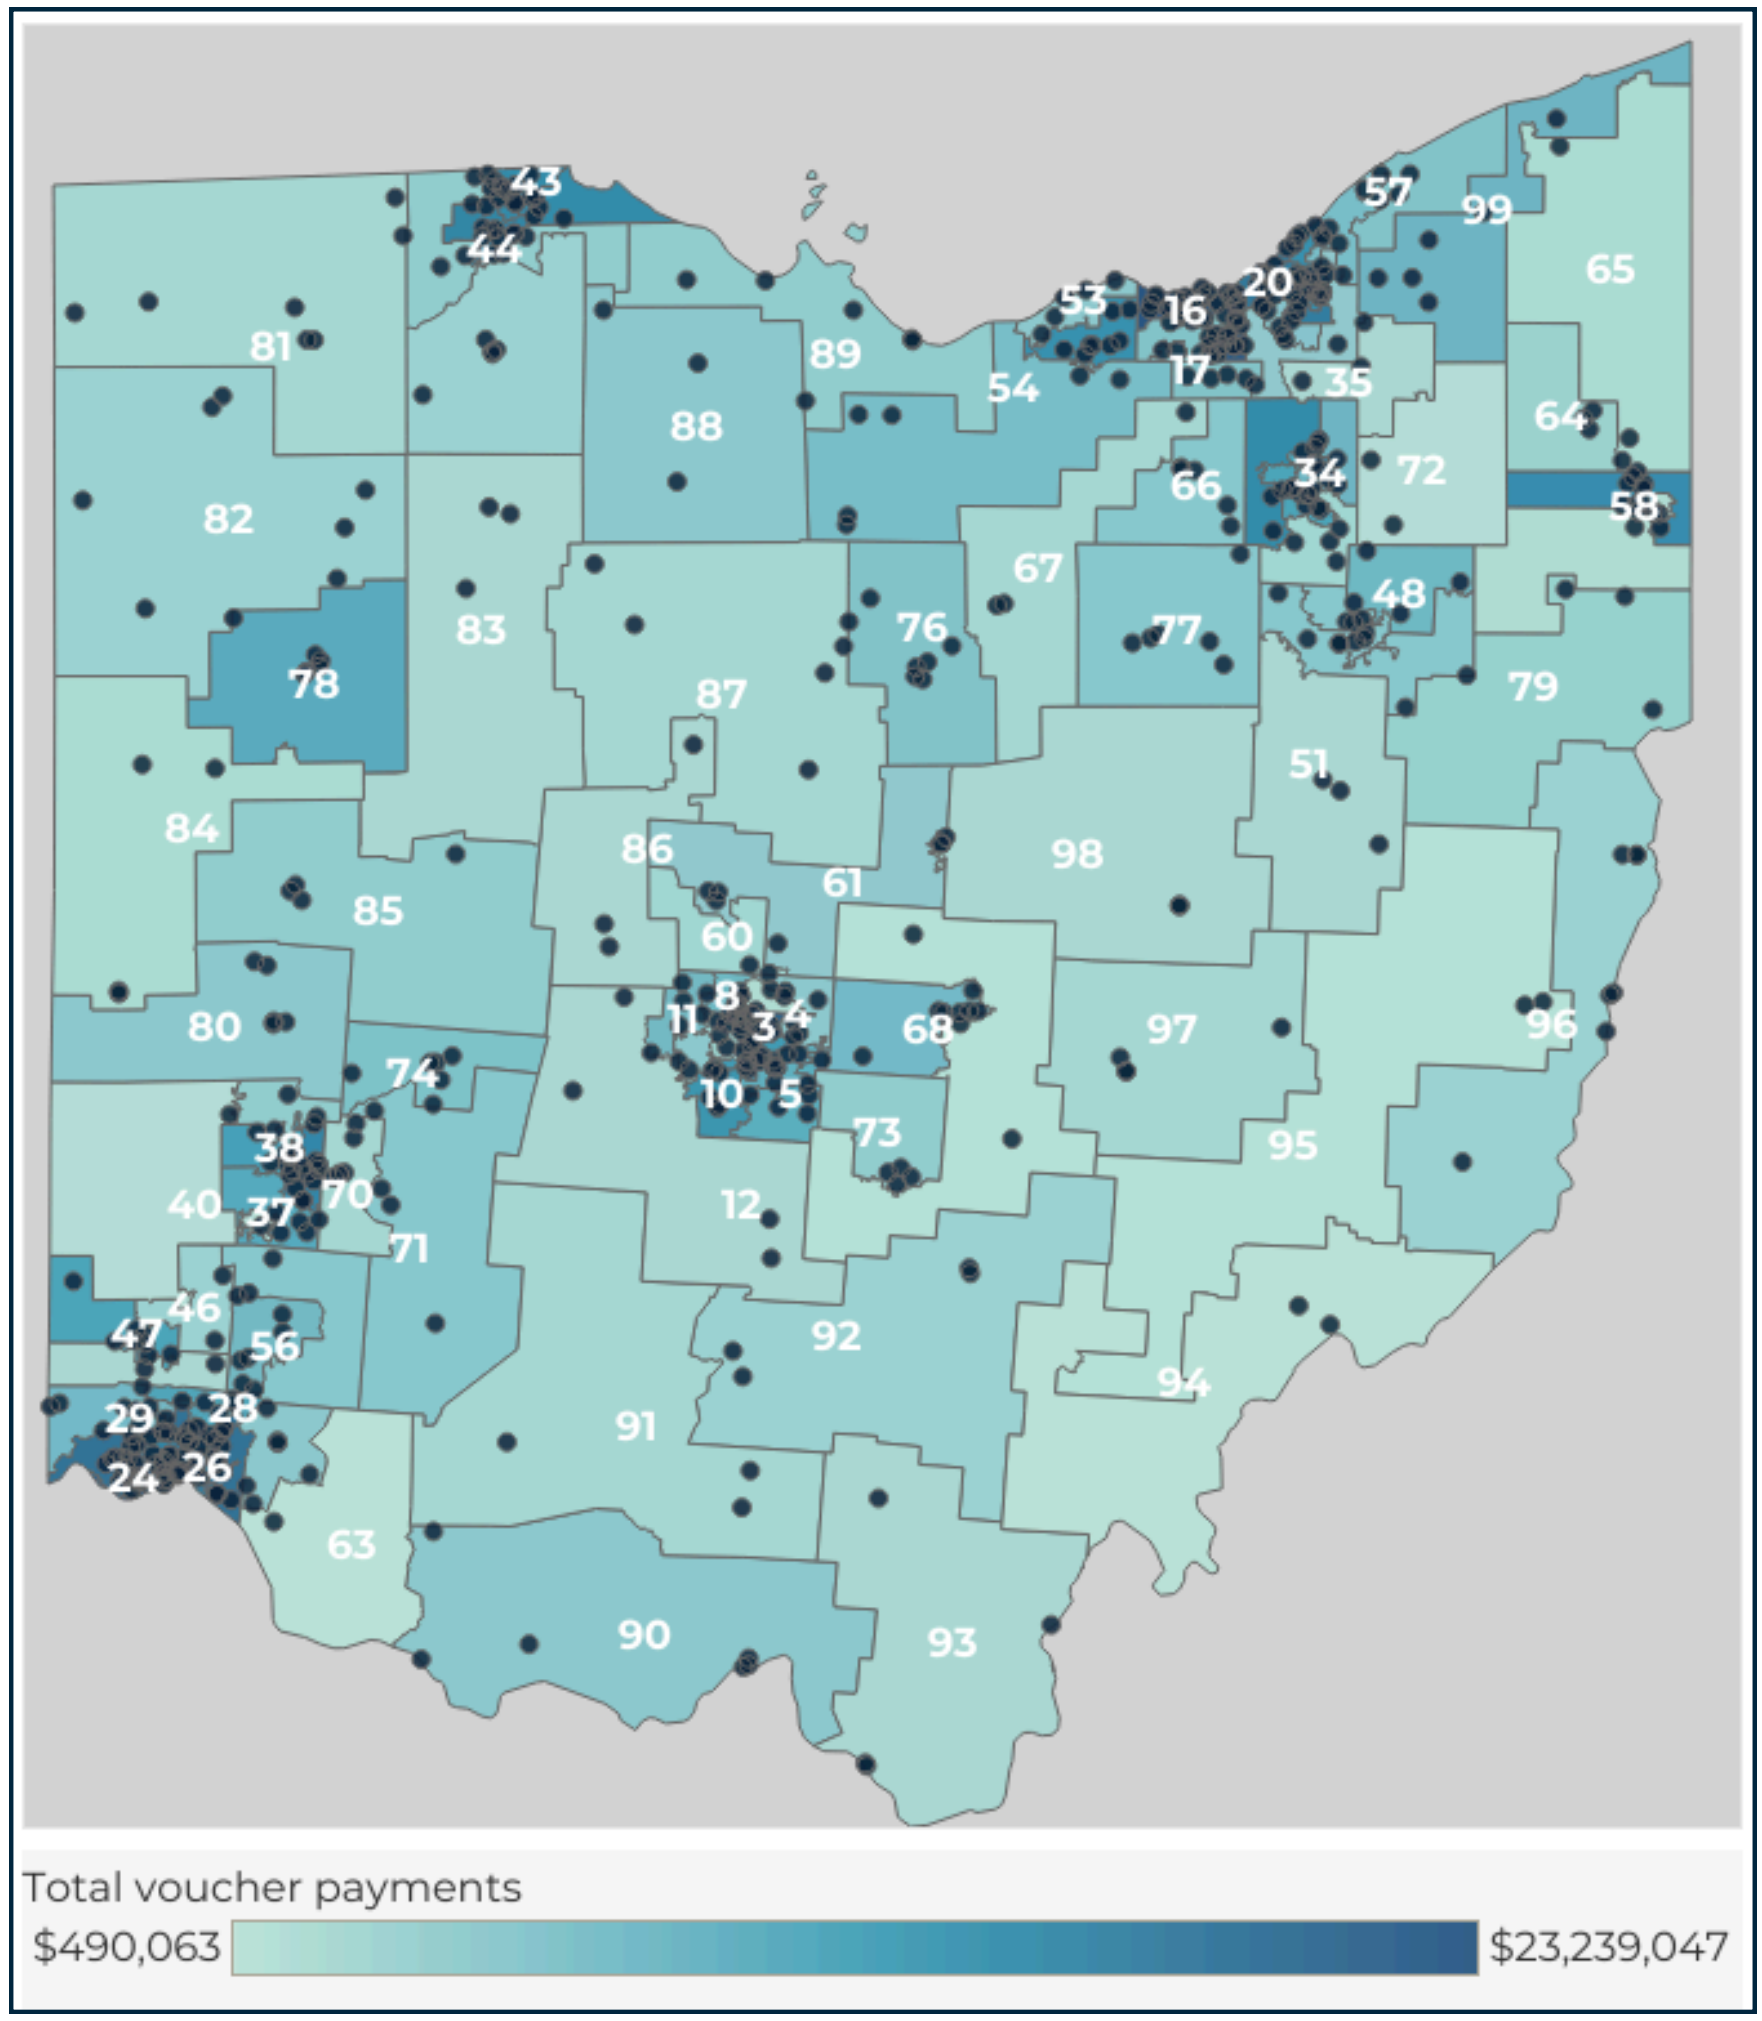
Email them at rep23@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-7251

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 24

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 24 there are

13

private voucher schools attended by 3,422

voucher students.

In District 24 there are 22

public schools attended by 12,786

students.

Contact Representative Isaacsohn and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

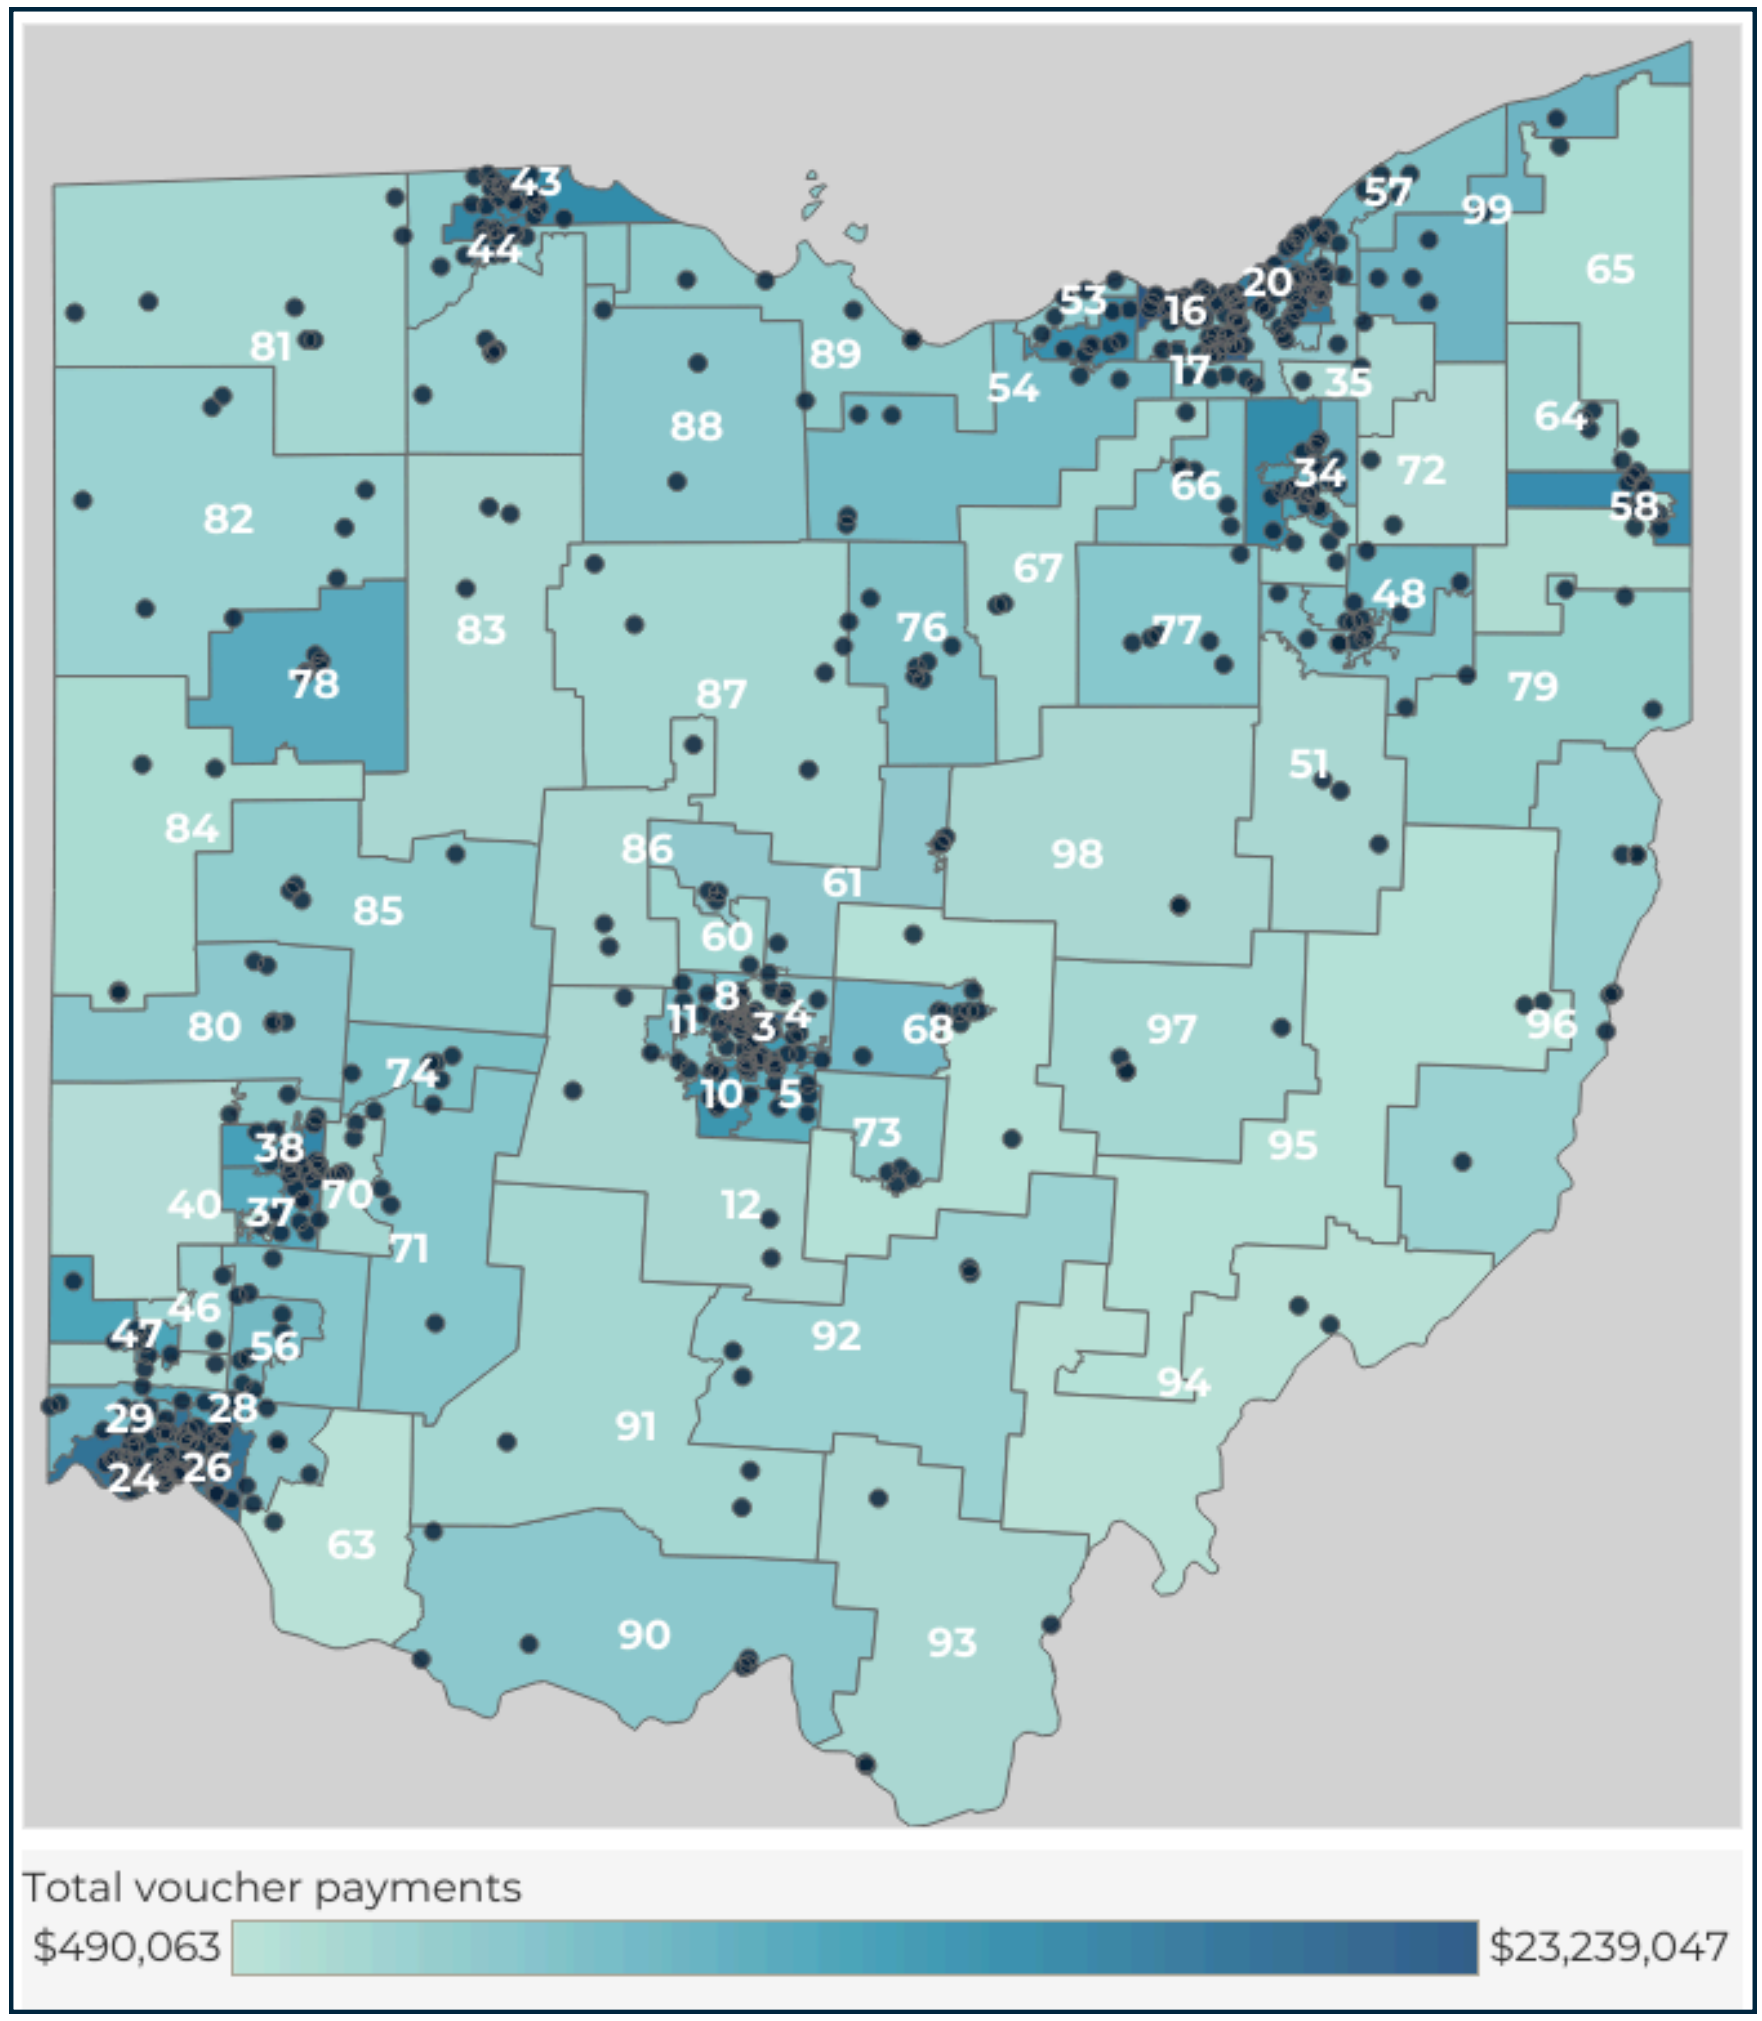
Email them at rep24@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5786

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 25

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 25 there are

12

private voucher schools attended by 2,437

voucher students.

In District 25 there are 21

public schools attended by 8,299

students.

Contact Representative Thomas and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

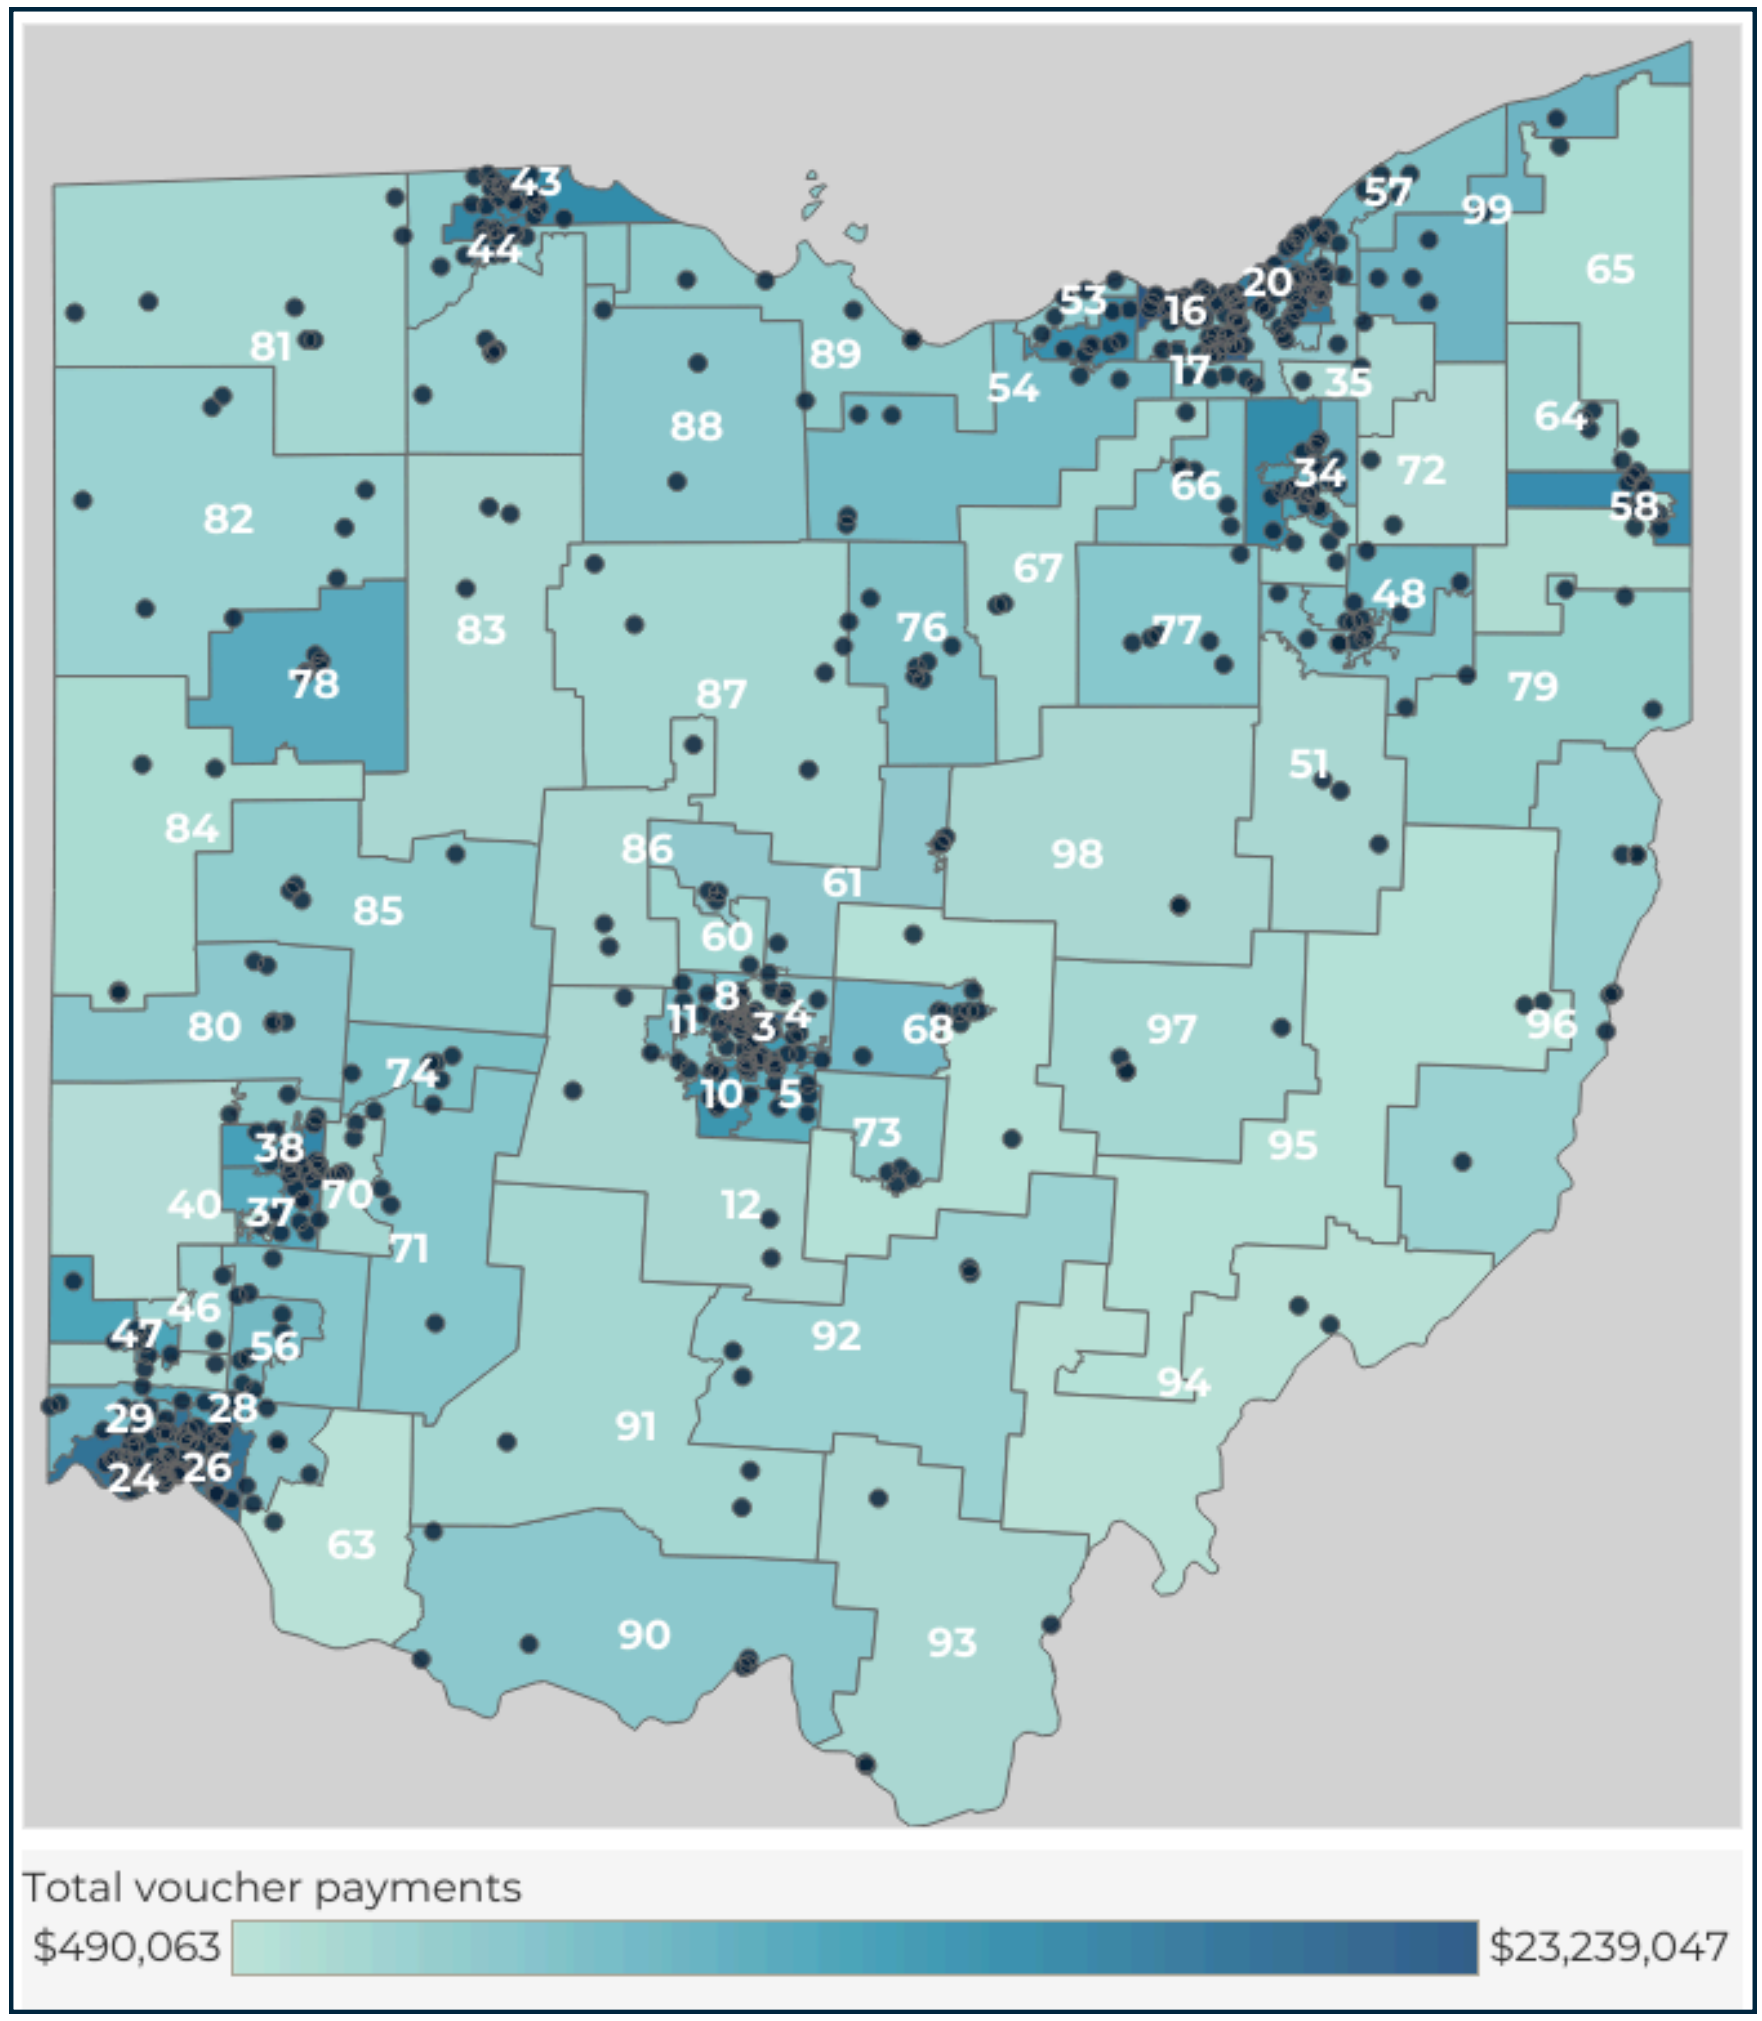
Email them at Rep25@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1645

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 26

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 26 there are

15

private voucher schools attended by 3,519

voucher students.

In District 26 there are 26

public schools attended by 14,072

students.

Contact Representative Denson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

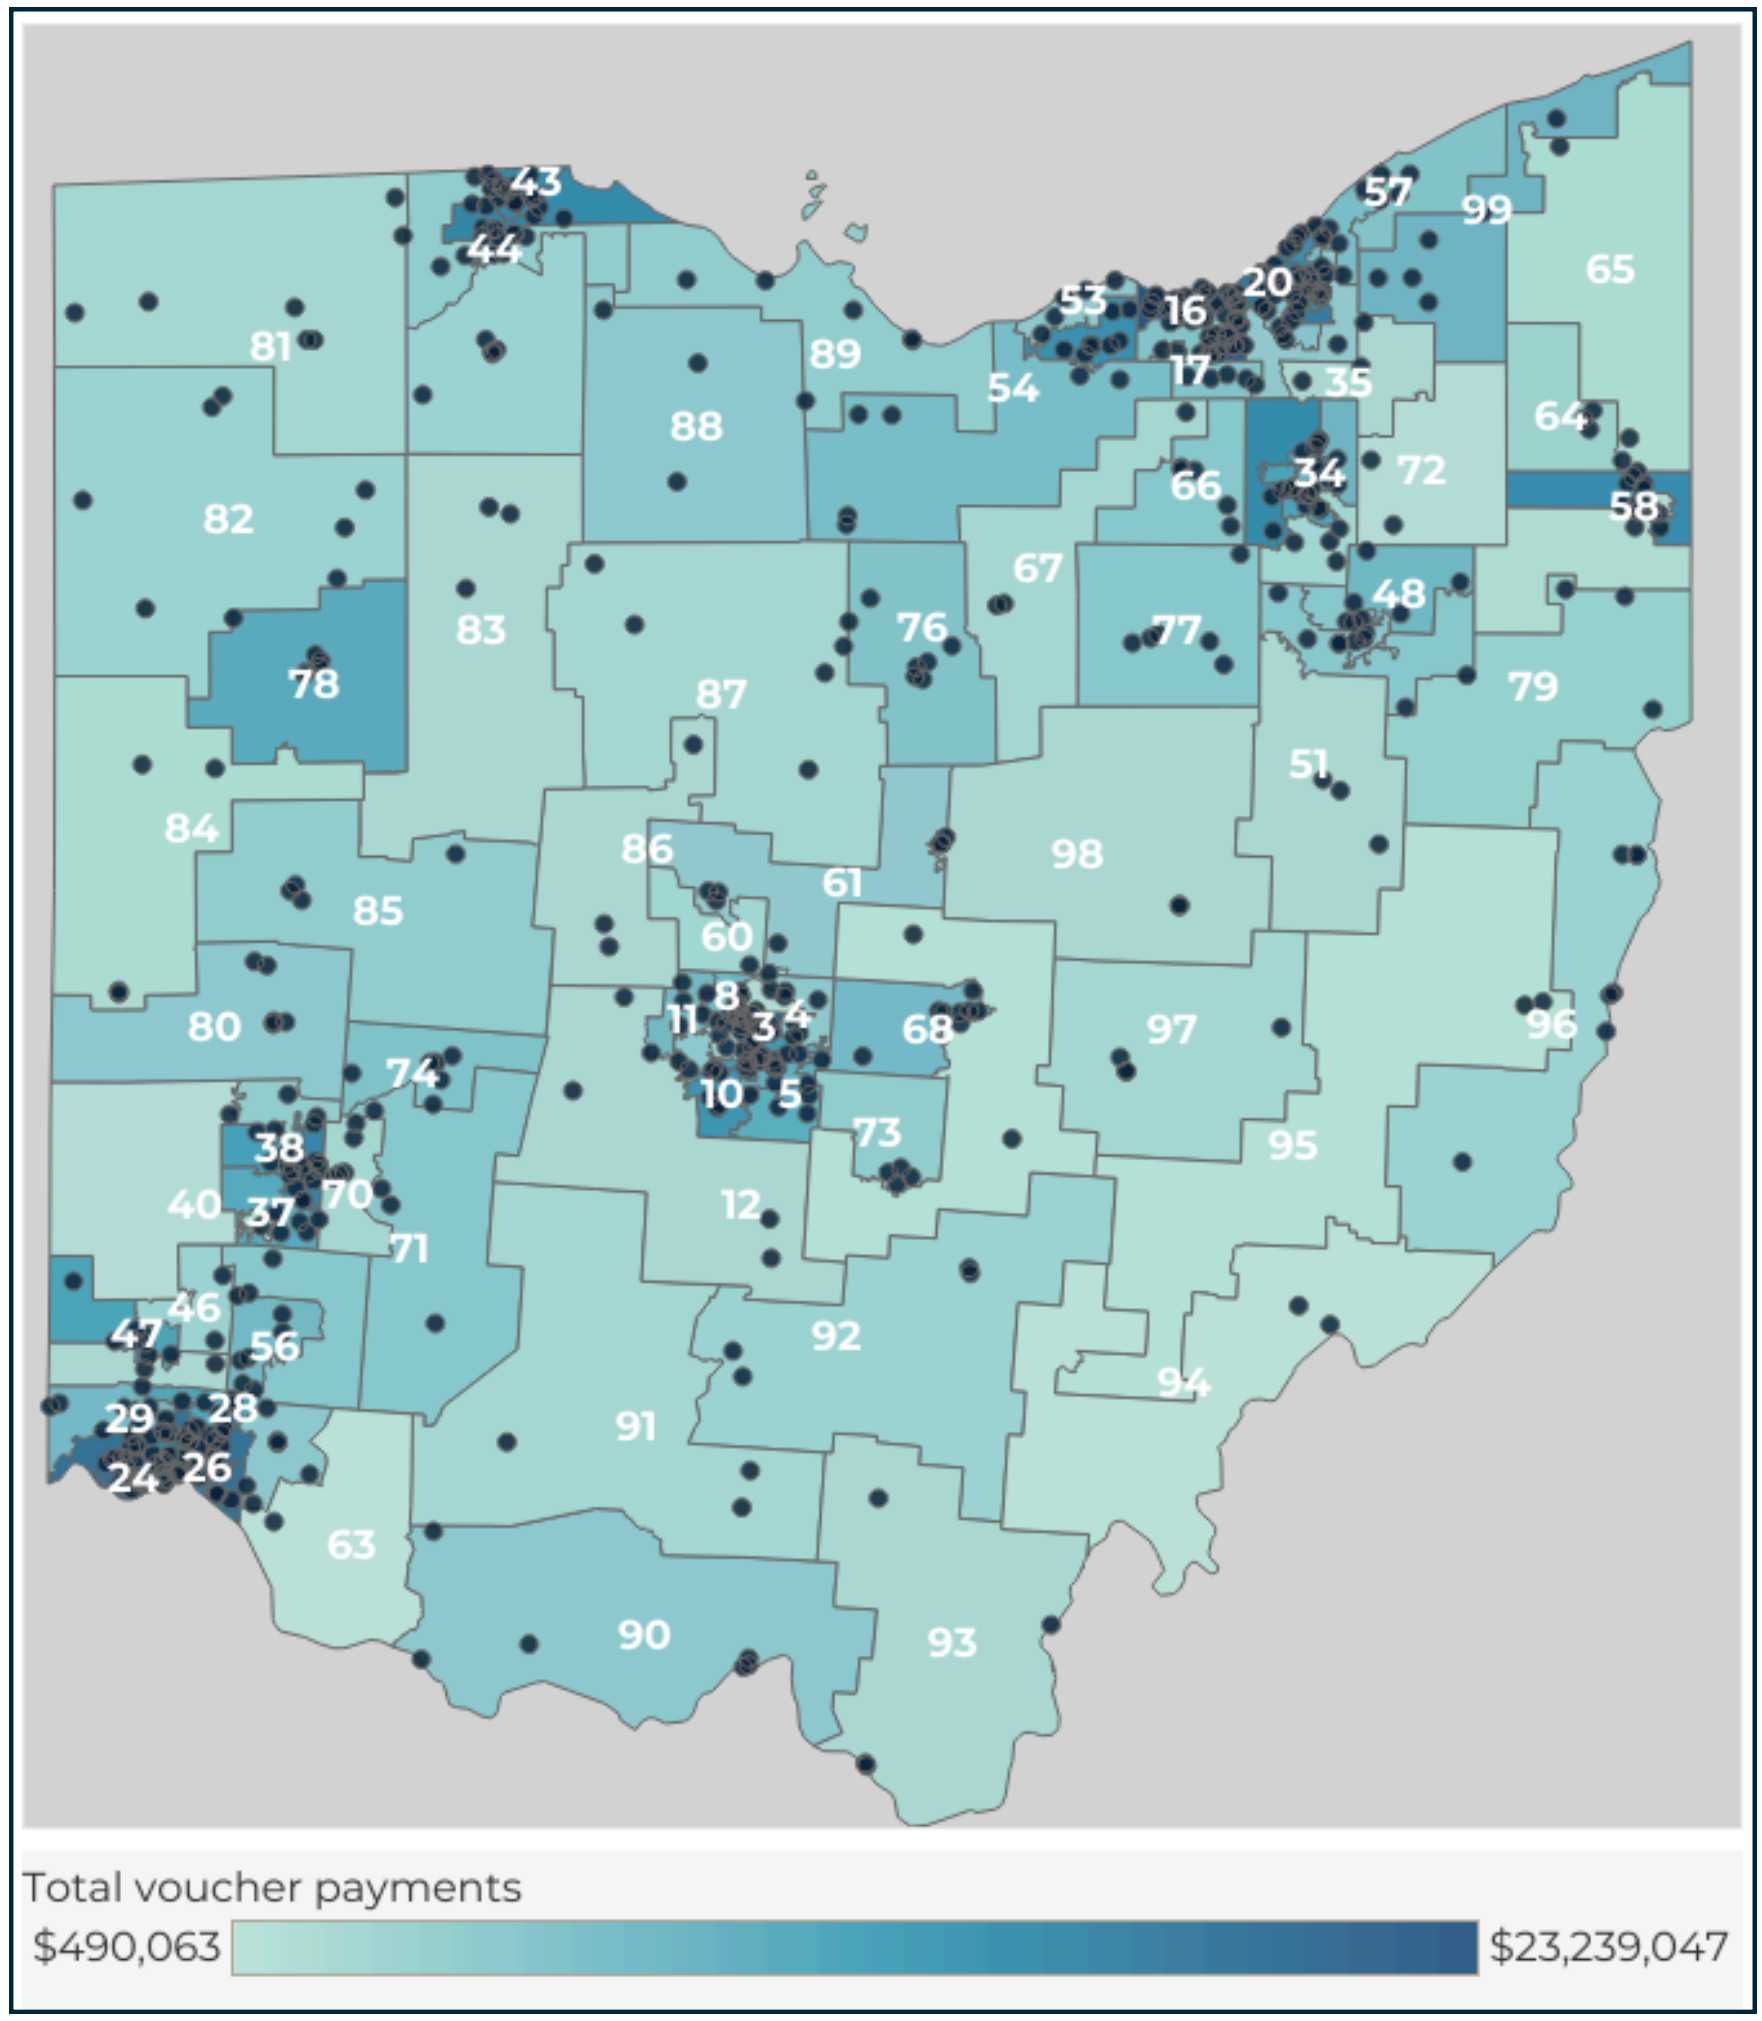
Email them at rep26@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1308

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 27

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 27 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 3,964

voucher students.

In District 27 there are 31 public schools attended by 16,588

students.

Contact Representative Baker and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

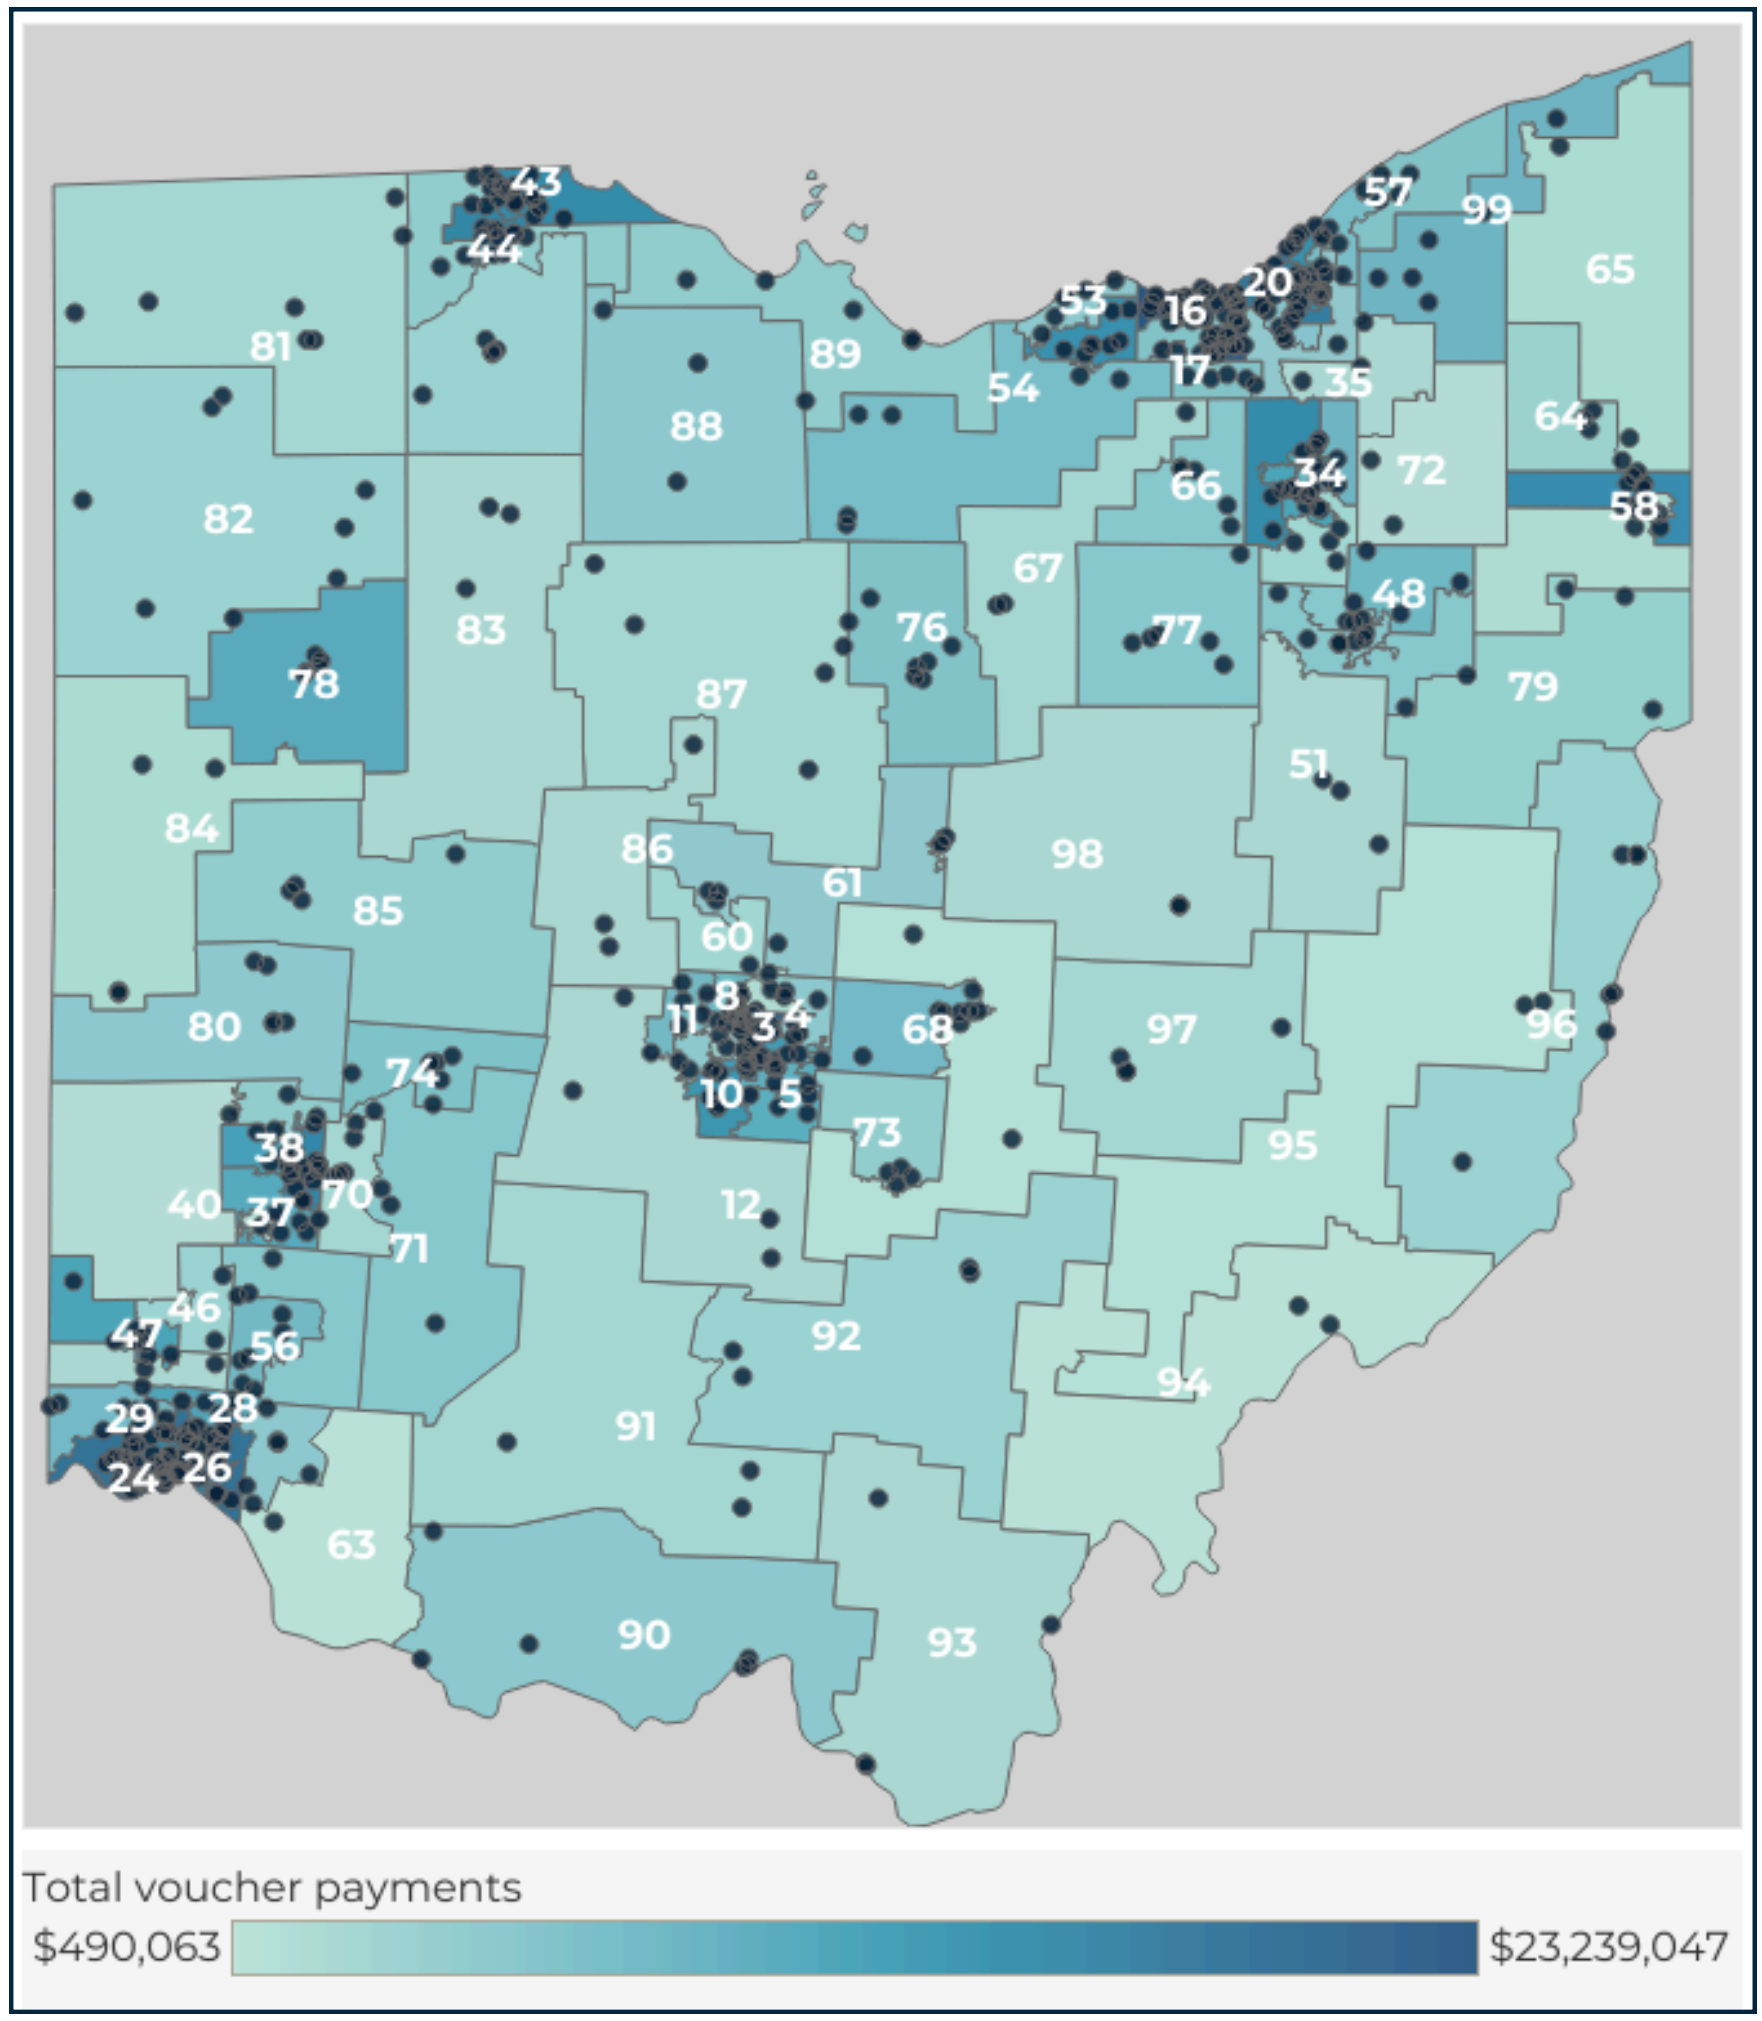
Email them at rep27@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6886

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 28

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 28 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 2,471

voucher students.

In District 28 there are 24

public schools attended by 17,725

students.

Contact Representative Brownlee and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

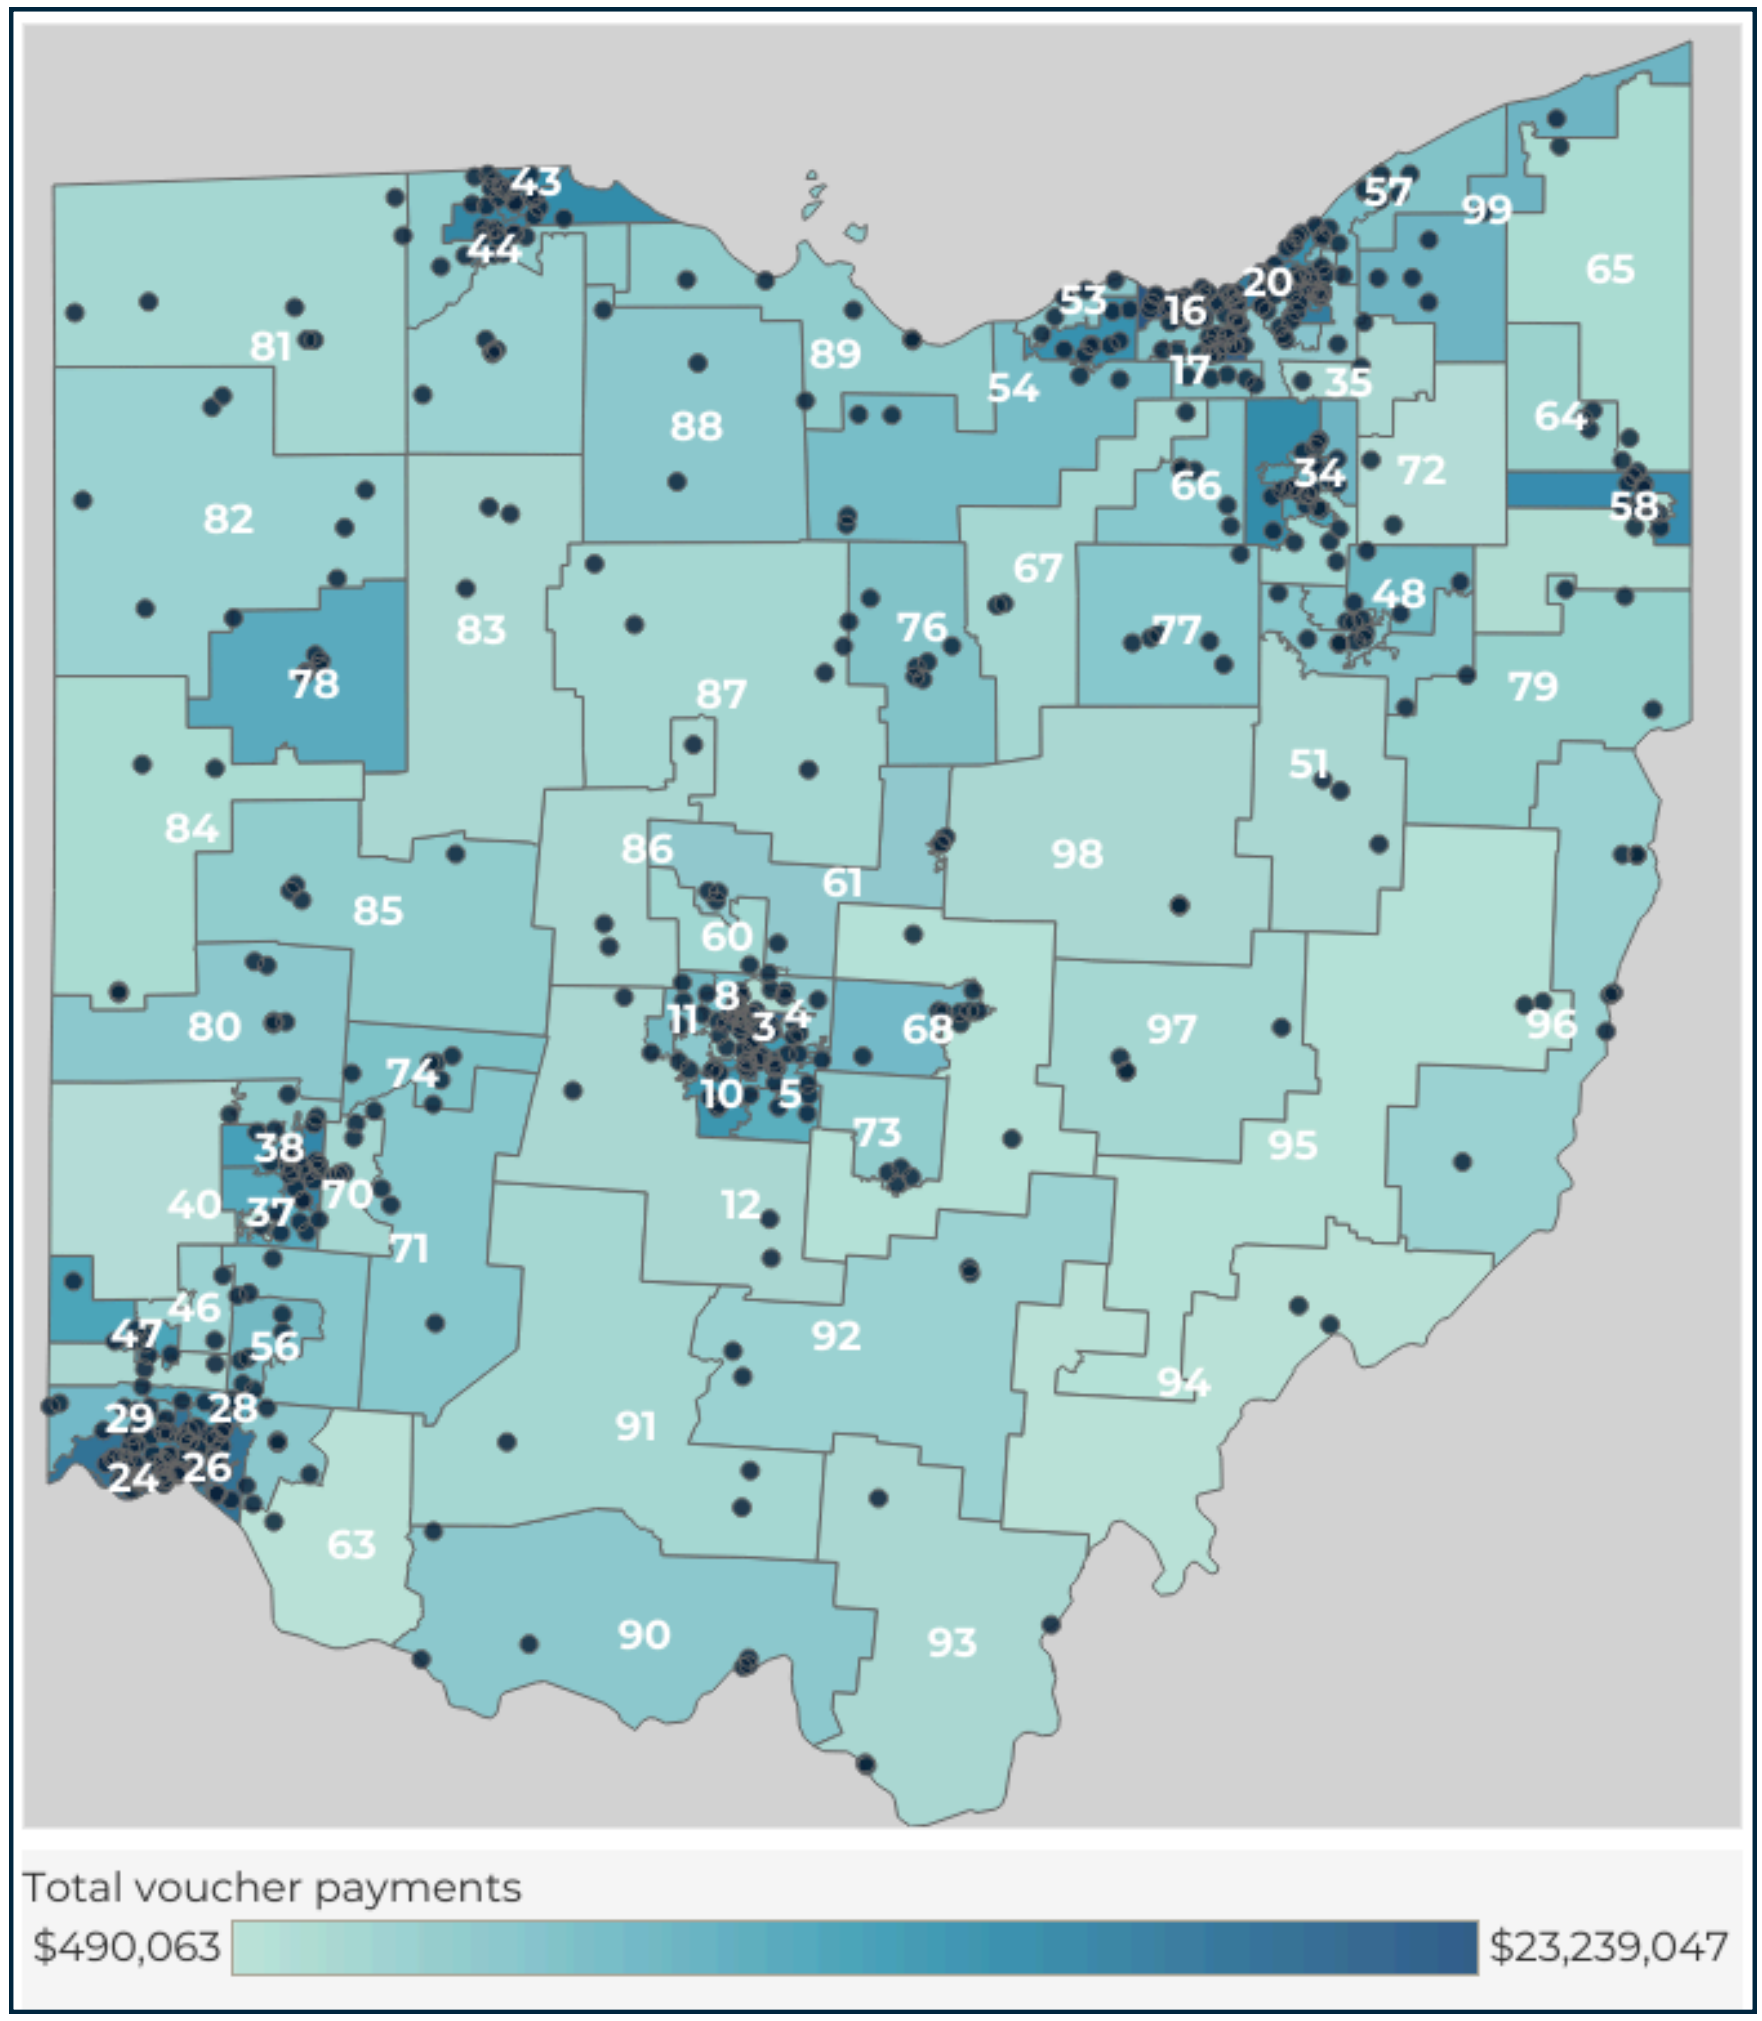
Email them at rep28@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8120

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 29

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 29 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 1,457

voucher students.

In District 29 there are 28

public schools attended by 17,604

students.

Contact Representative Abrams and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

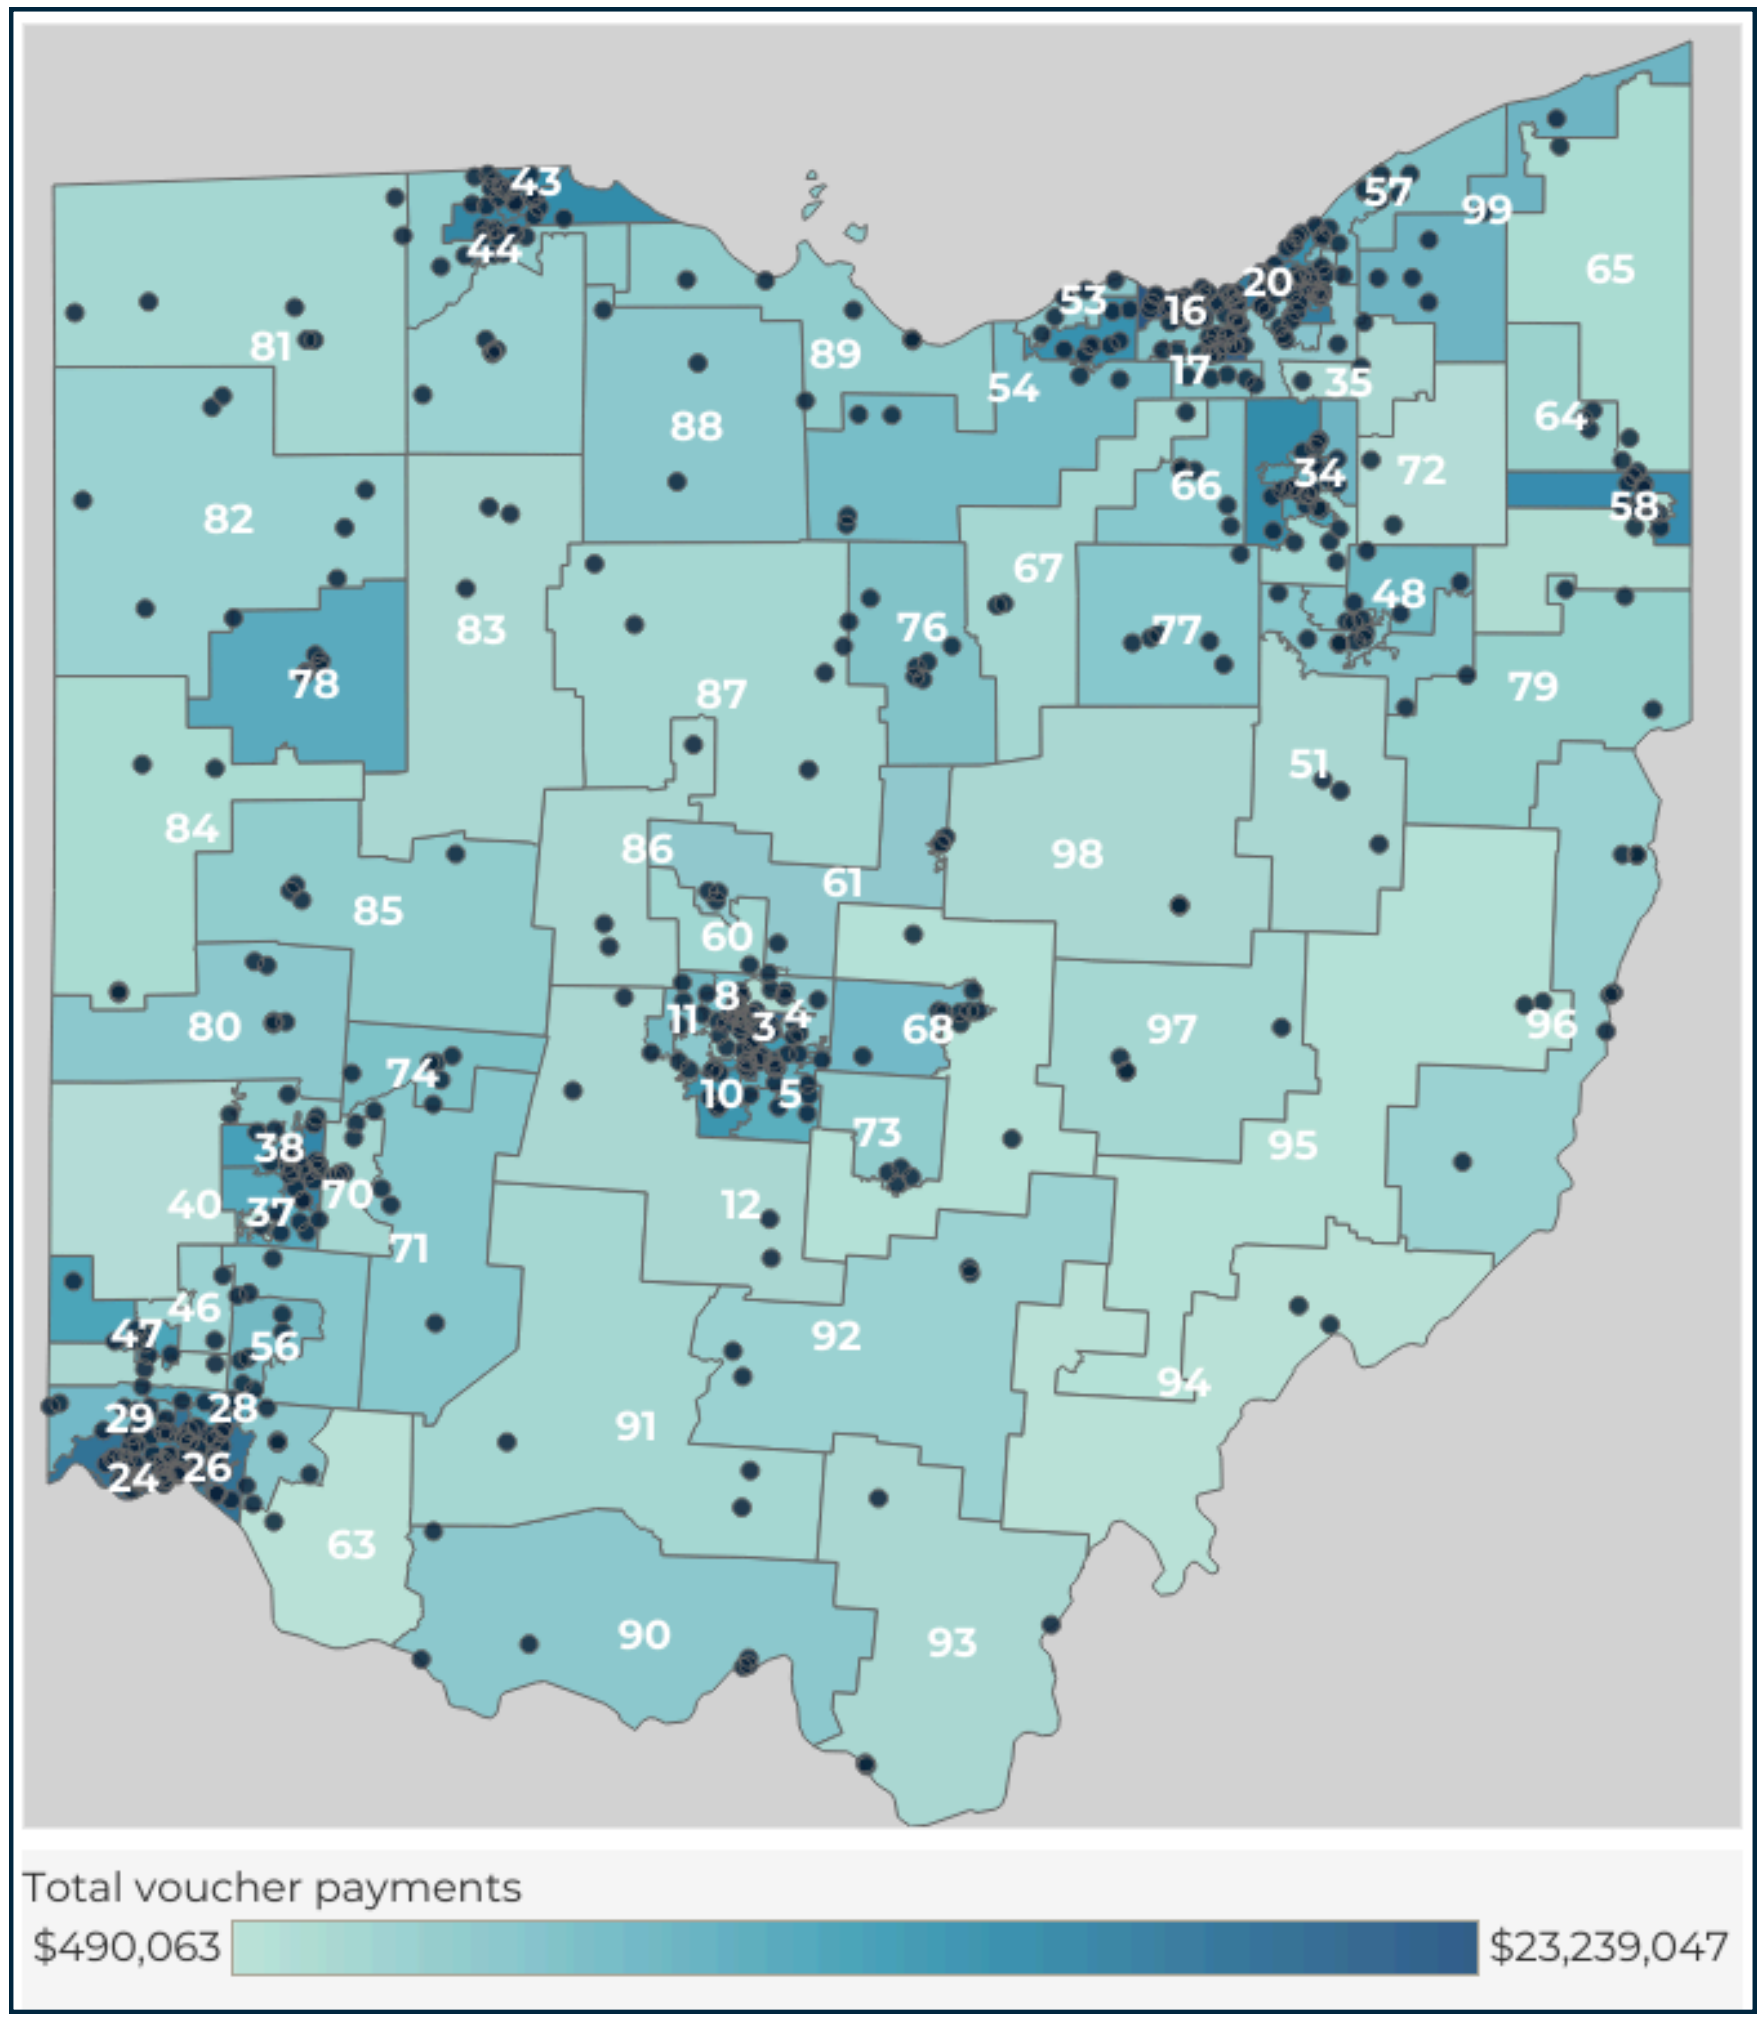
Email them at Rep29@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9091

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 3

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 3 there are 12

private voucher schools attended by 3,698

voucher students.

In District 3 there are 19 public schools attended by 8,032

students.

Contact Representative Mohamed and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

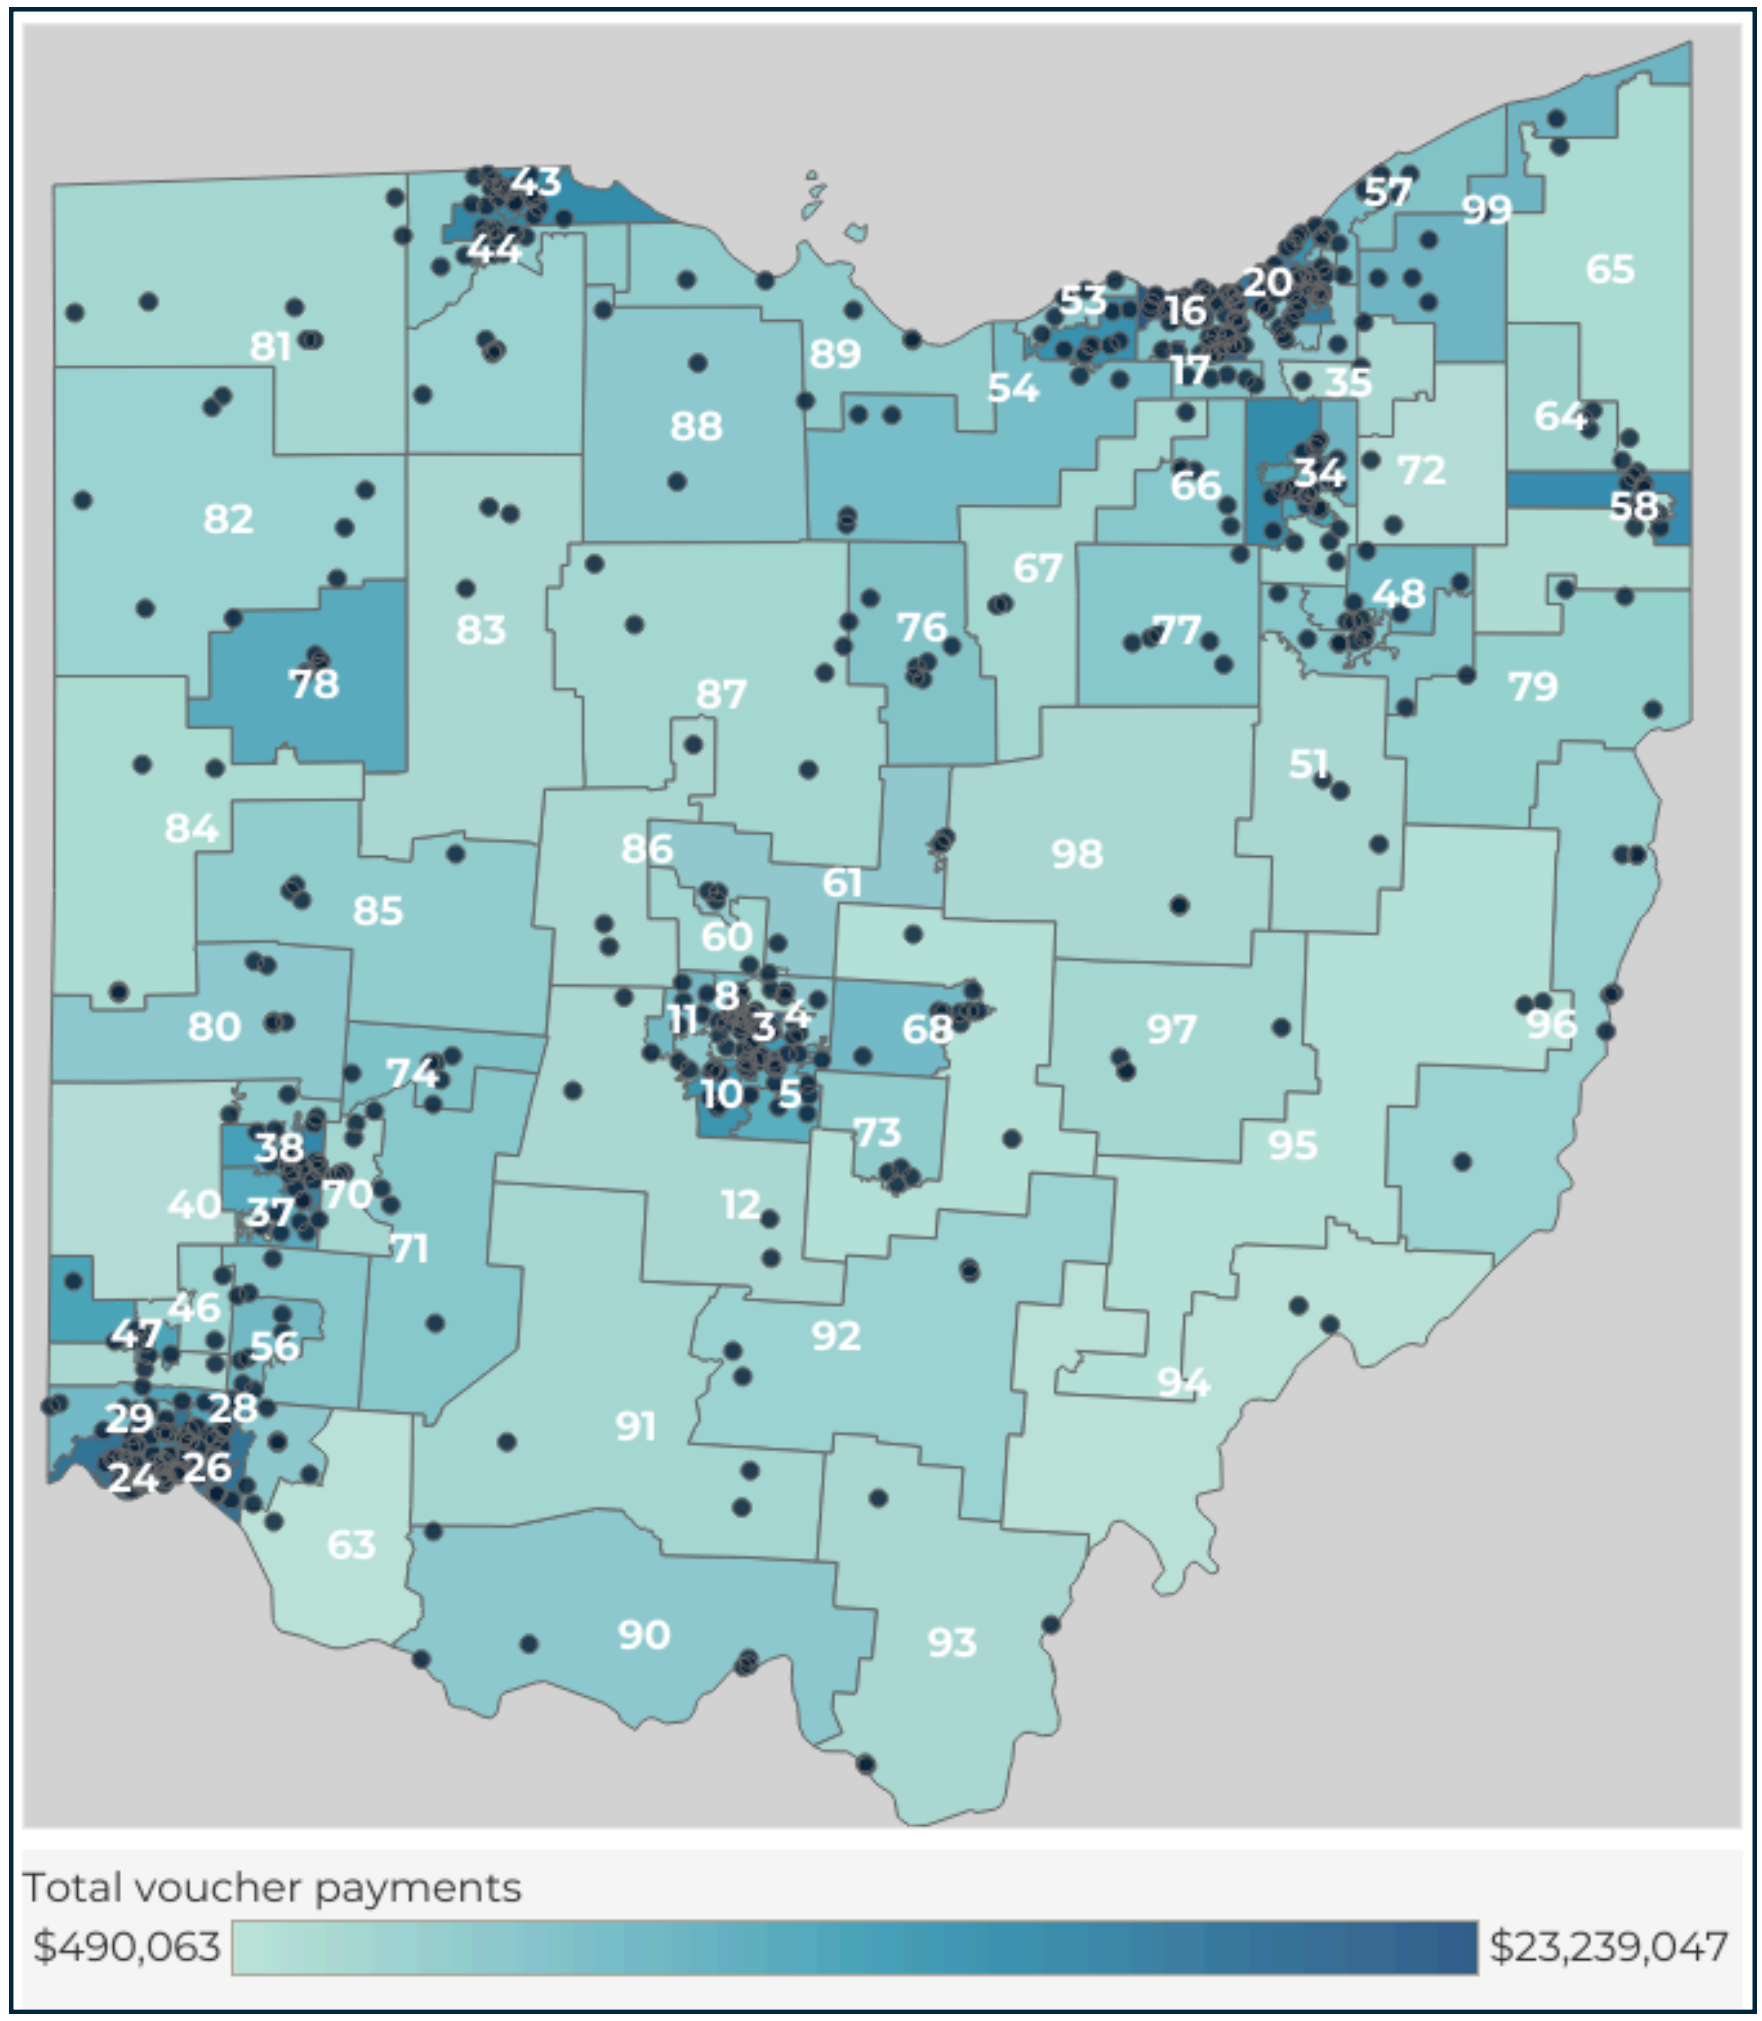
Email them at rep03@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1896

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 30

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 30 there are

11

private voucher schools attended by 4,464

voucher students.

In District 30 there are 16

public schools attended by 11,452

students.

Contact Representative Odioso and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

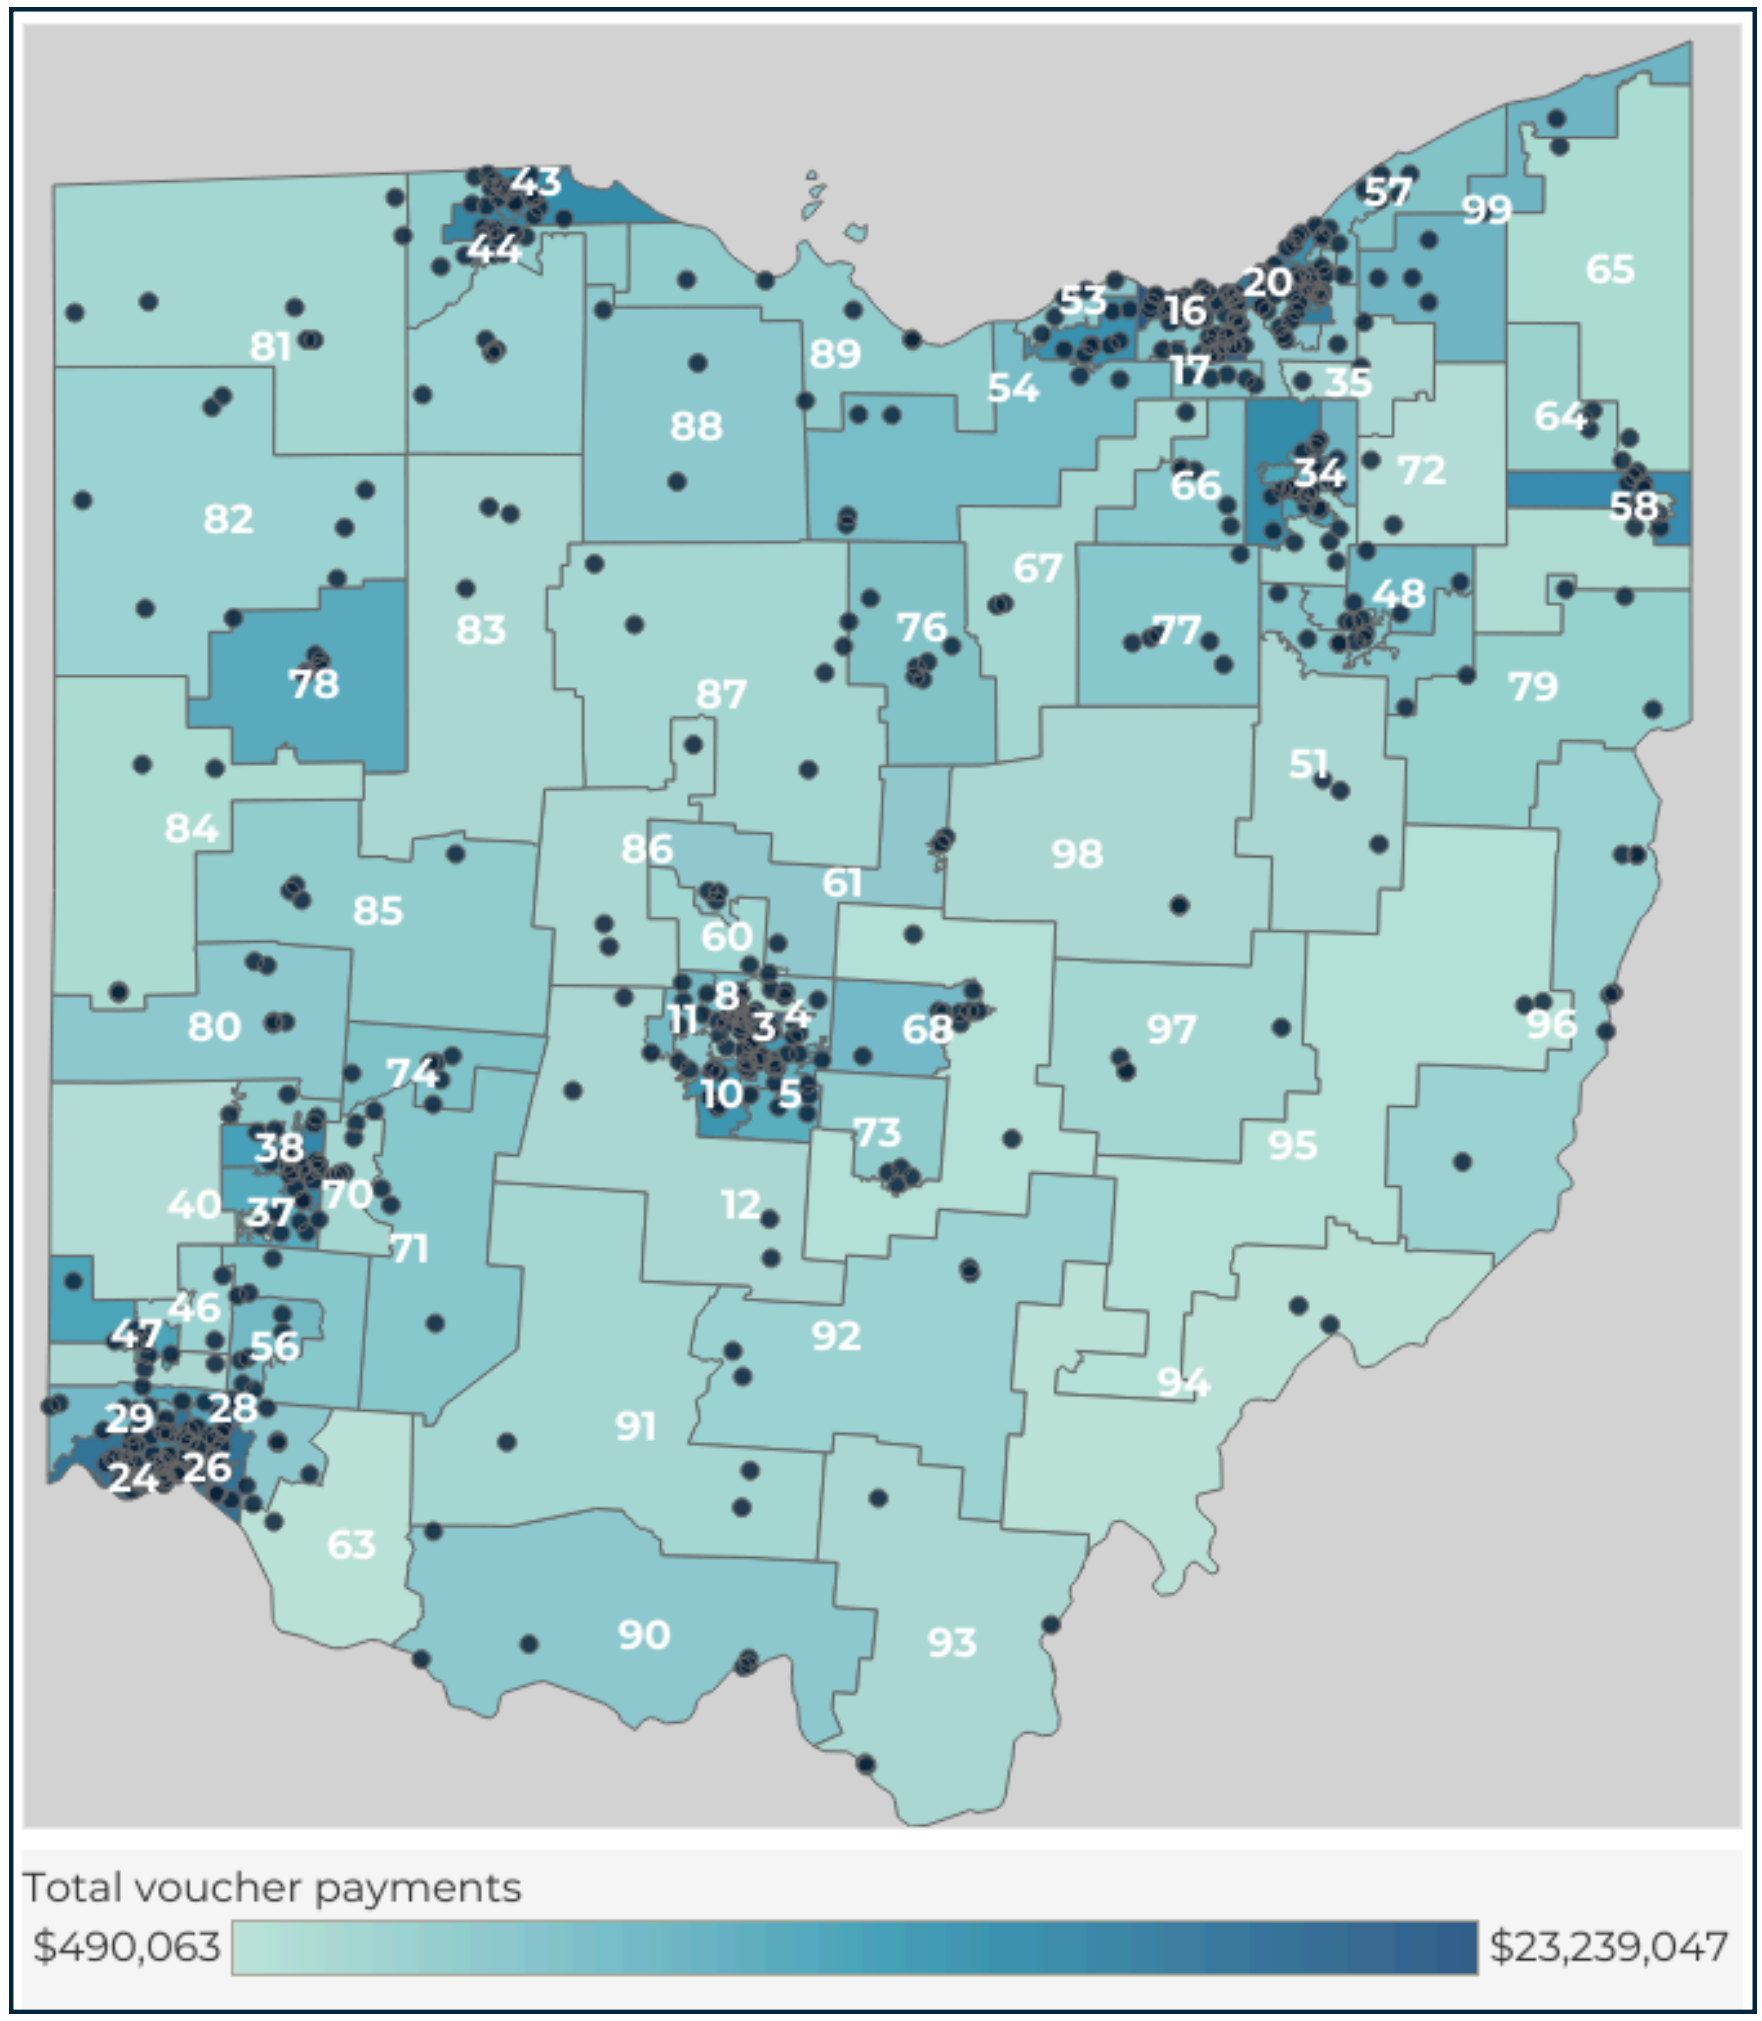
Email them at rep30@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8258

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 31

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 31 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 2,837

voucher students.

In District 31 there are 28

public schools attended by 16,324

students.

Contact Representative Roemer and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

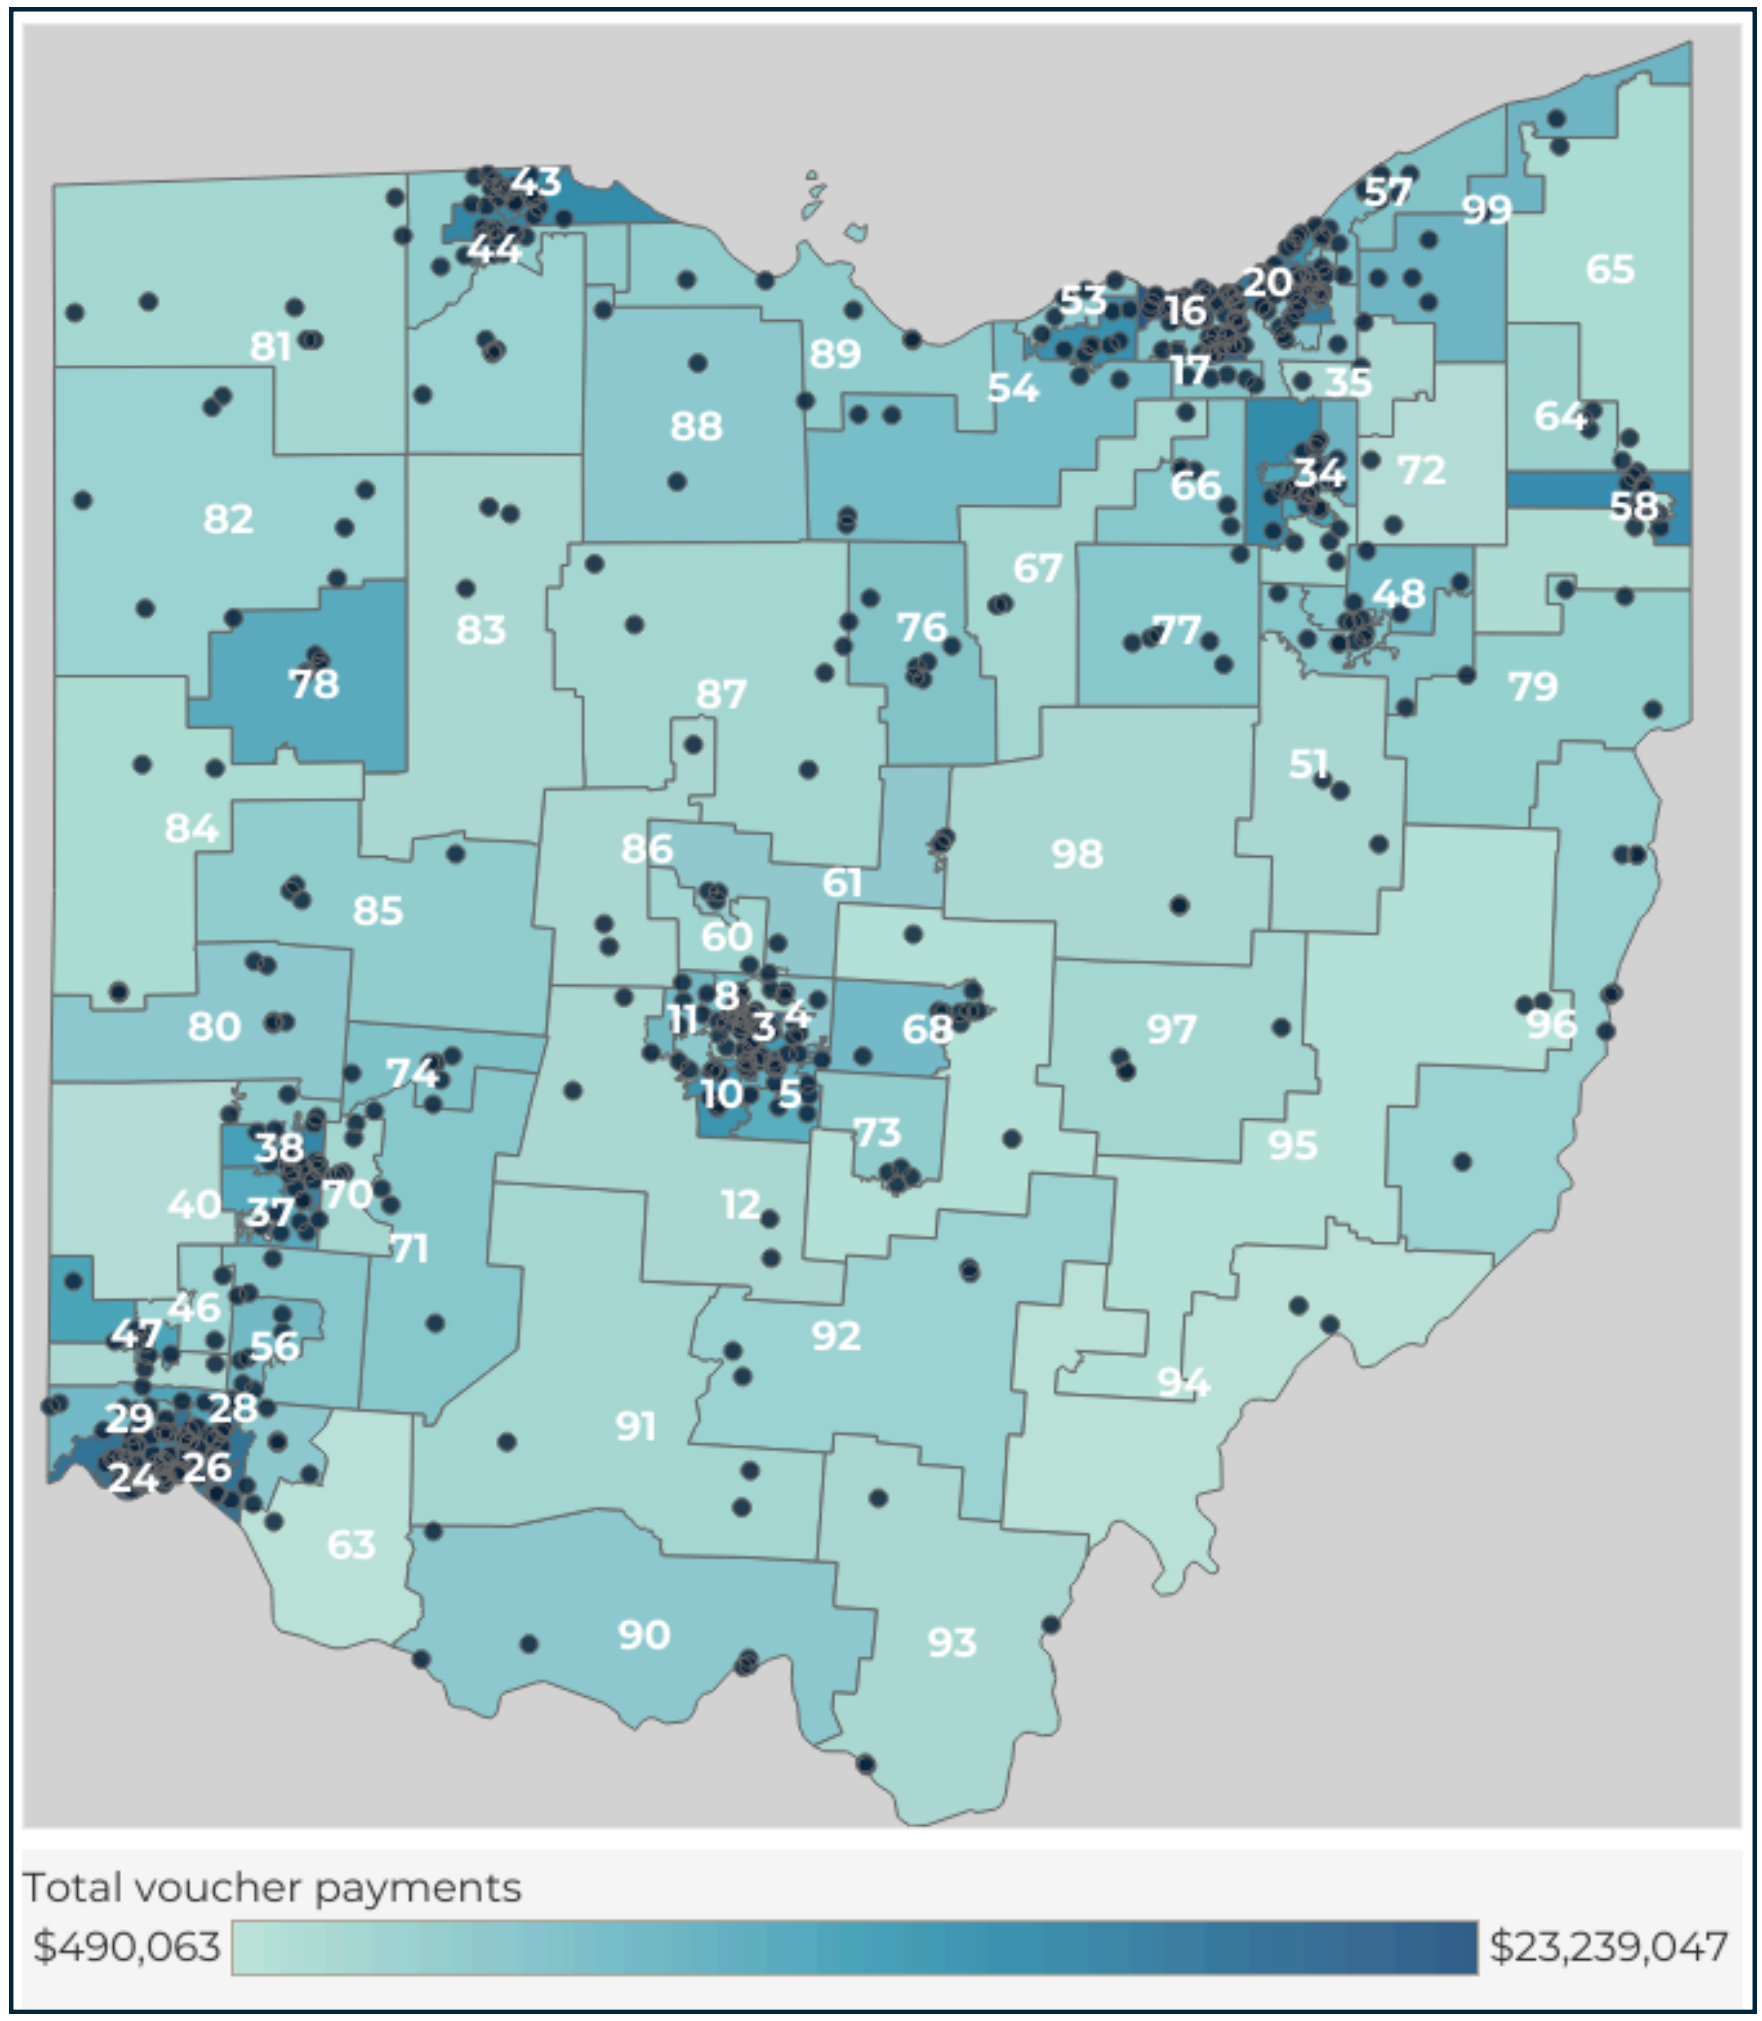
Email them at rep31@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5085

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 32

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 32 there are

4

private voucher schools attended by 526

voucher students.

In District 32 there are 28

public schools attended by 13,229

students.

Contact Representative Daniels and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

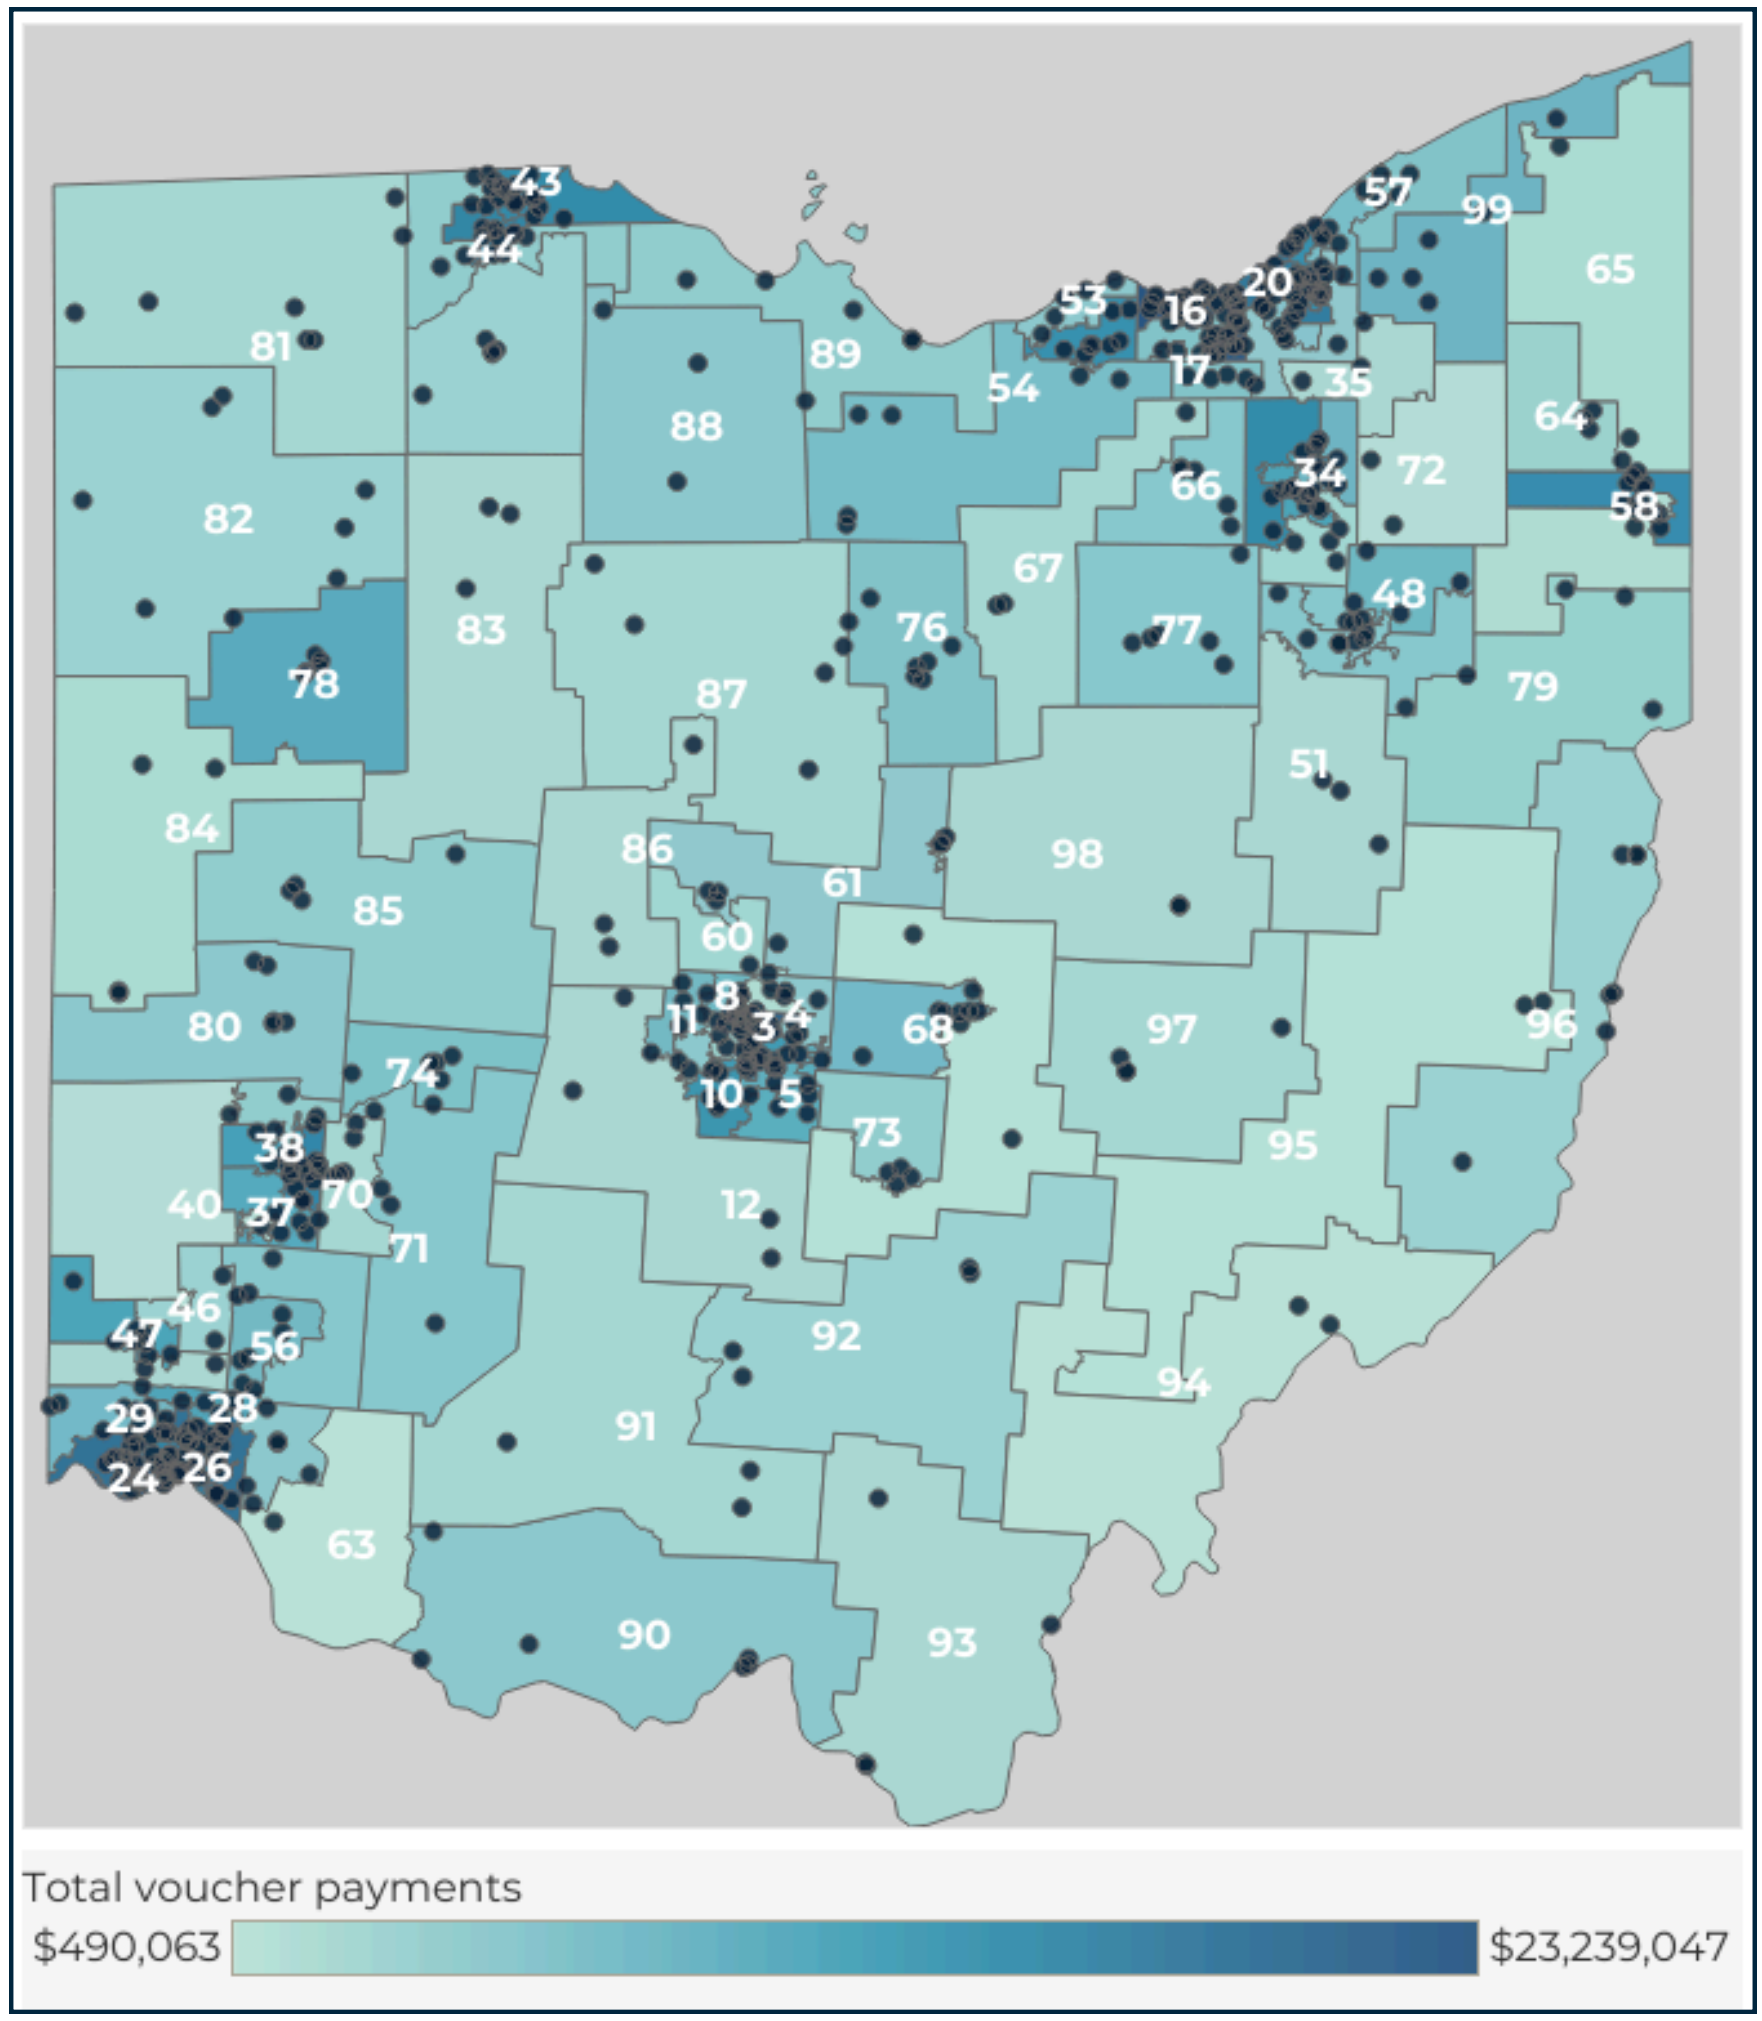
Email them at rep32@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1790

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 33

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 33 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 1,844

voucher students.

In District 33 there are 28

public schools attended by 11,755

students.

Contact Representative Sims and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

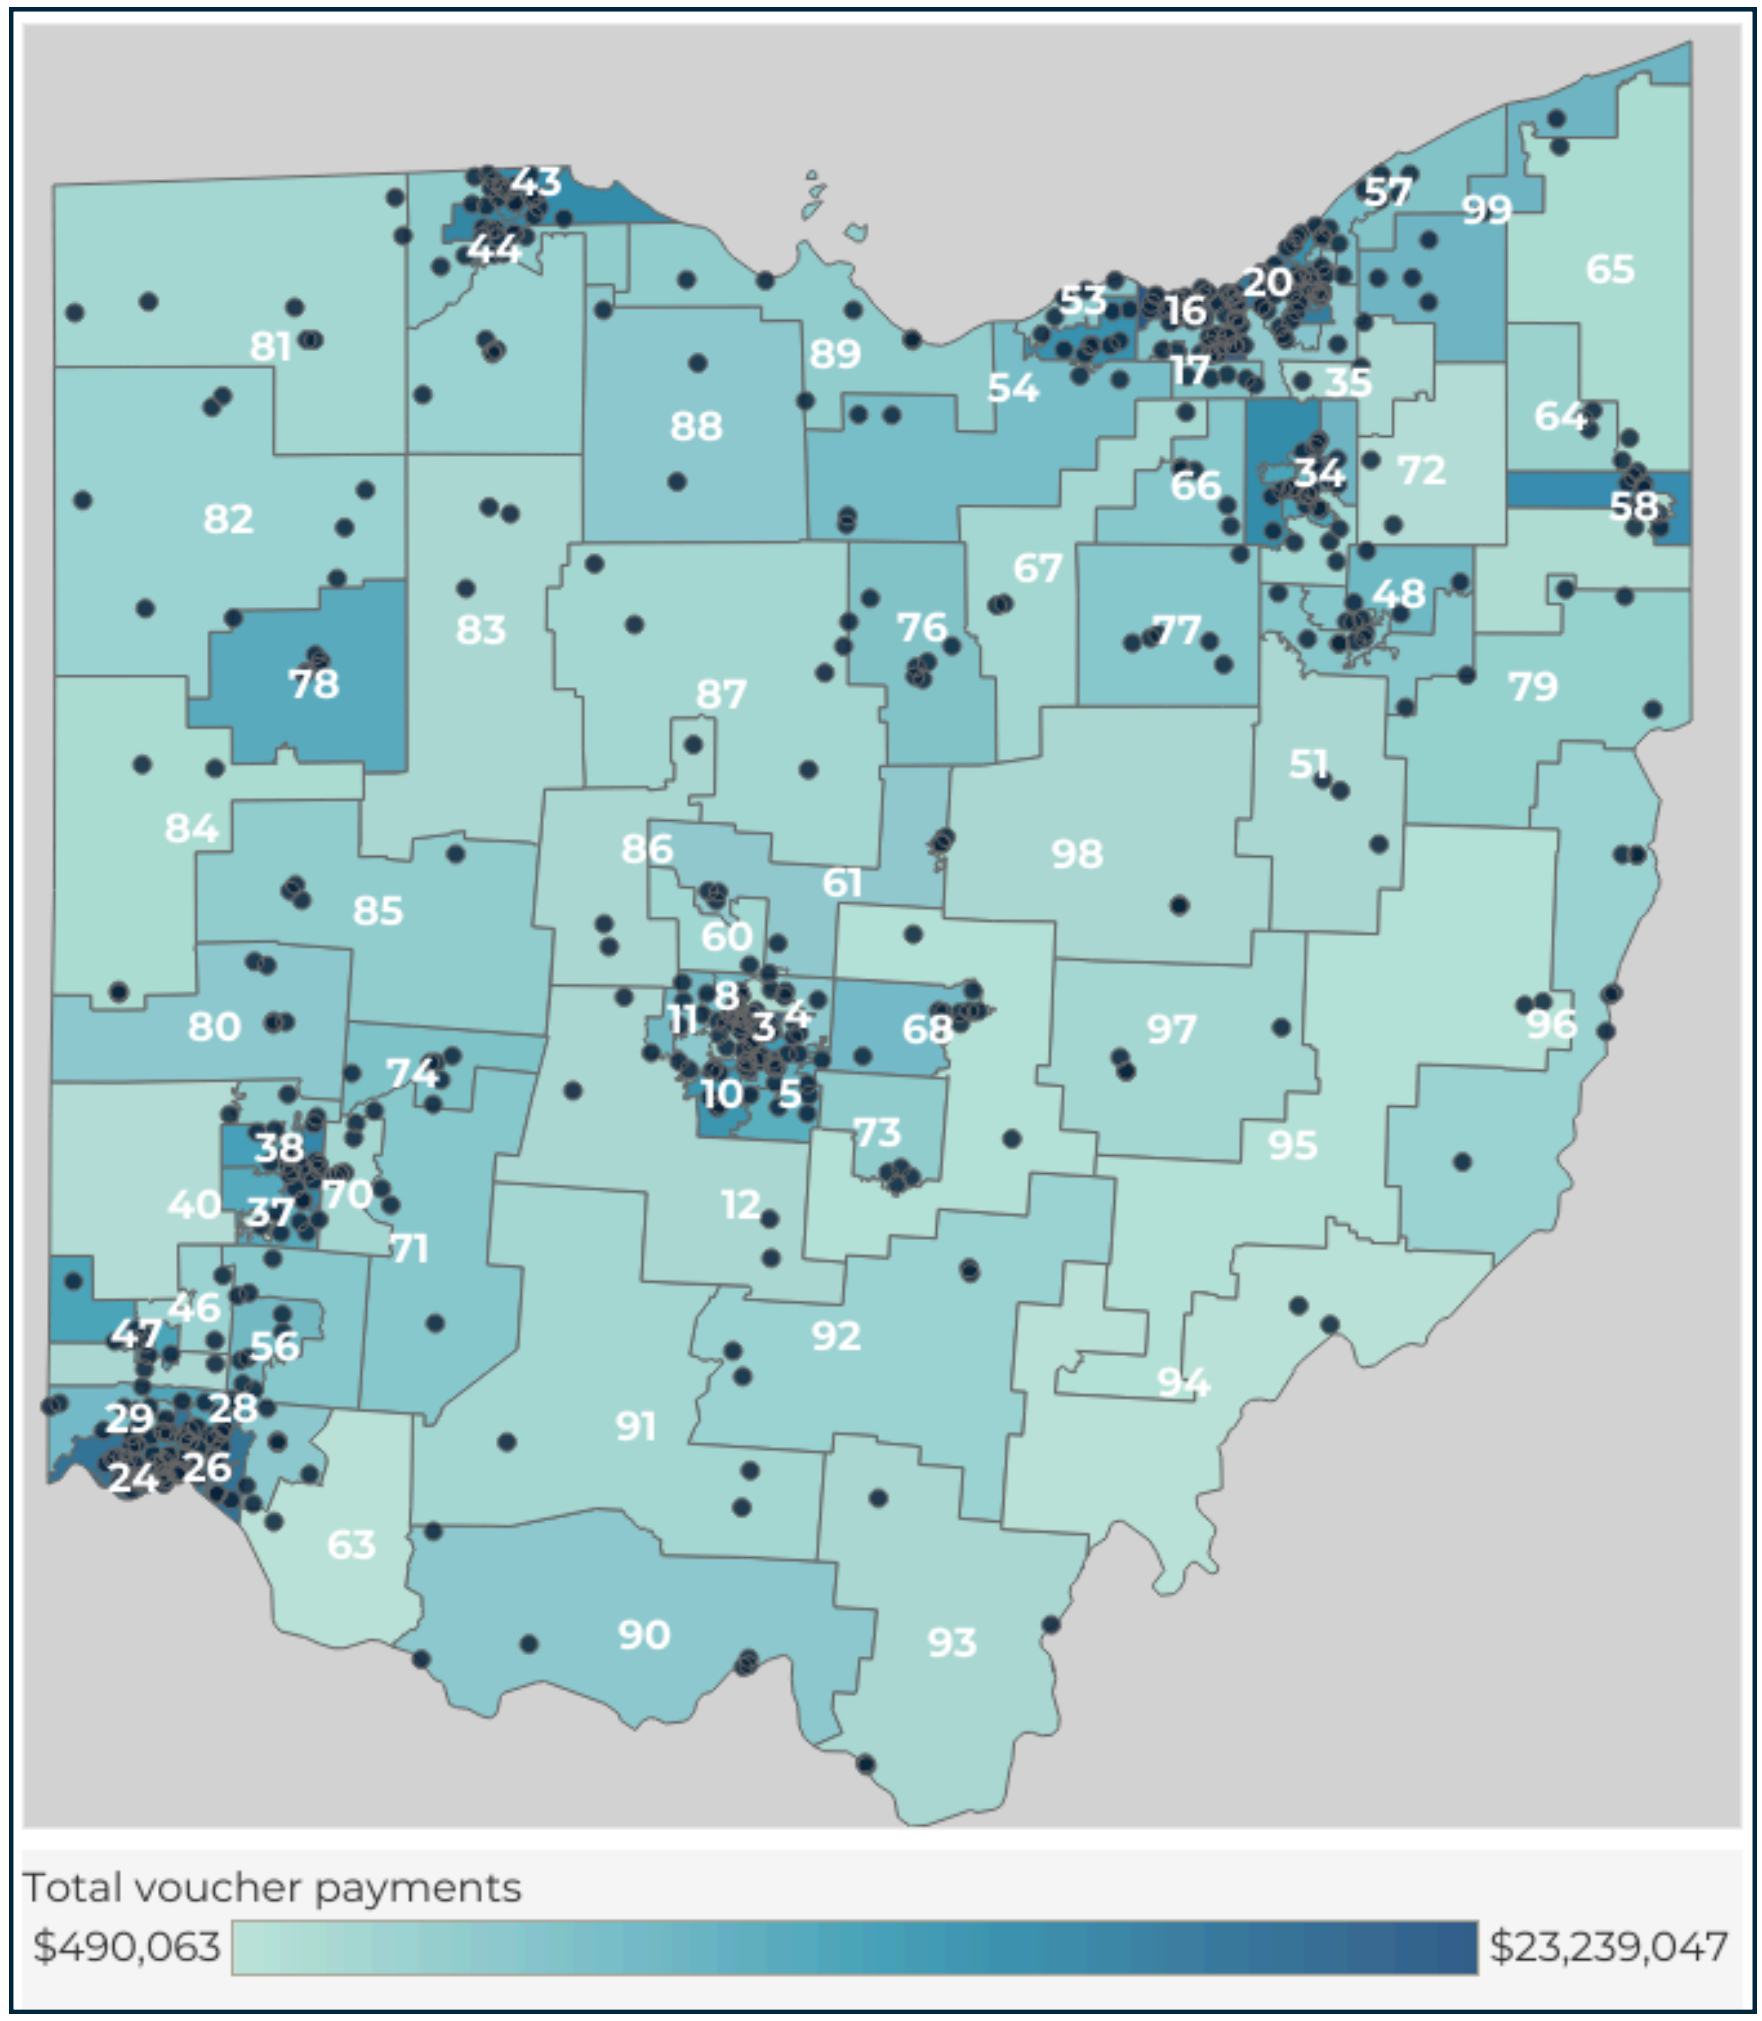
Email them at rep33@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6037

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 34

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 34 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 1,388

voucher students.

In District 34 there are 25

public schools attended by 16,136

students.

Contact Representative Hall and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

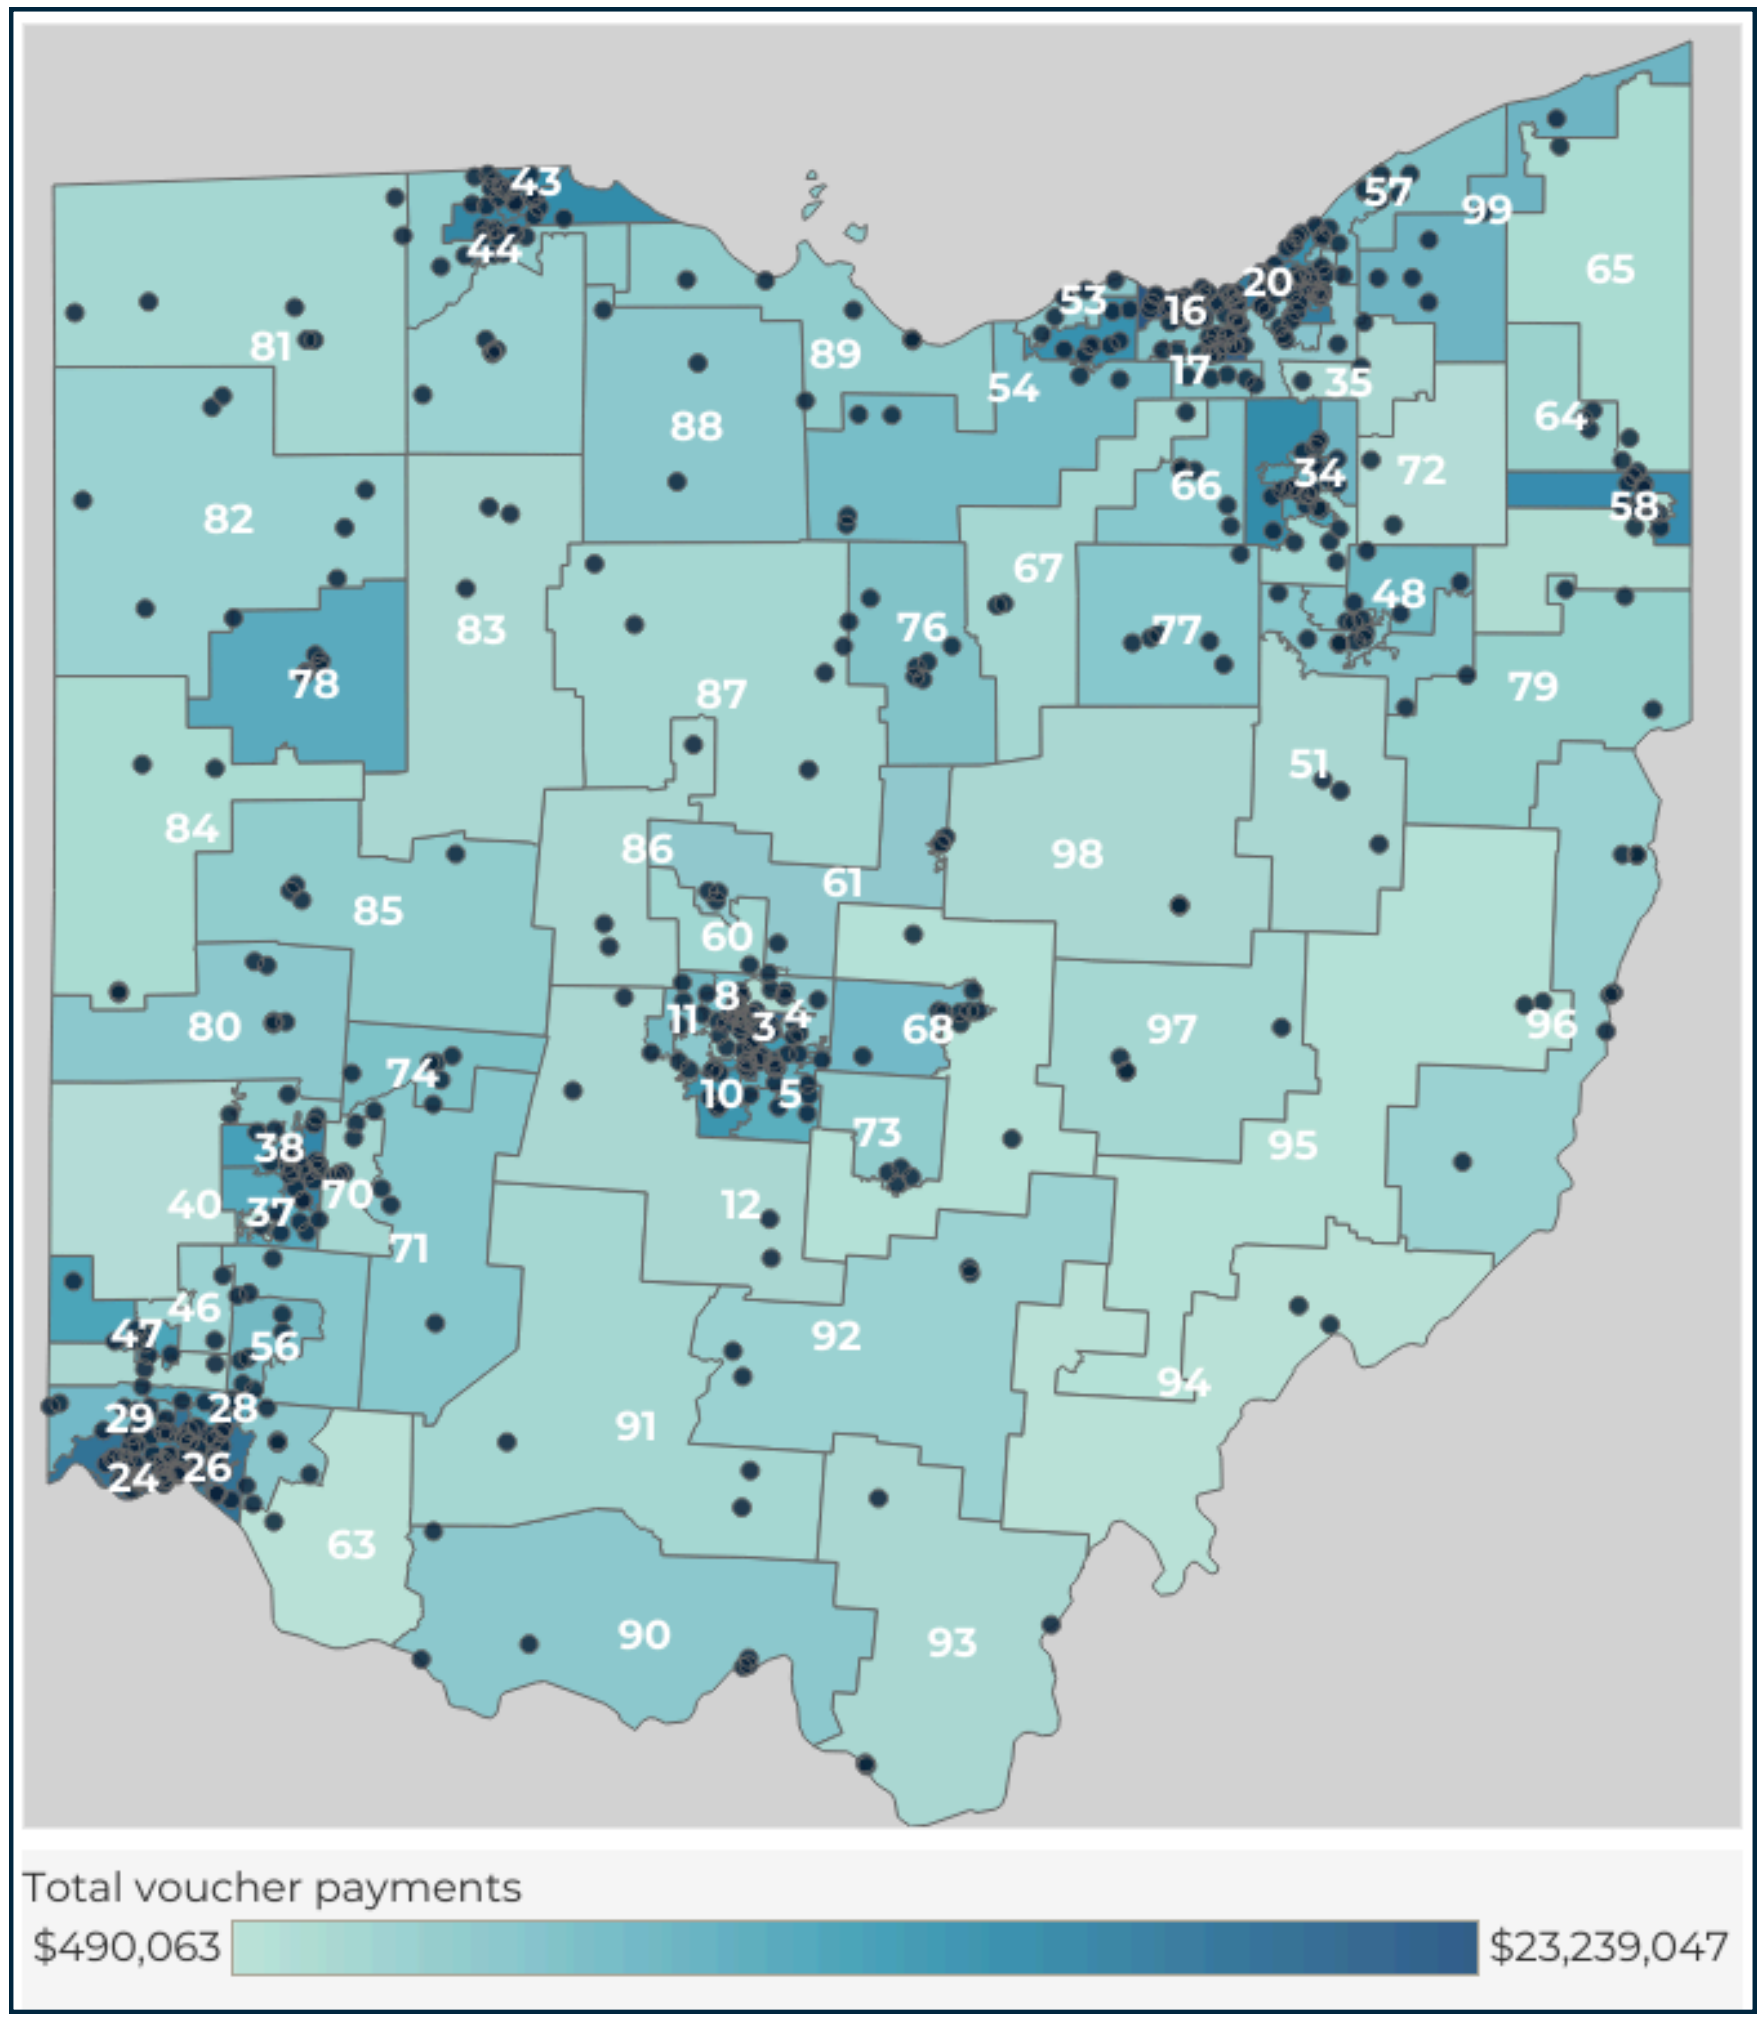
Email them at rep34@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1177

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 35

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 35 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 529

voucher students.

In District 35 there are 29

public schools attended by 15,600

students.

Contact Representative Demetriou and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

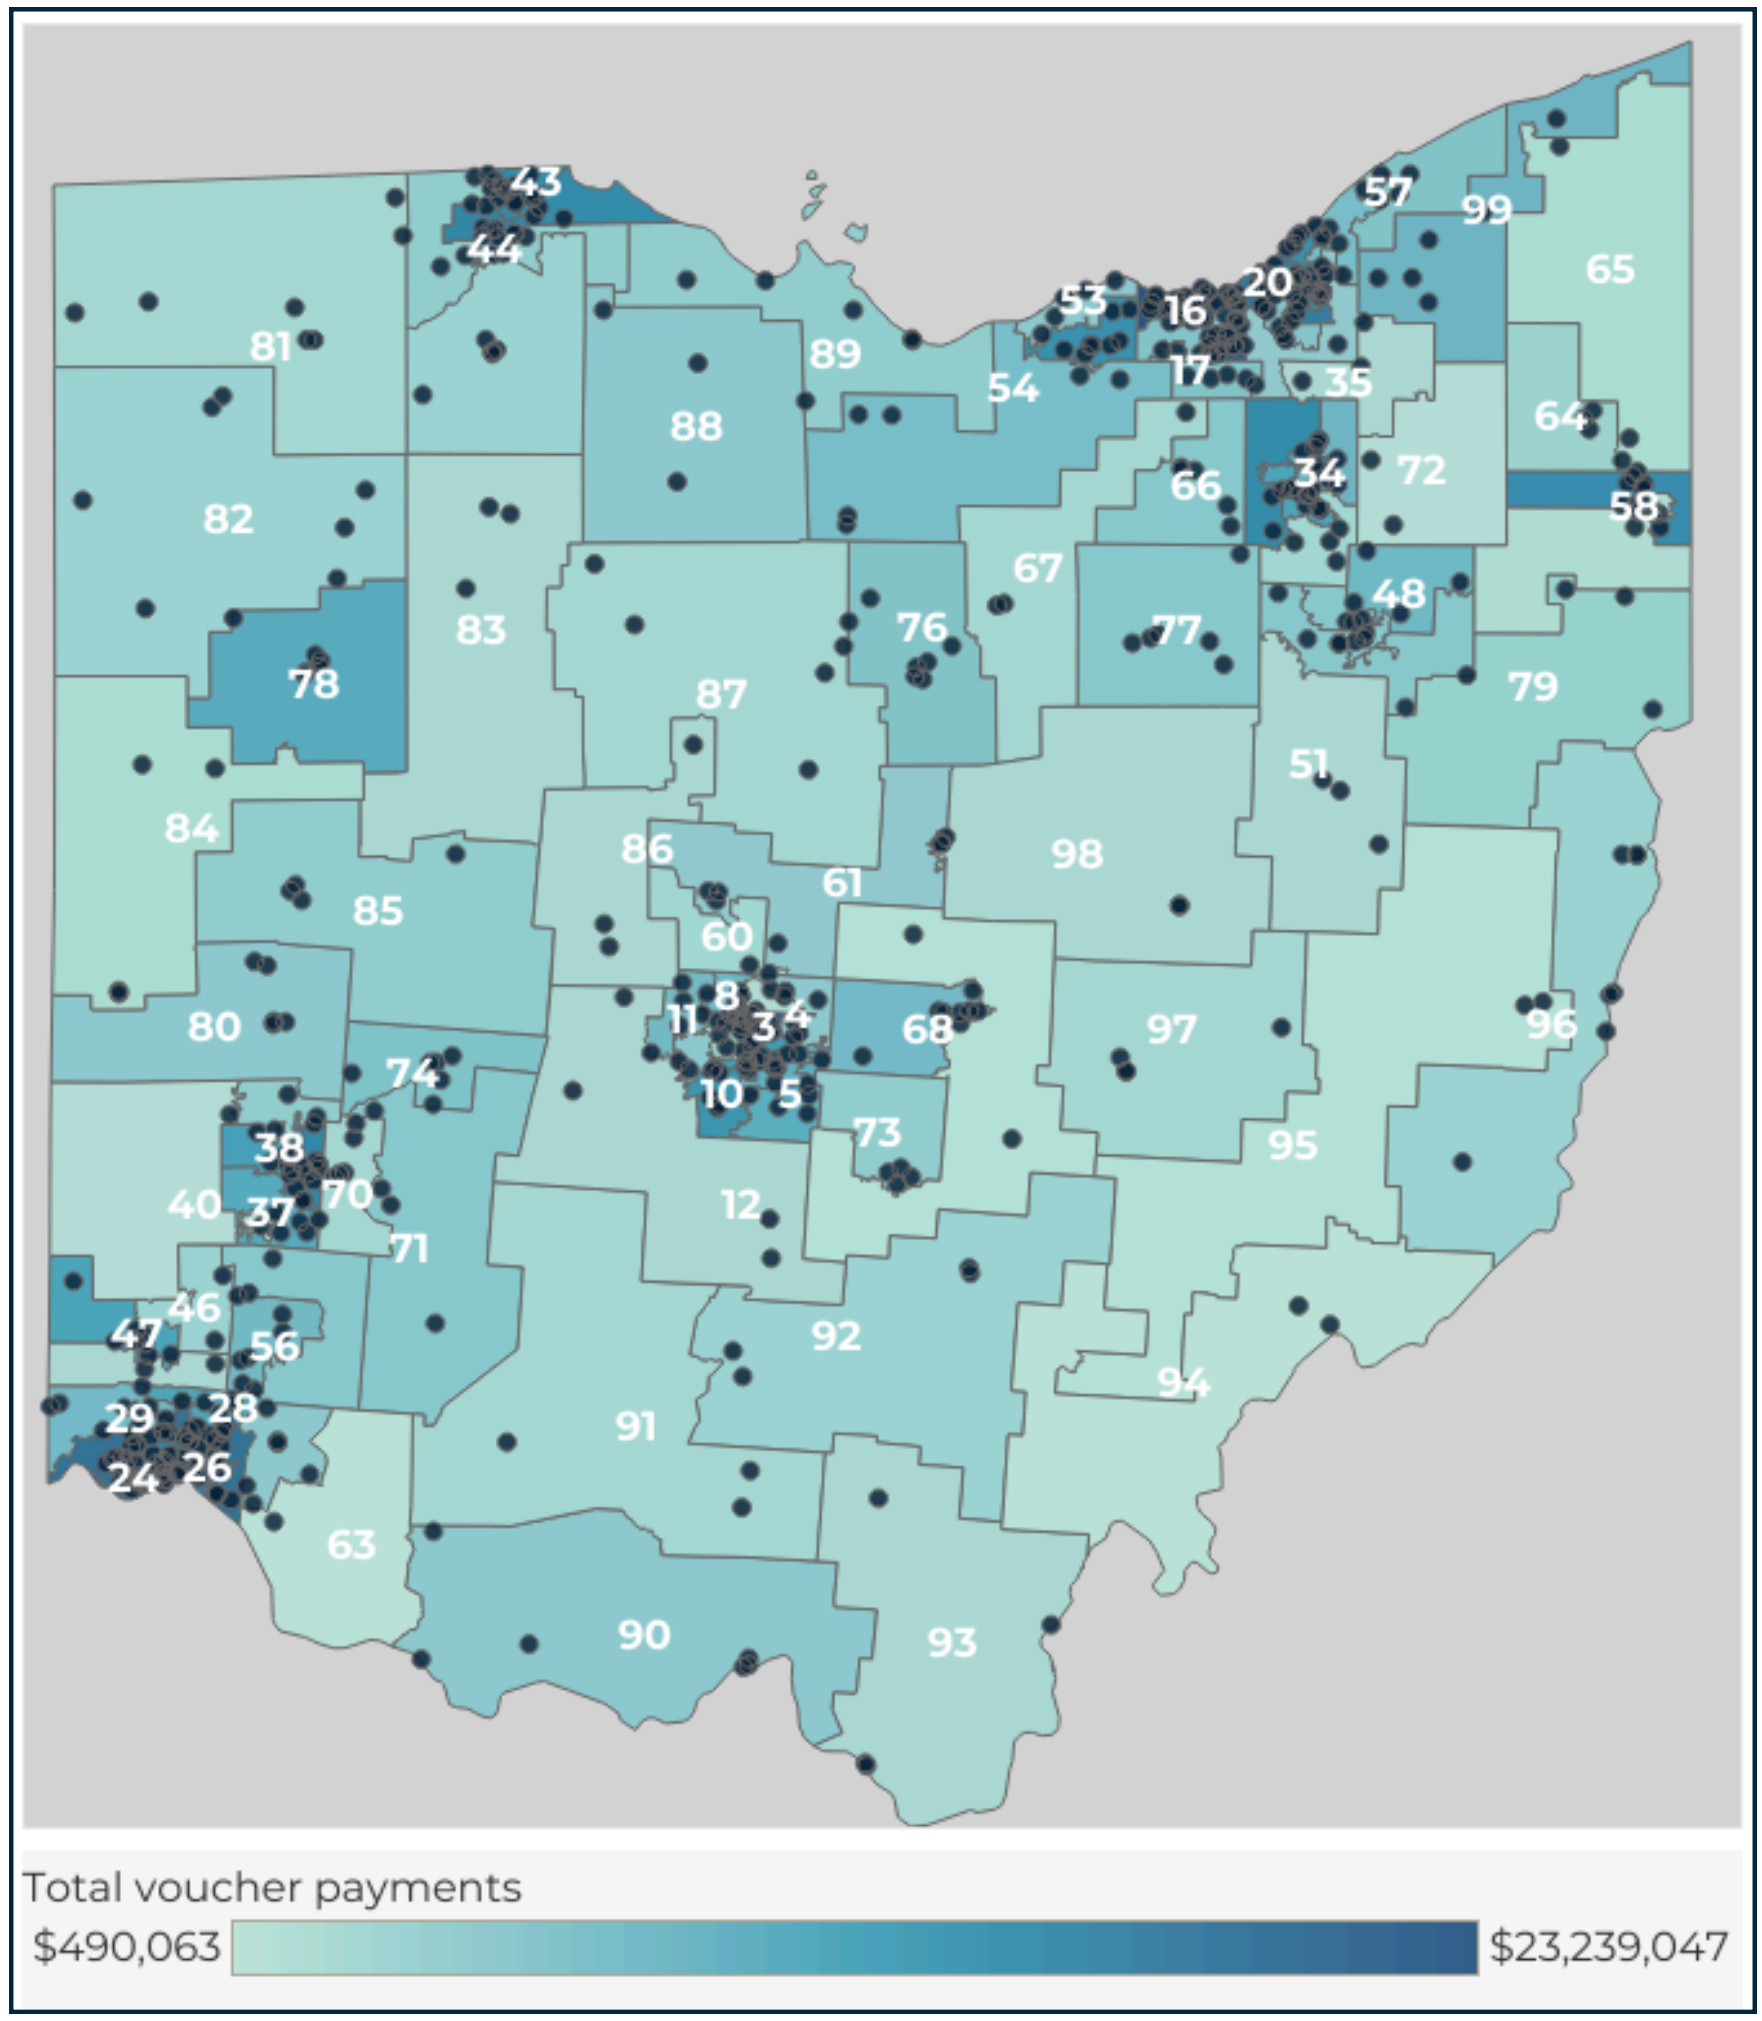
Email them at rep35@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5088

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 36

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 36 there are

9

private voucher schools attended by 2,862

voucher students.

In District 36 there are 32

public schools attended by 14,799

students.

Contact Representative White and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

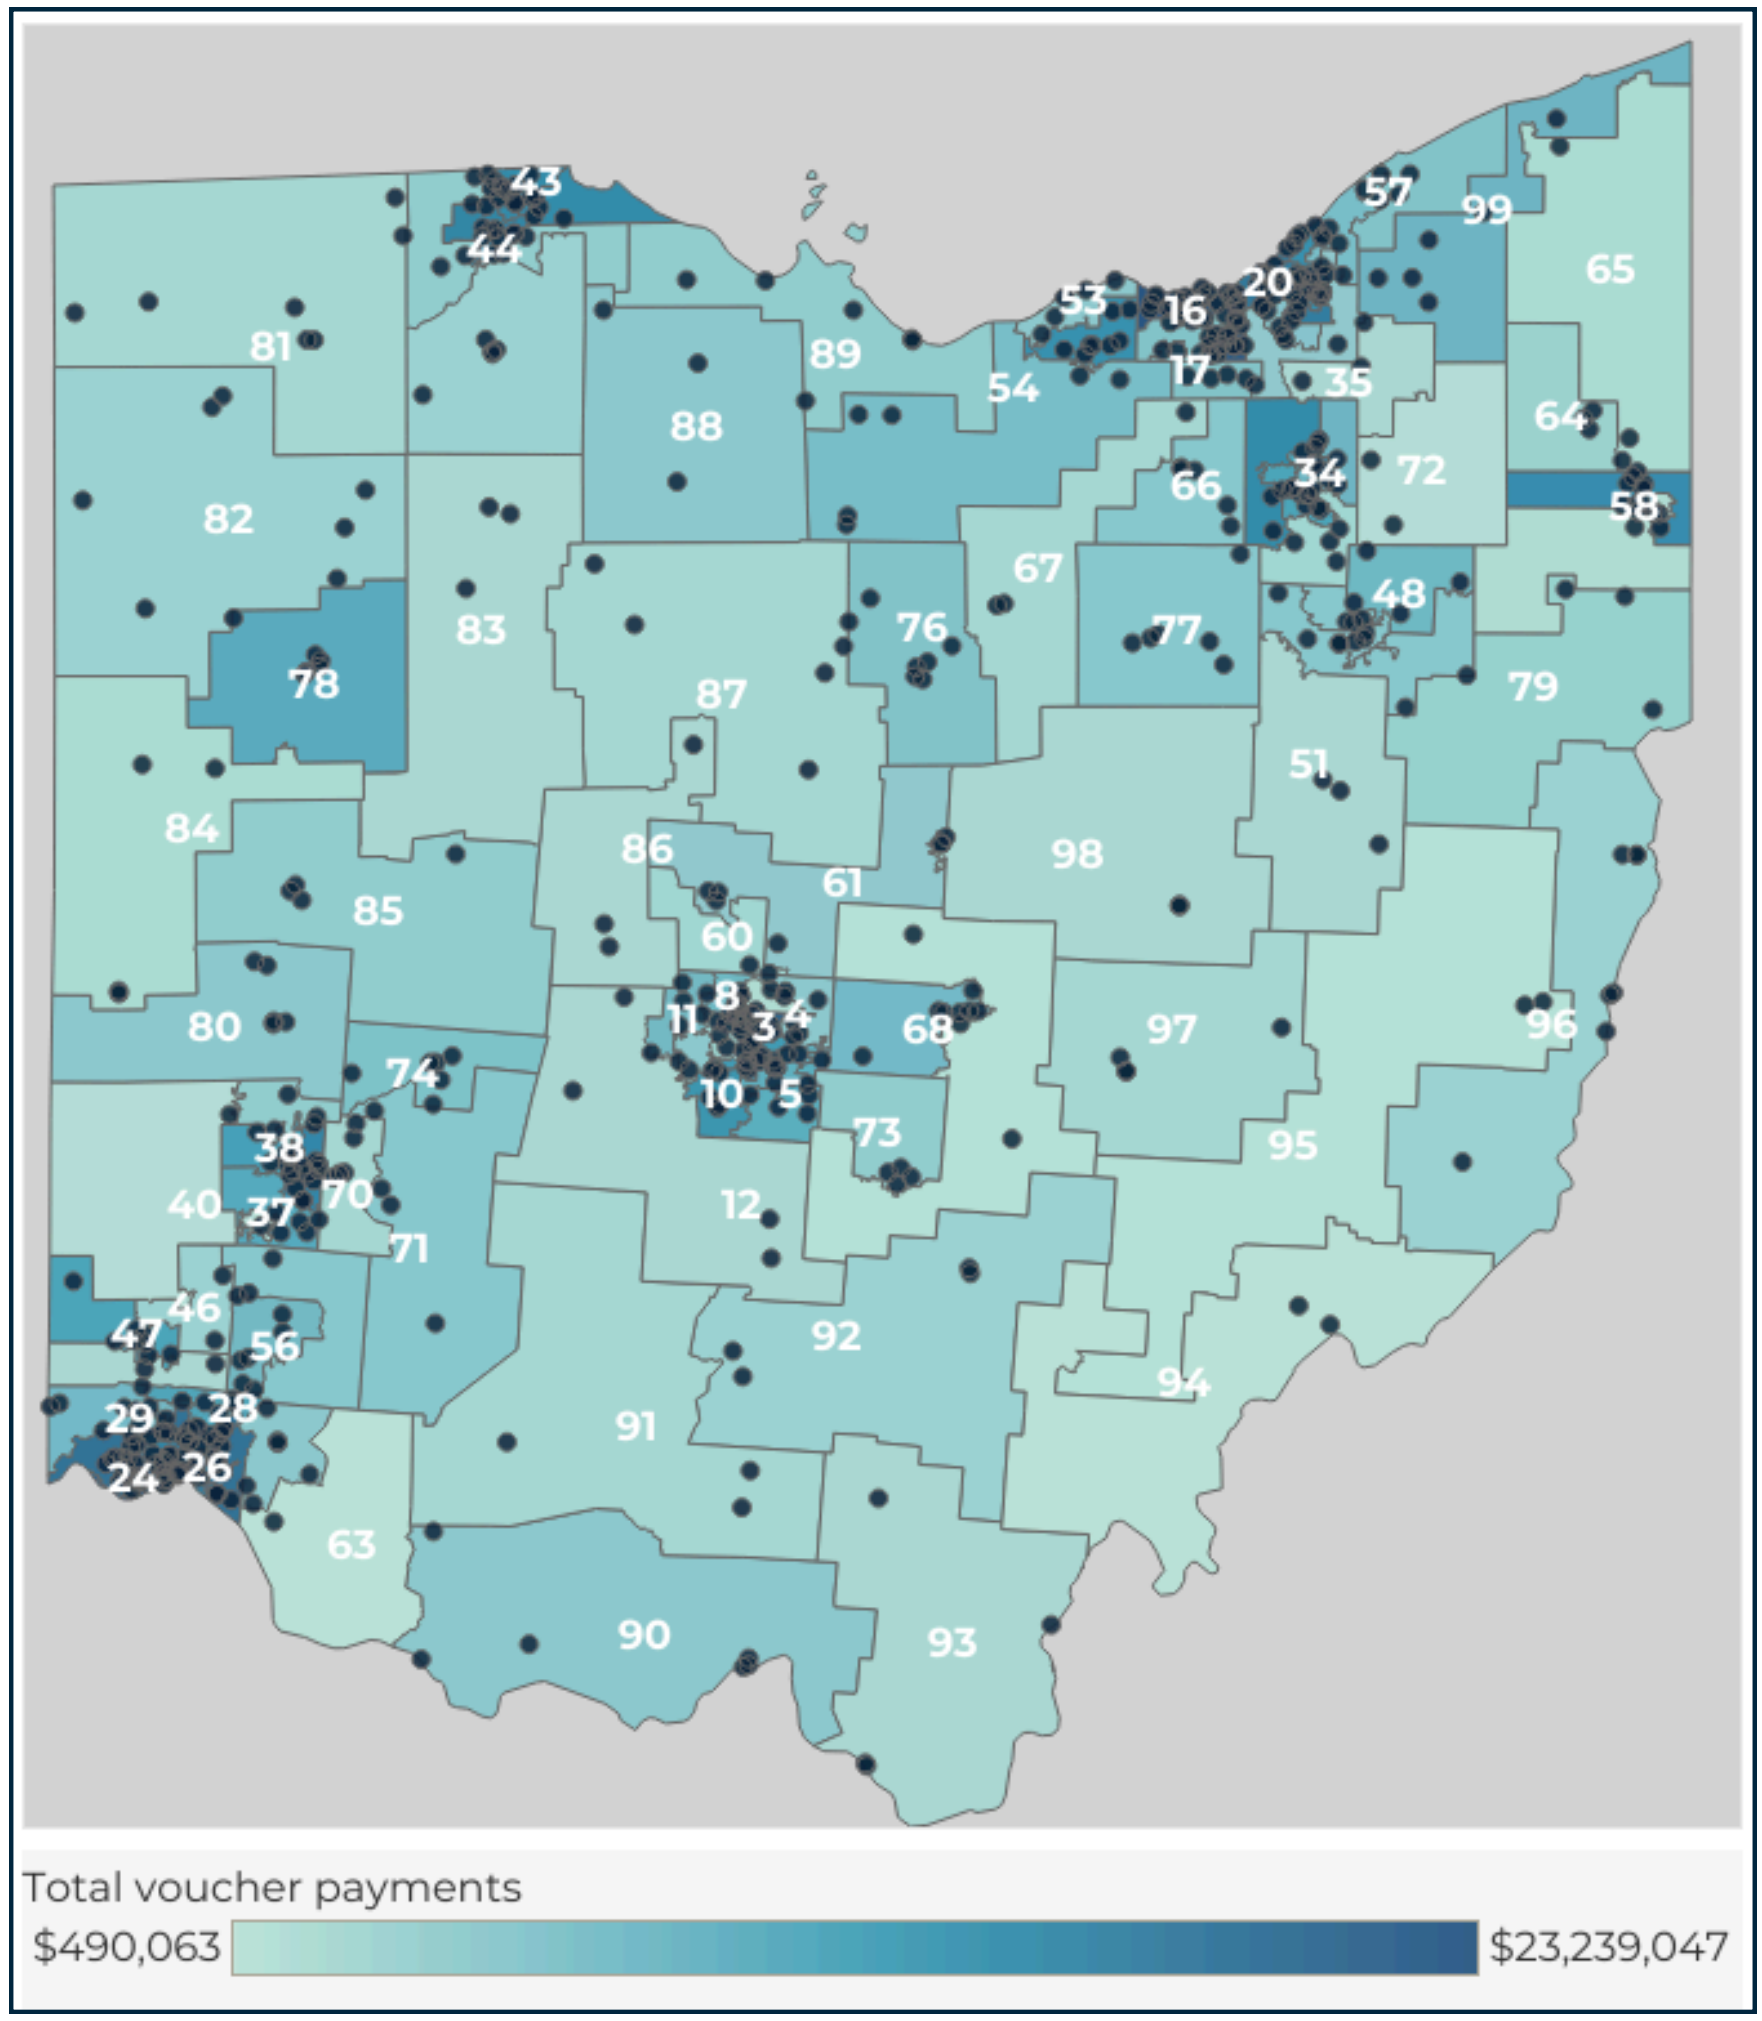
Email them at rep36@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6008

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 37

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 37 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 2,287

voucher students.

In District 37 there are 23

public schools attended by 13,486

students.

Contact Representative Young and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

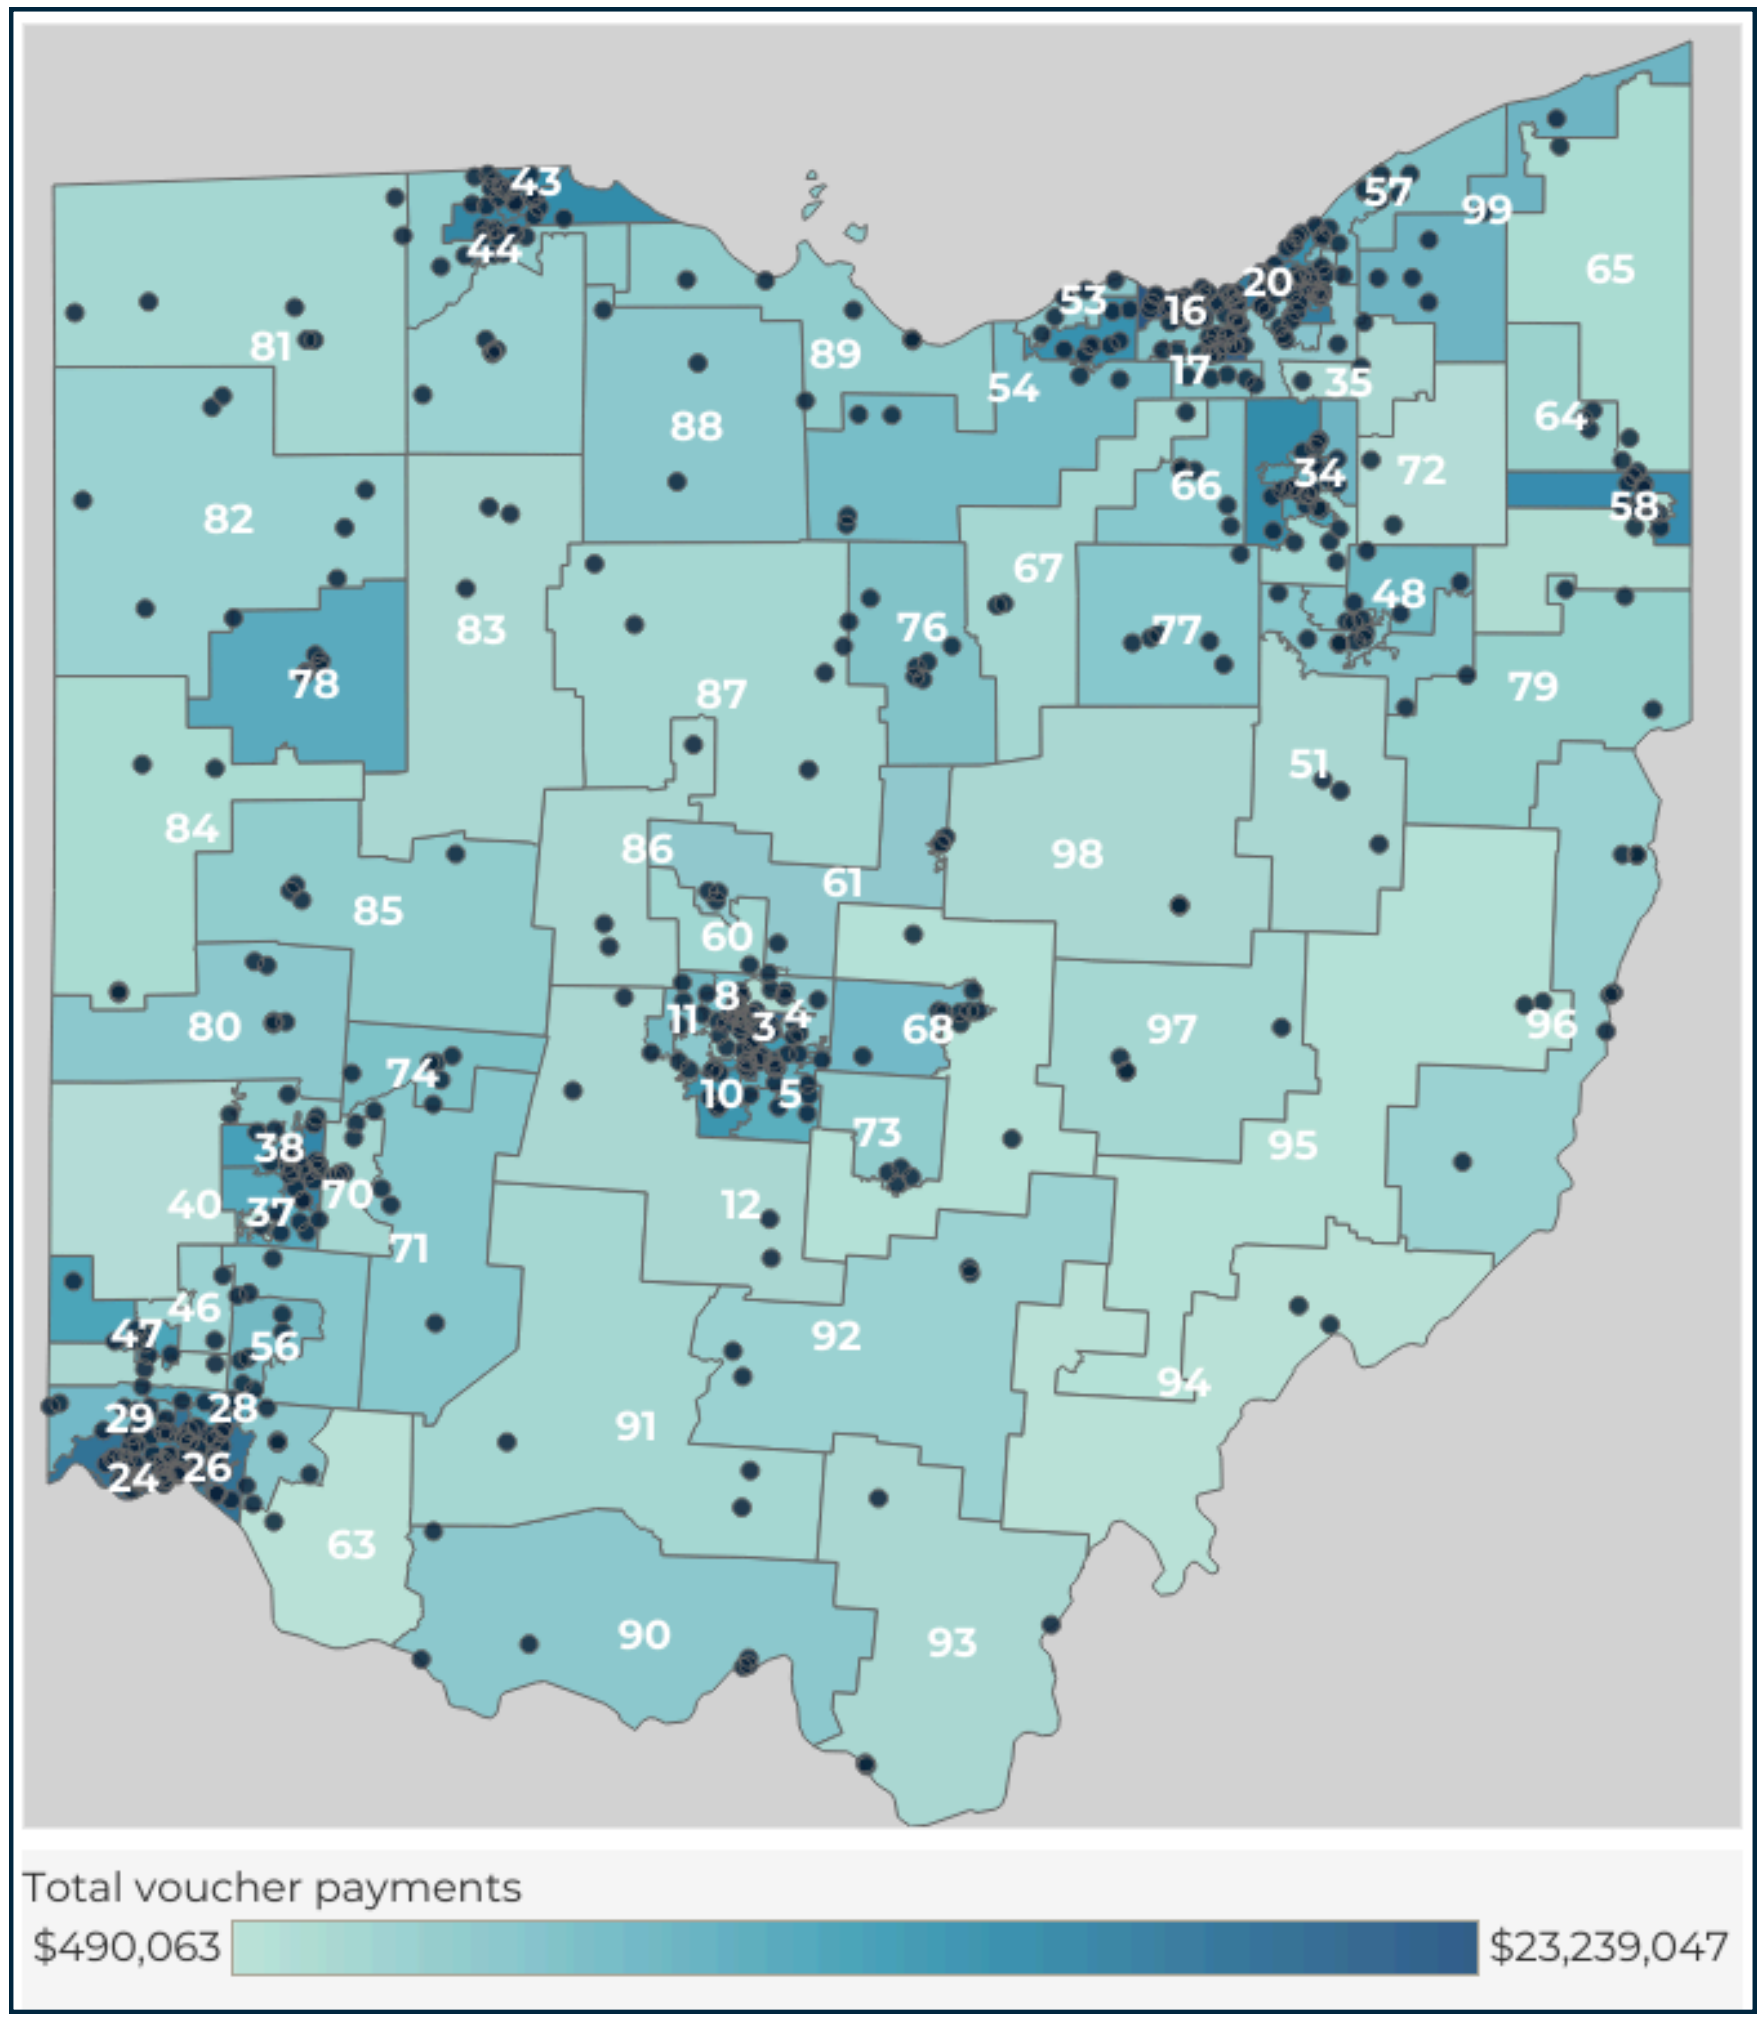
Email them at rep37@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-6504

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 38

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 38 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 1,867

voucher students.

In District 38 there are 25

public schools attended by 10,306

students.

Contact Representative Tims and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

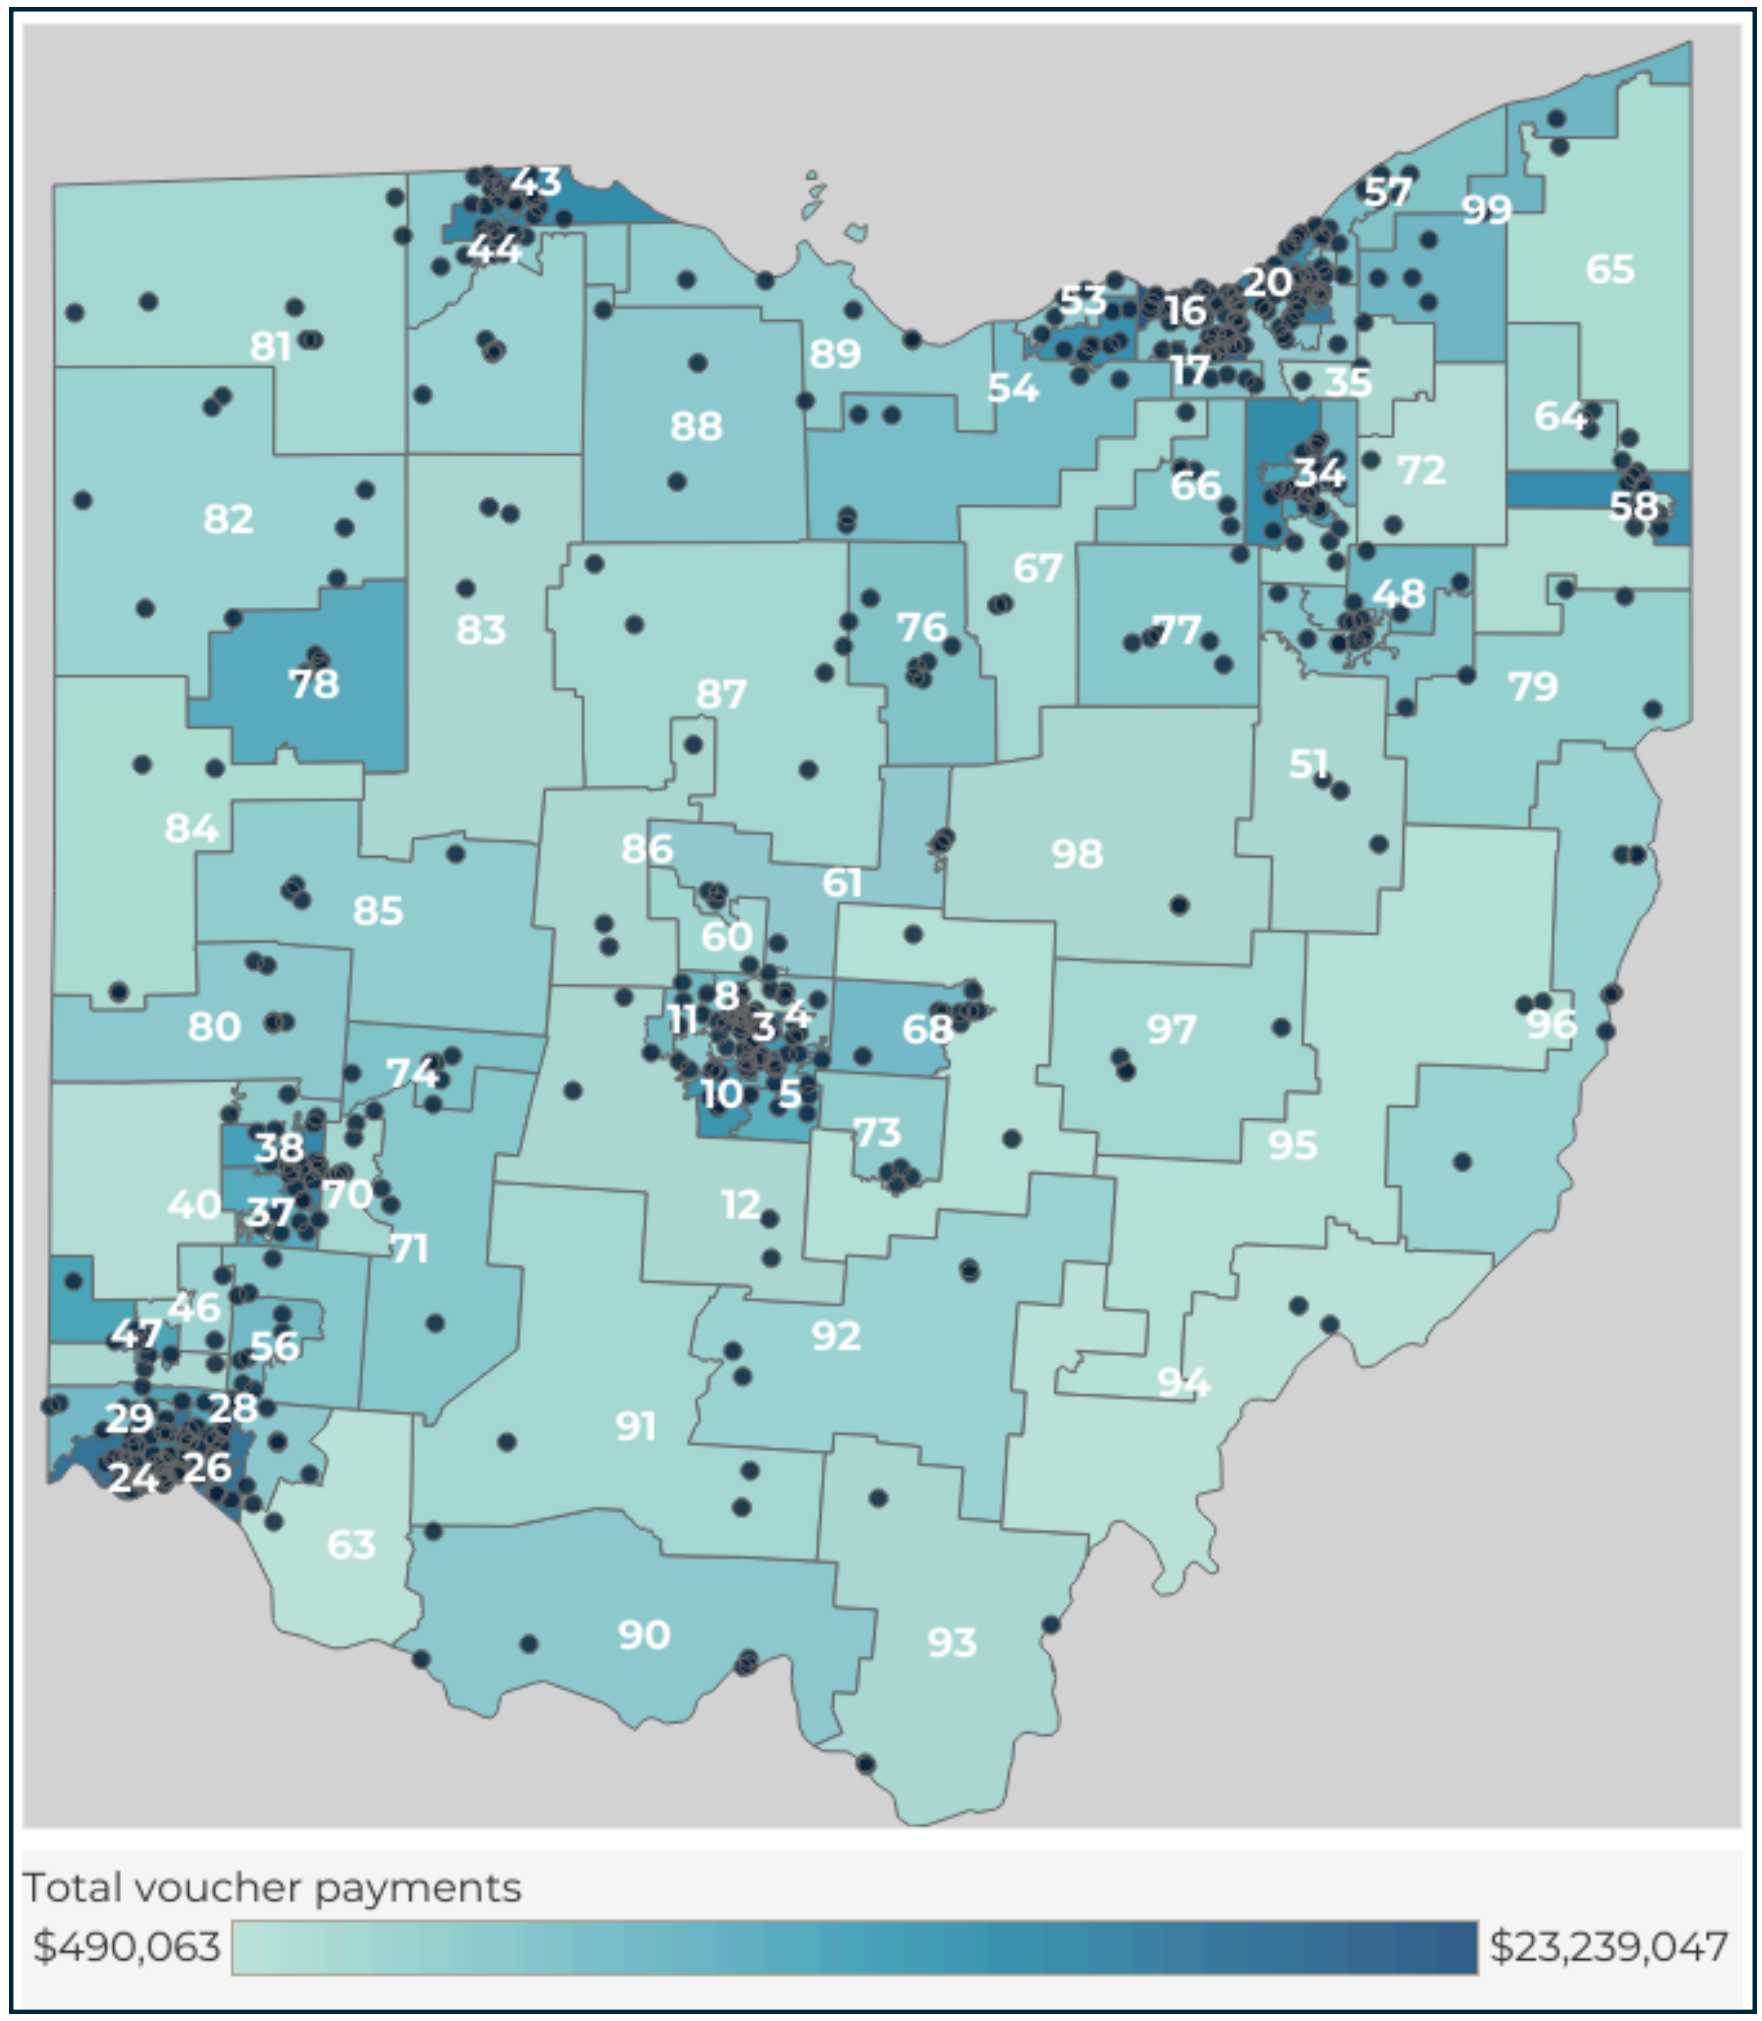
Email them at rep38@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1607

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 39

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 39 there are

4

private voucher schools attended by 773

voucher students.

In District 39 there are 24

public schools attended by 13,763

students.

Contact Representative Plummer and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

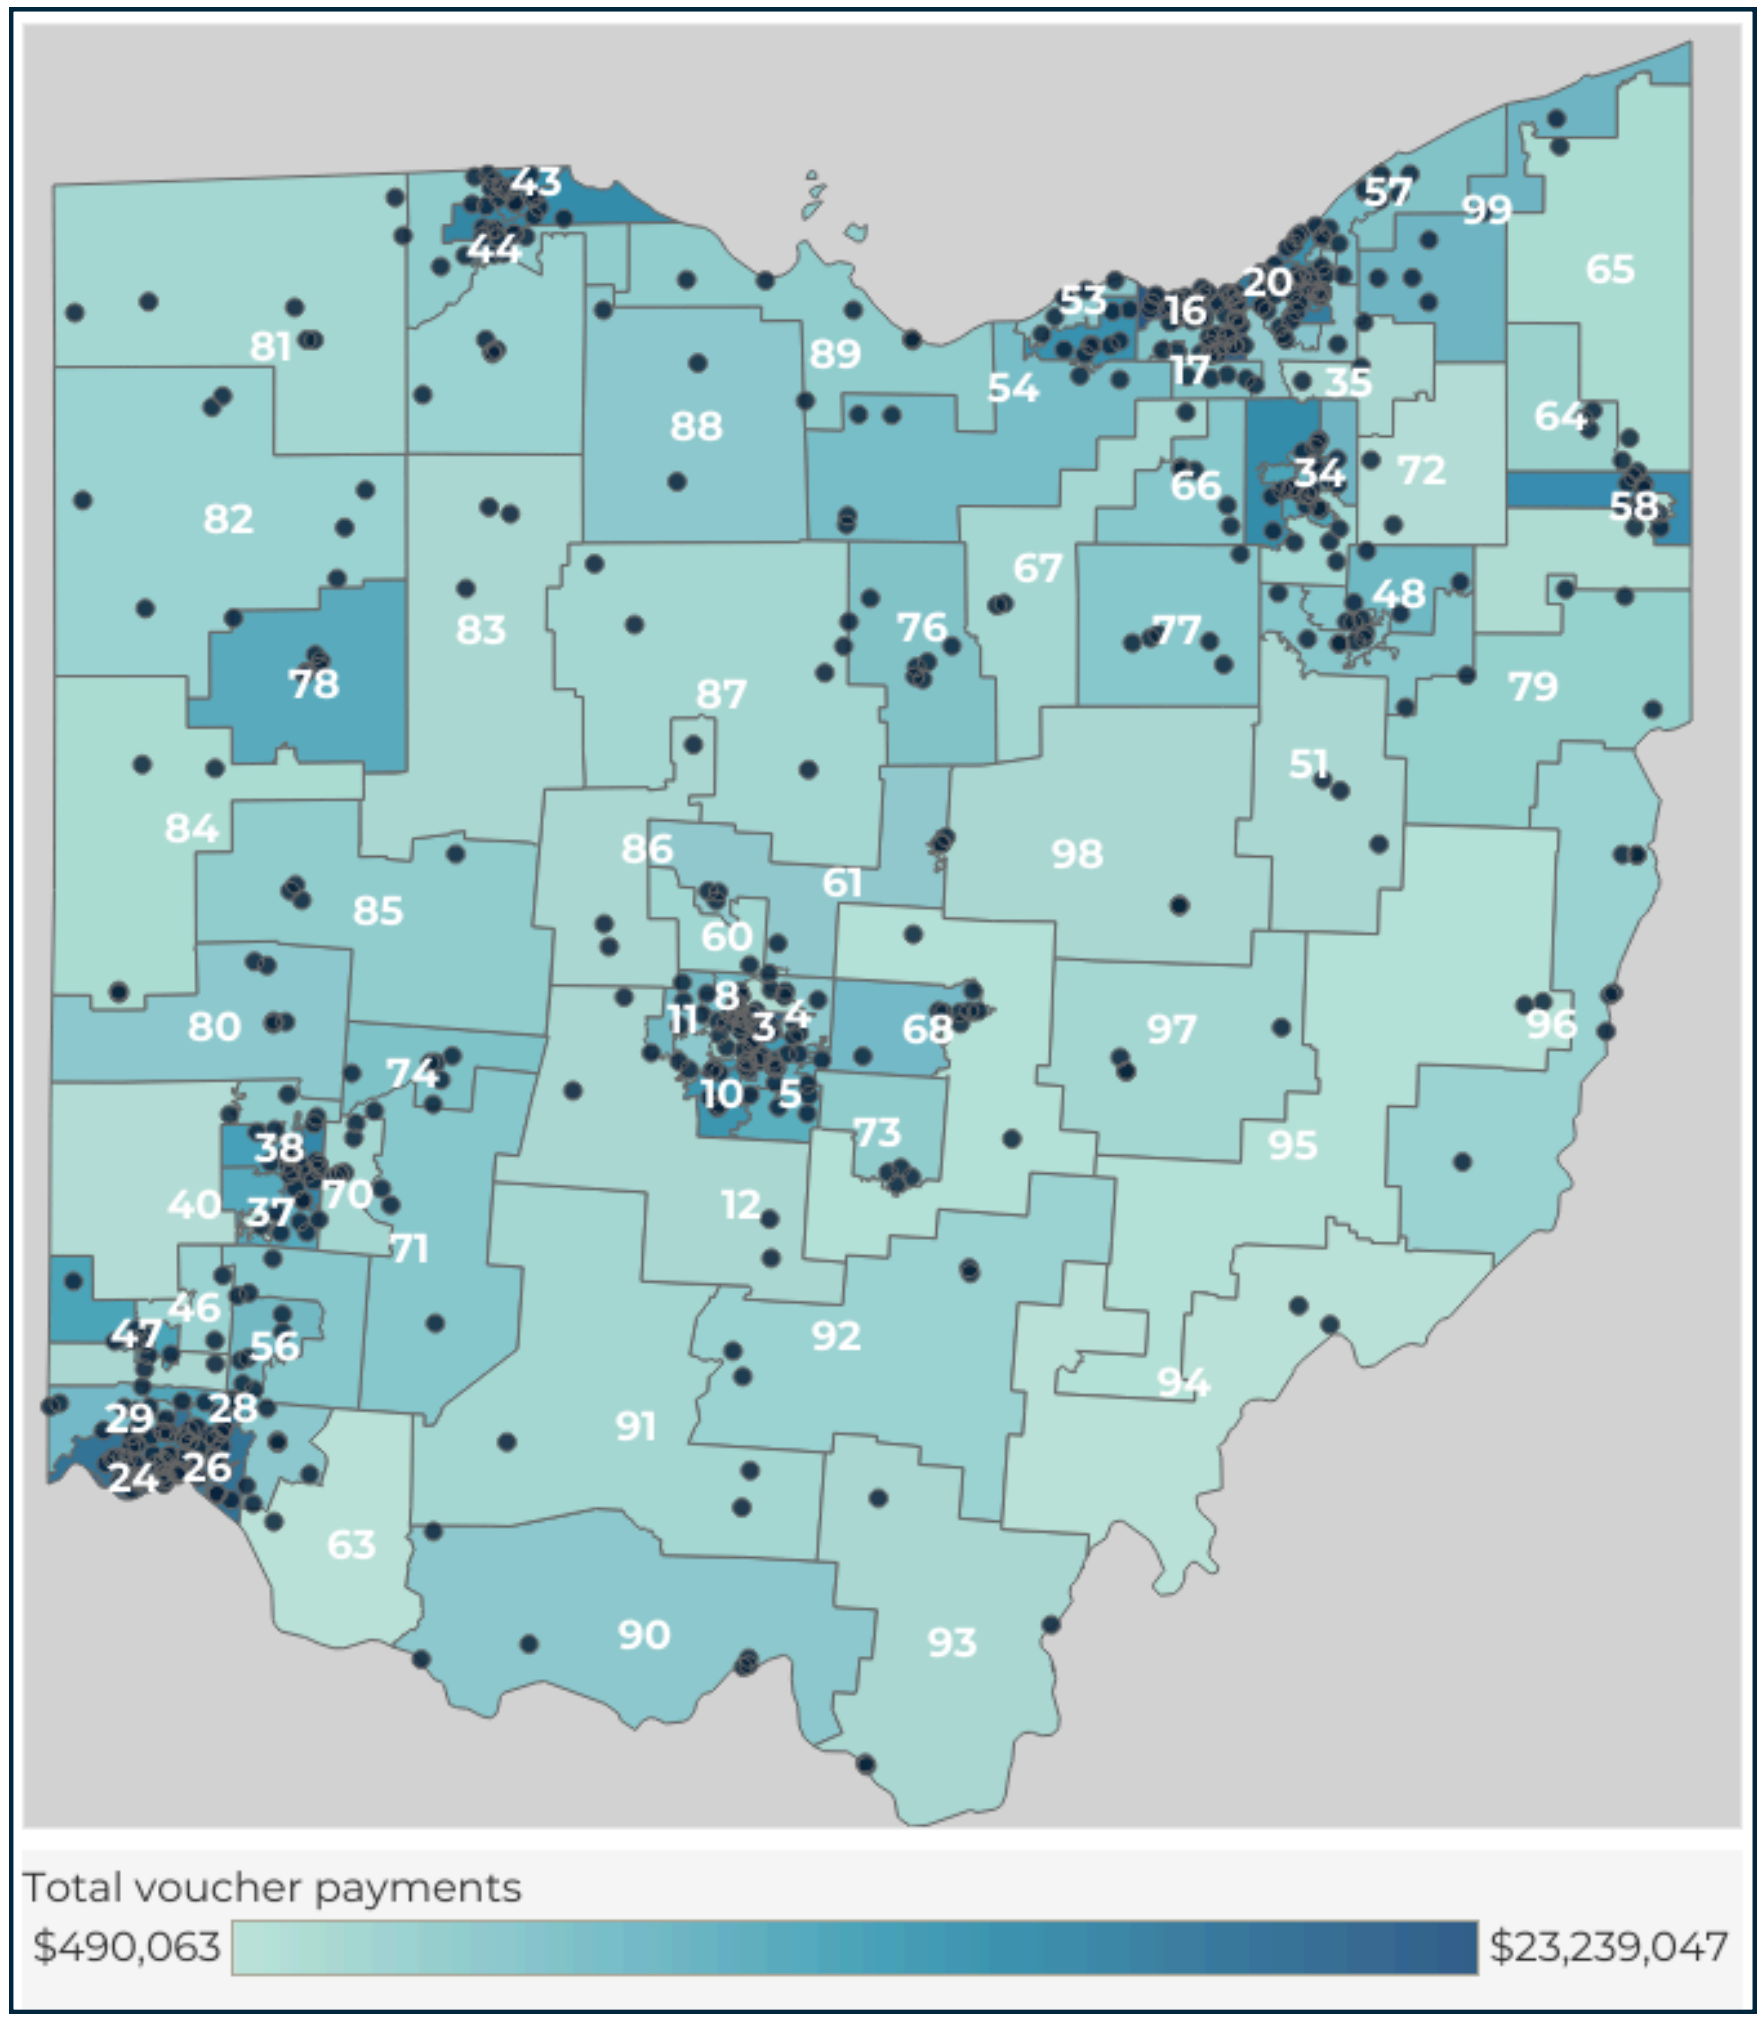
Email them at rep39@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-8051

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 4

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 4 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,150

voucher students.

In District 4 there are 28

public schools attended by 19,228

students.

Contact Representative Brown and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

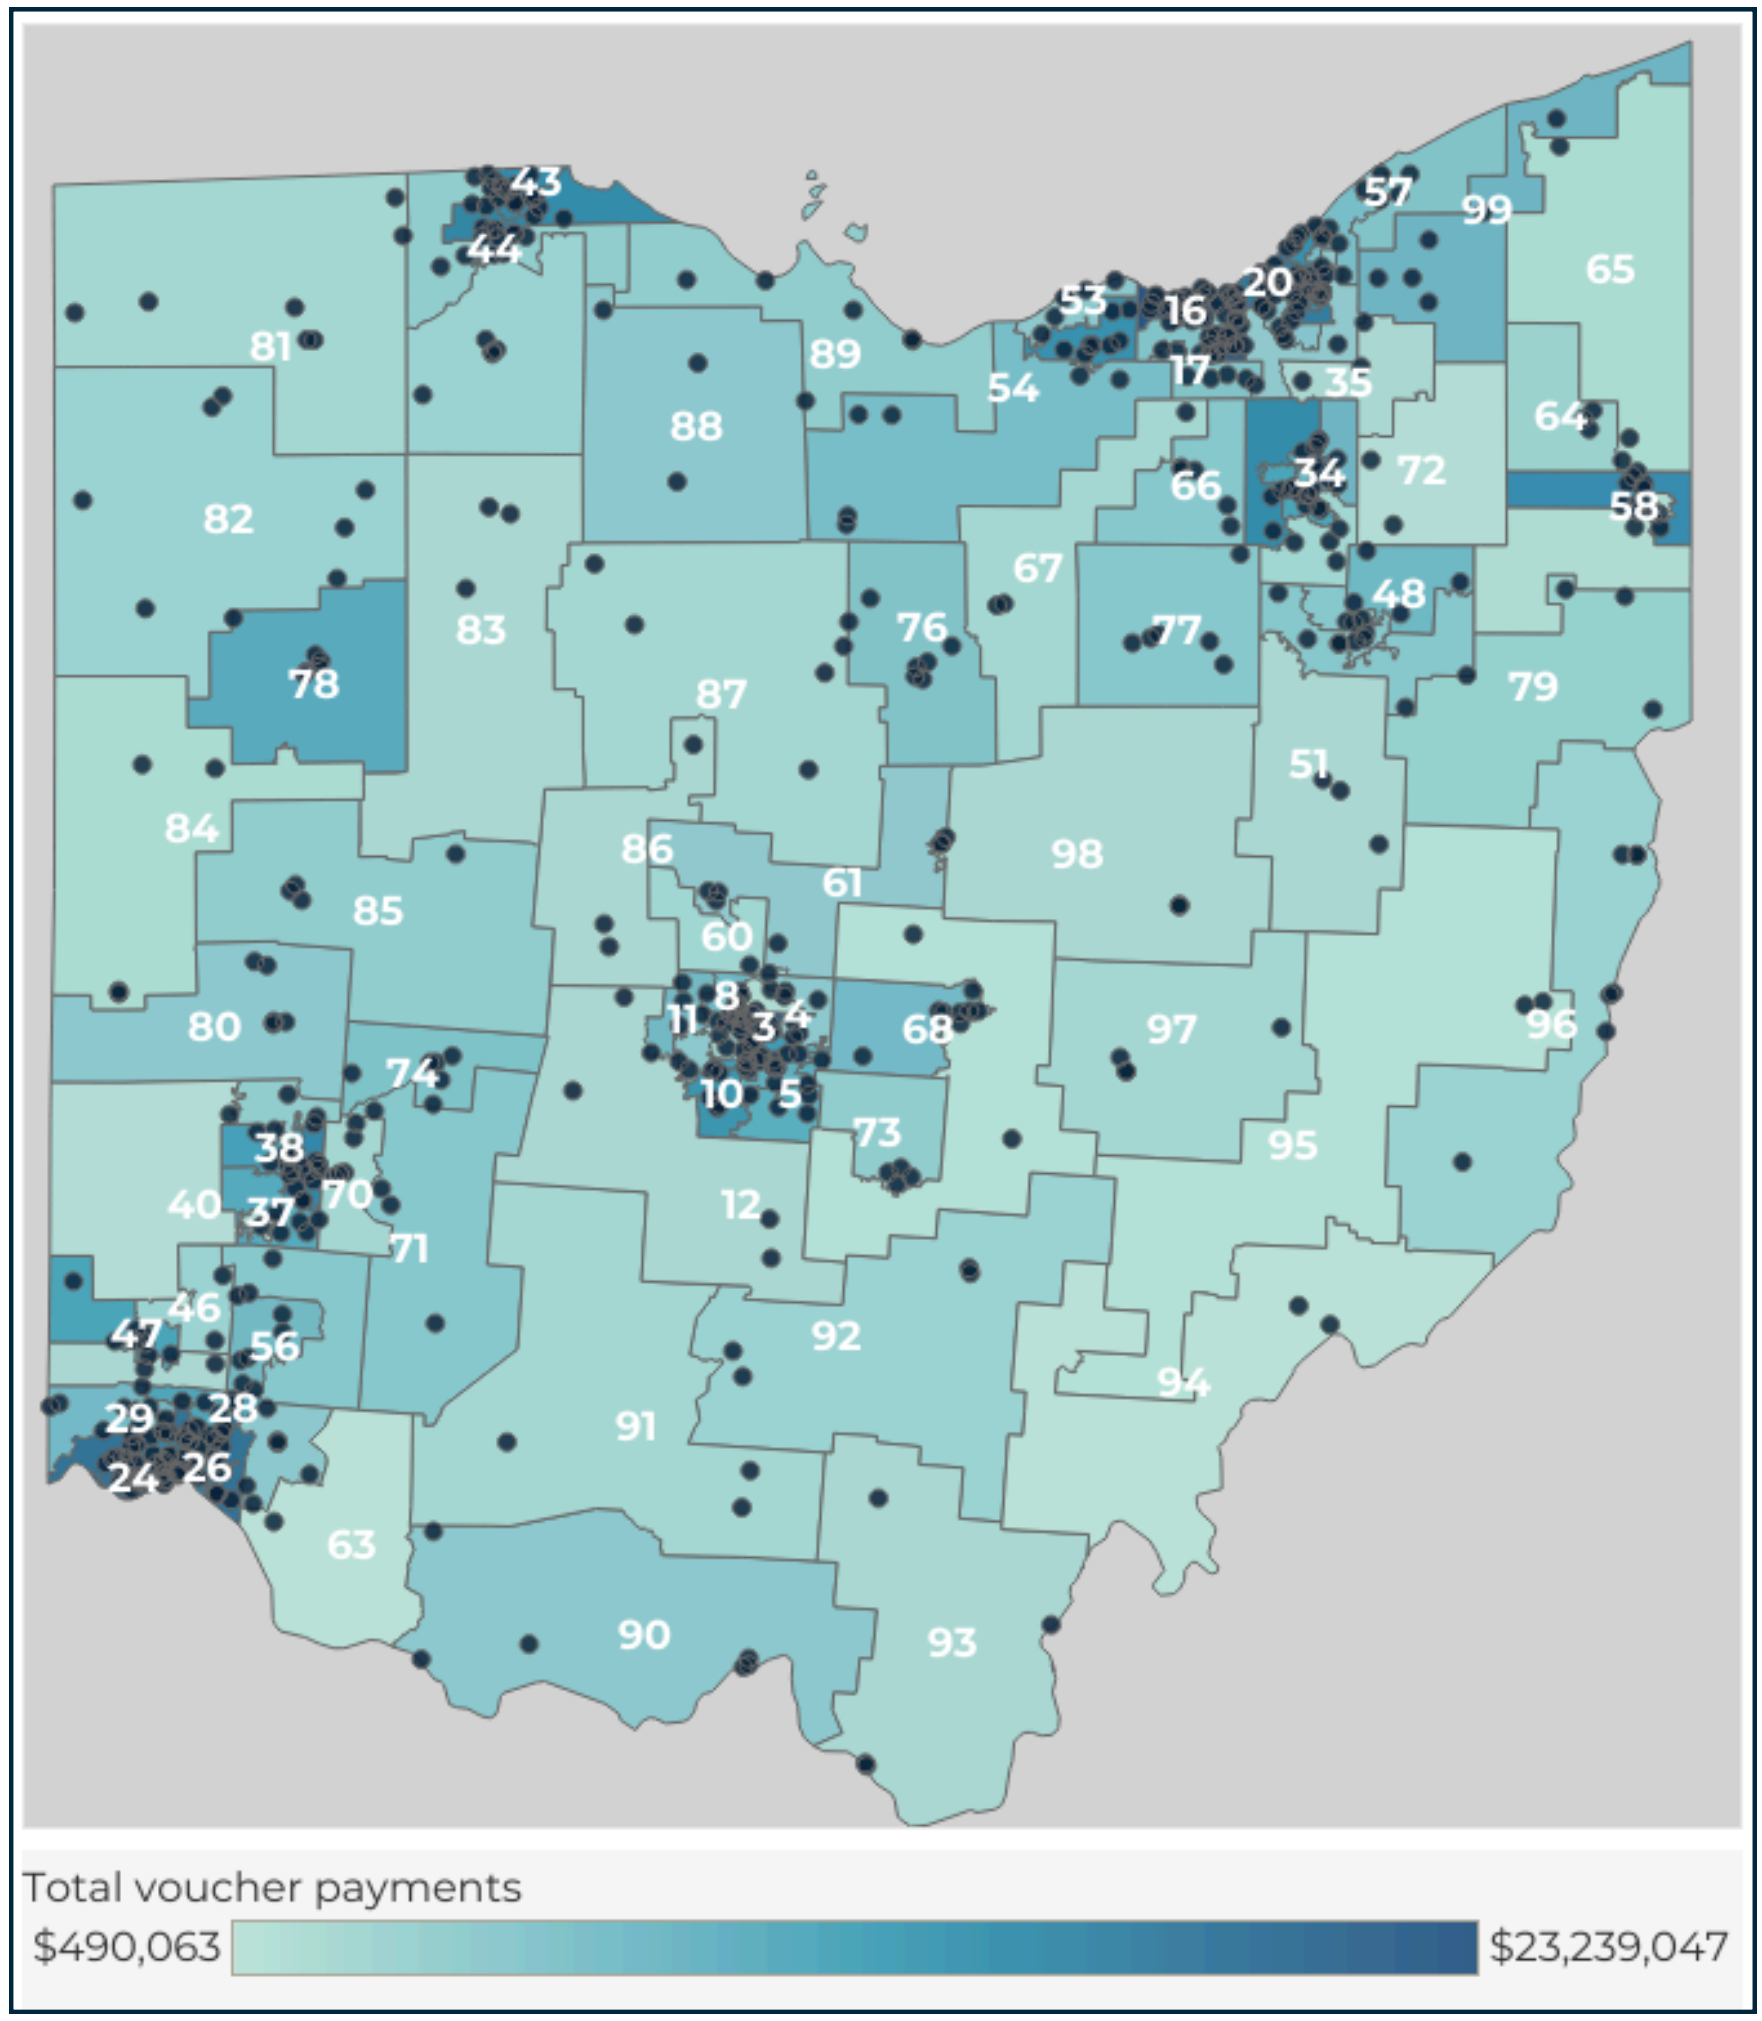
Email them at Rep04@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-4847

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 40

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 40 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 226

voucher students.

In District 40 there are 40

public schools attended by 16,276

students.

Contact Representative Creech and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

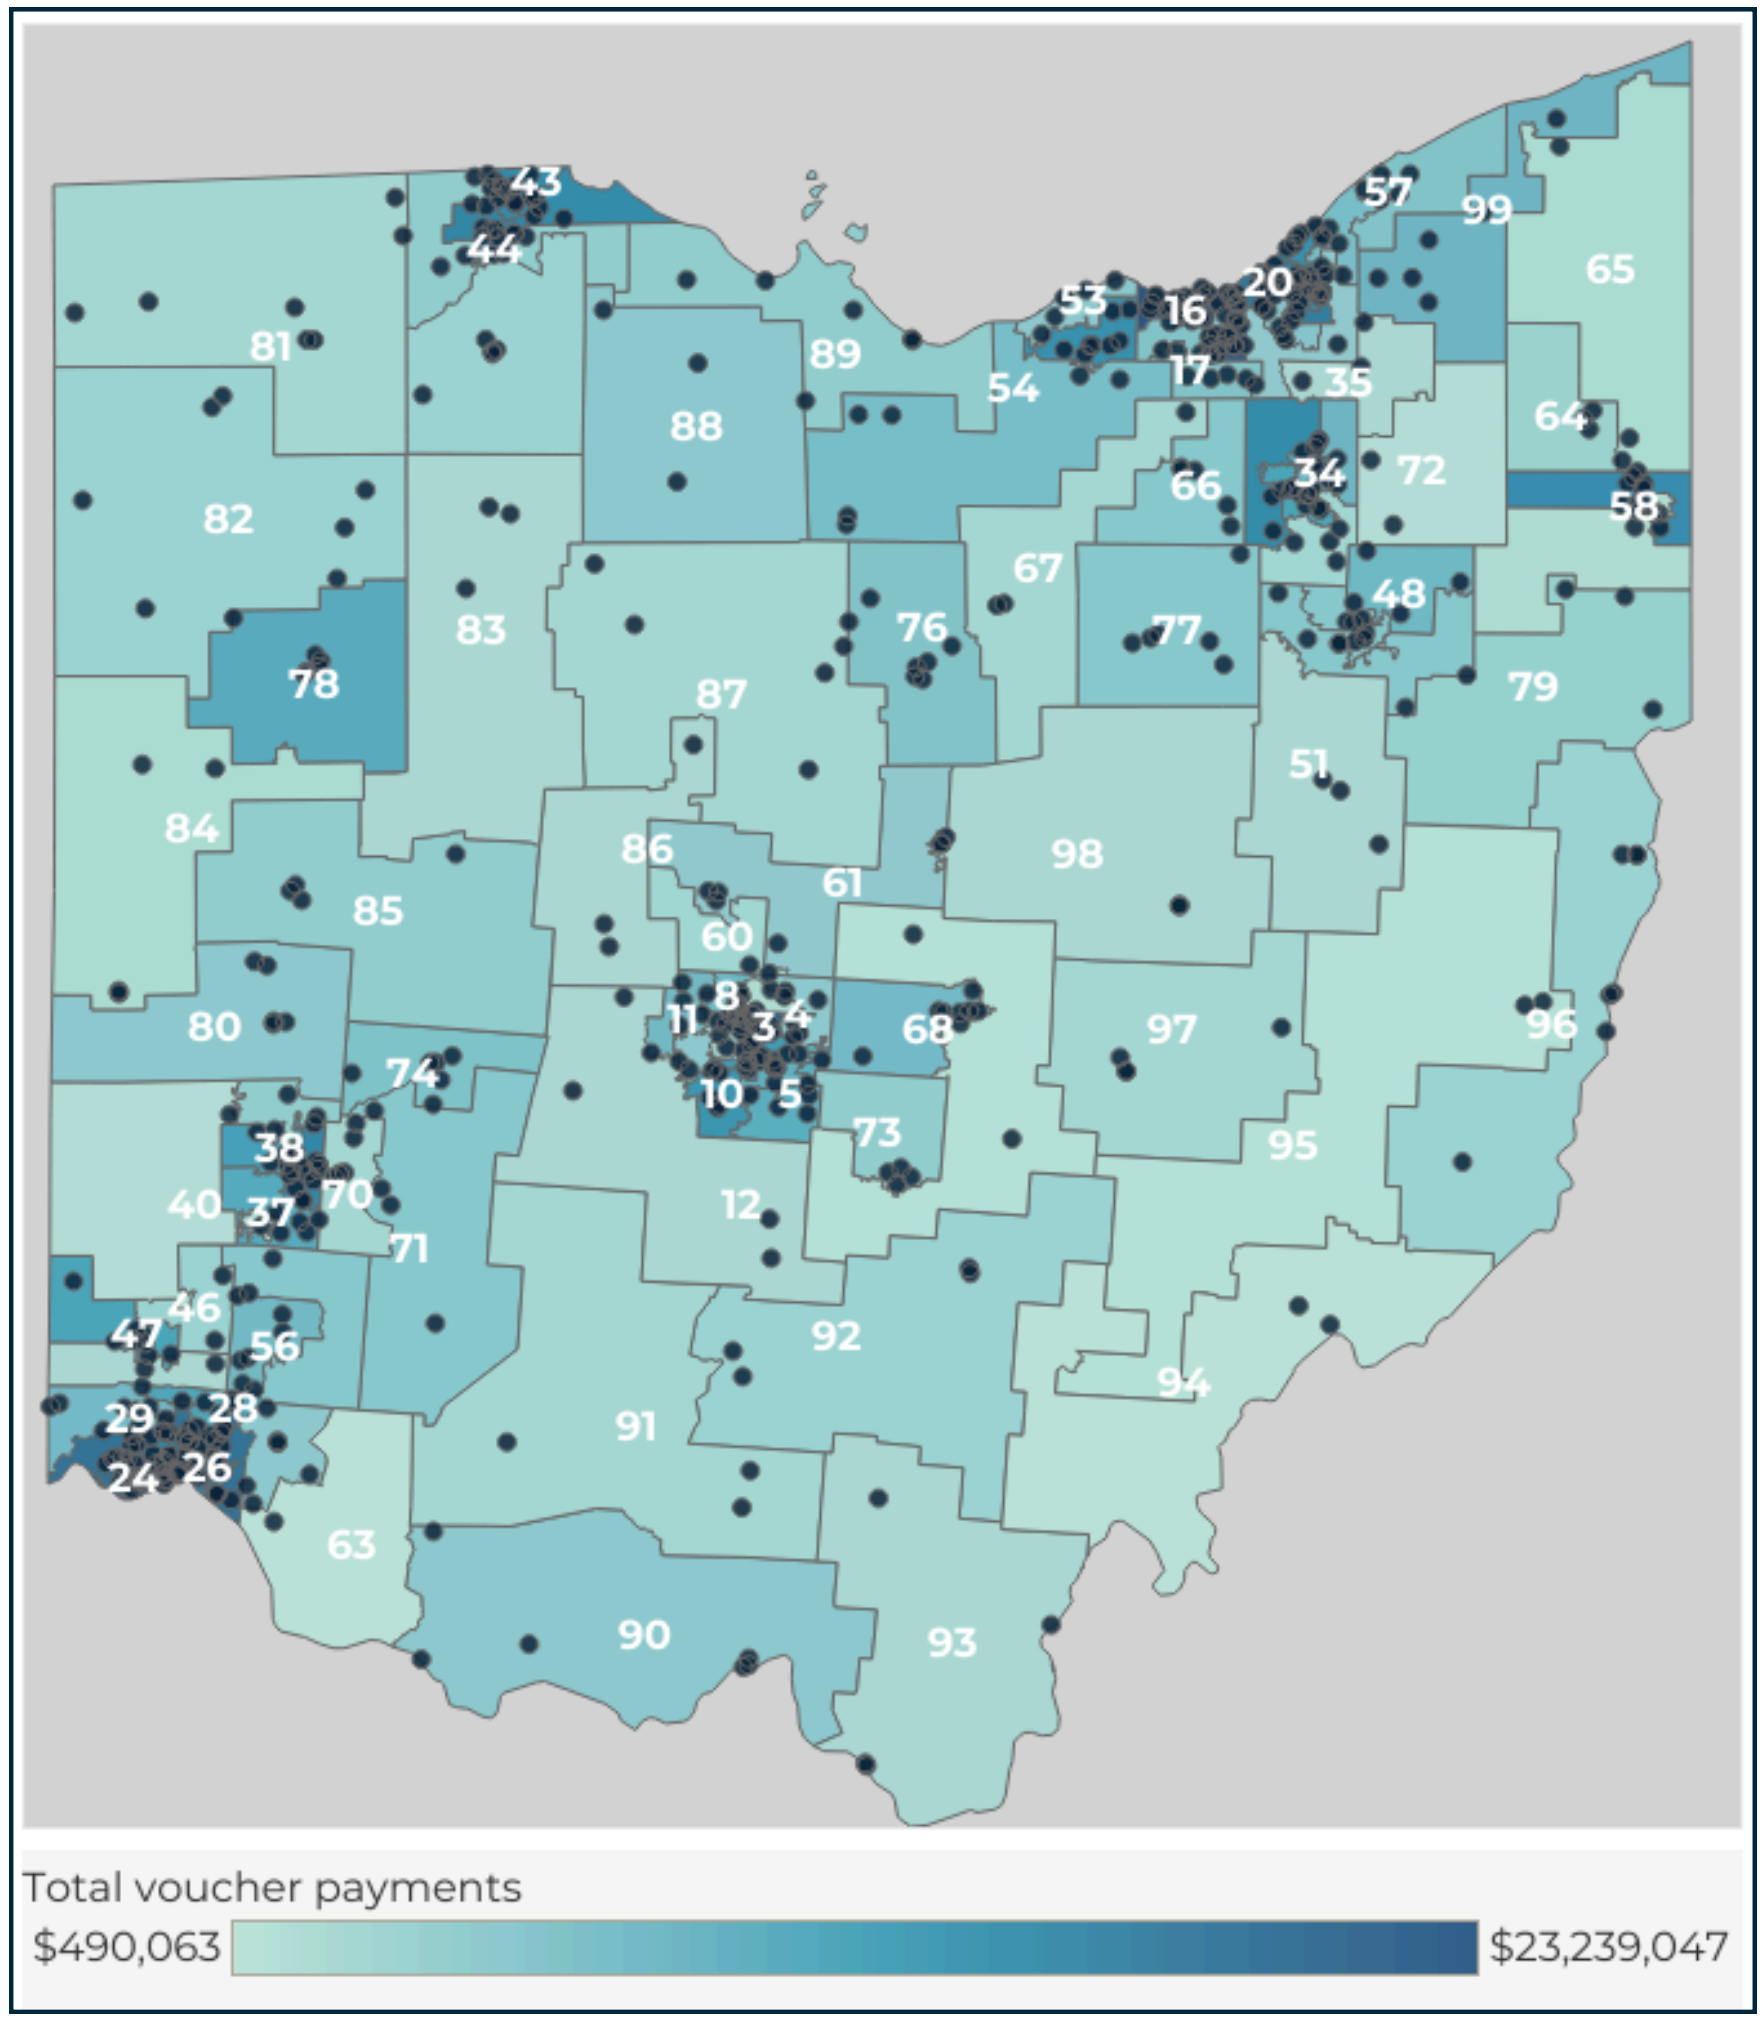
Email them at rep40@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2960

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 41

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 41 there are

10

private voucher schools attended by 2,981

voucher students.

In District 41 there are 24

public schools attended by 10,354

students.

Contact Representative White and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

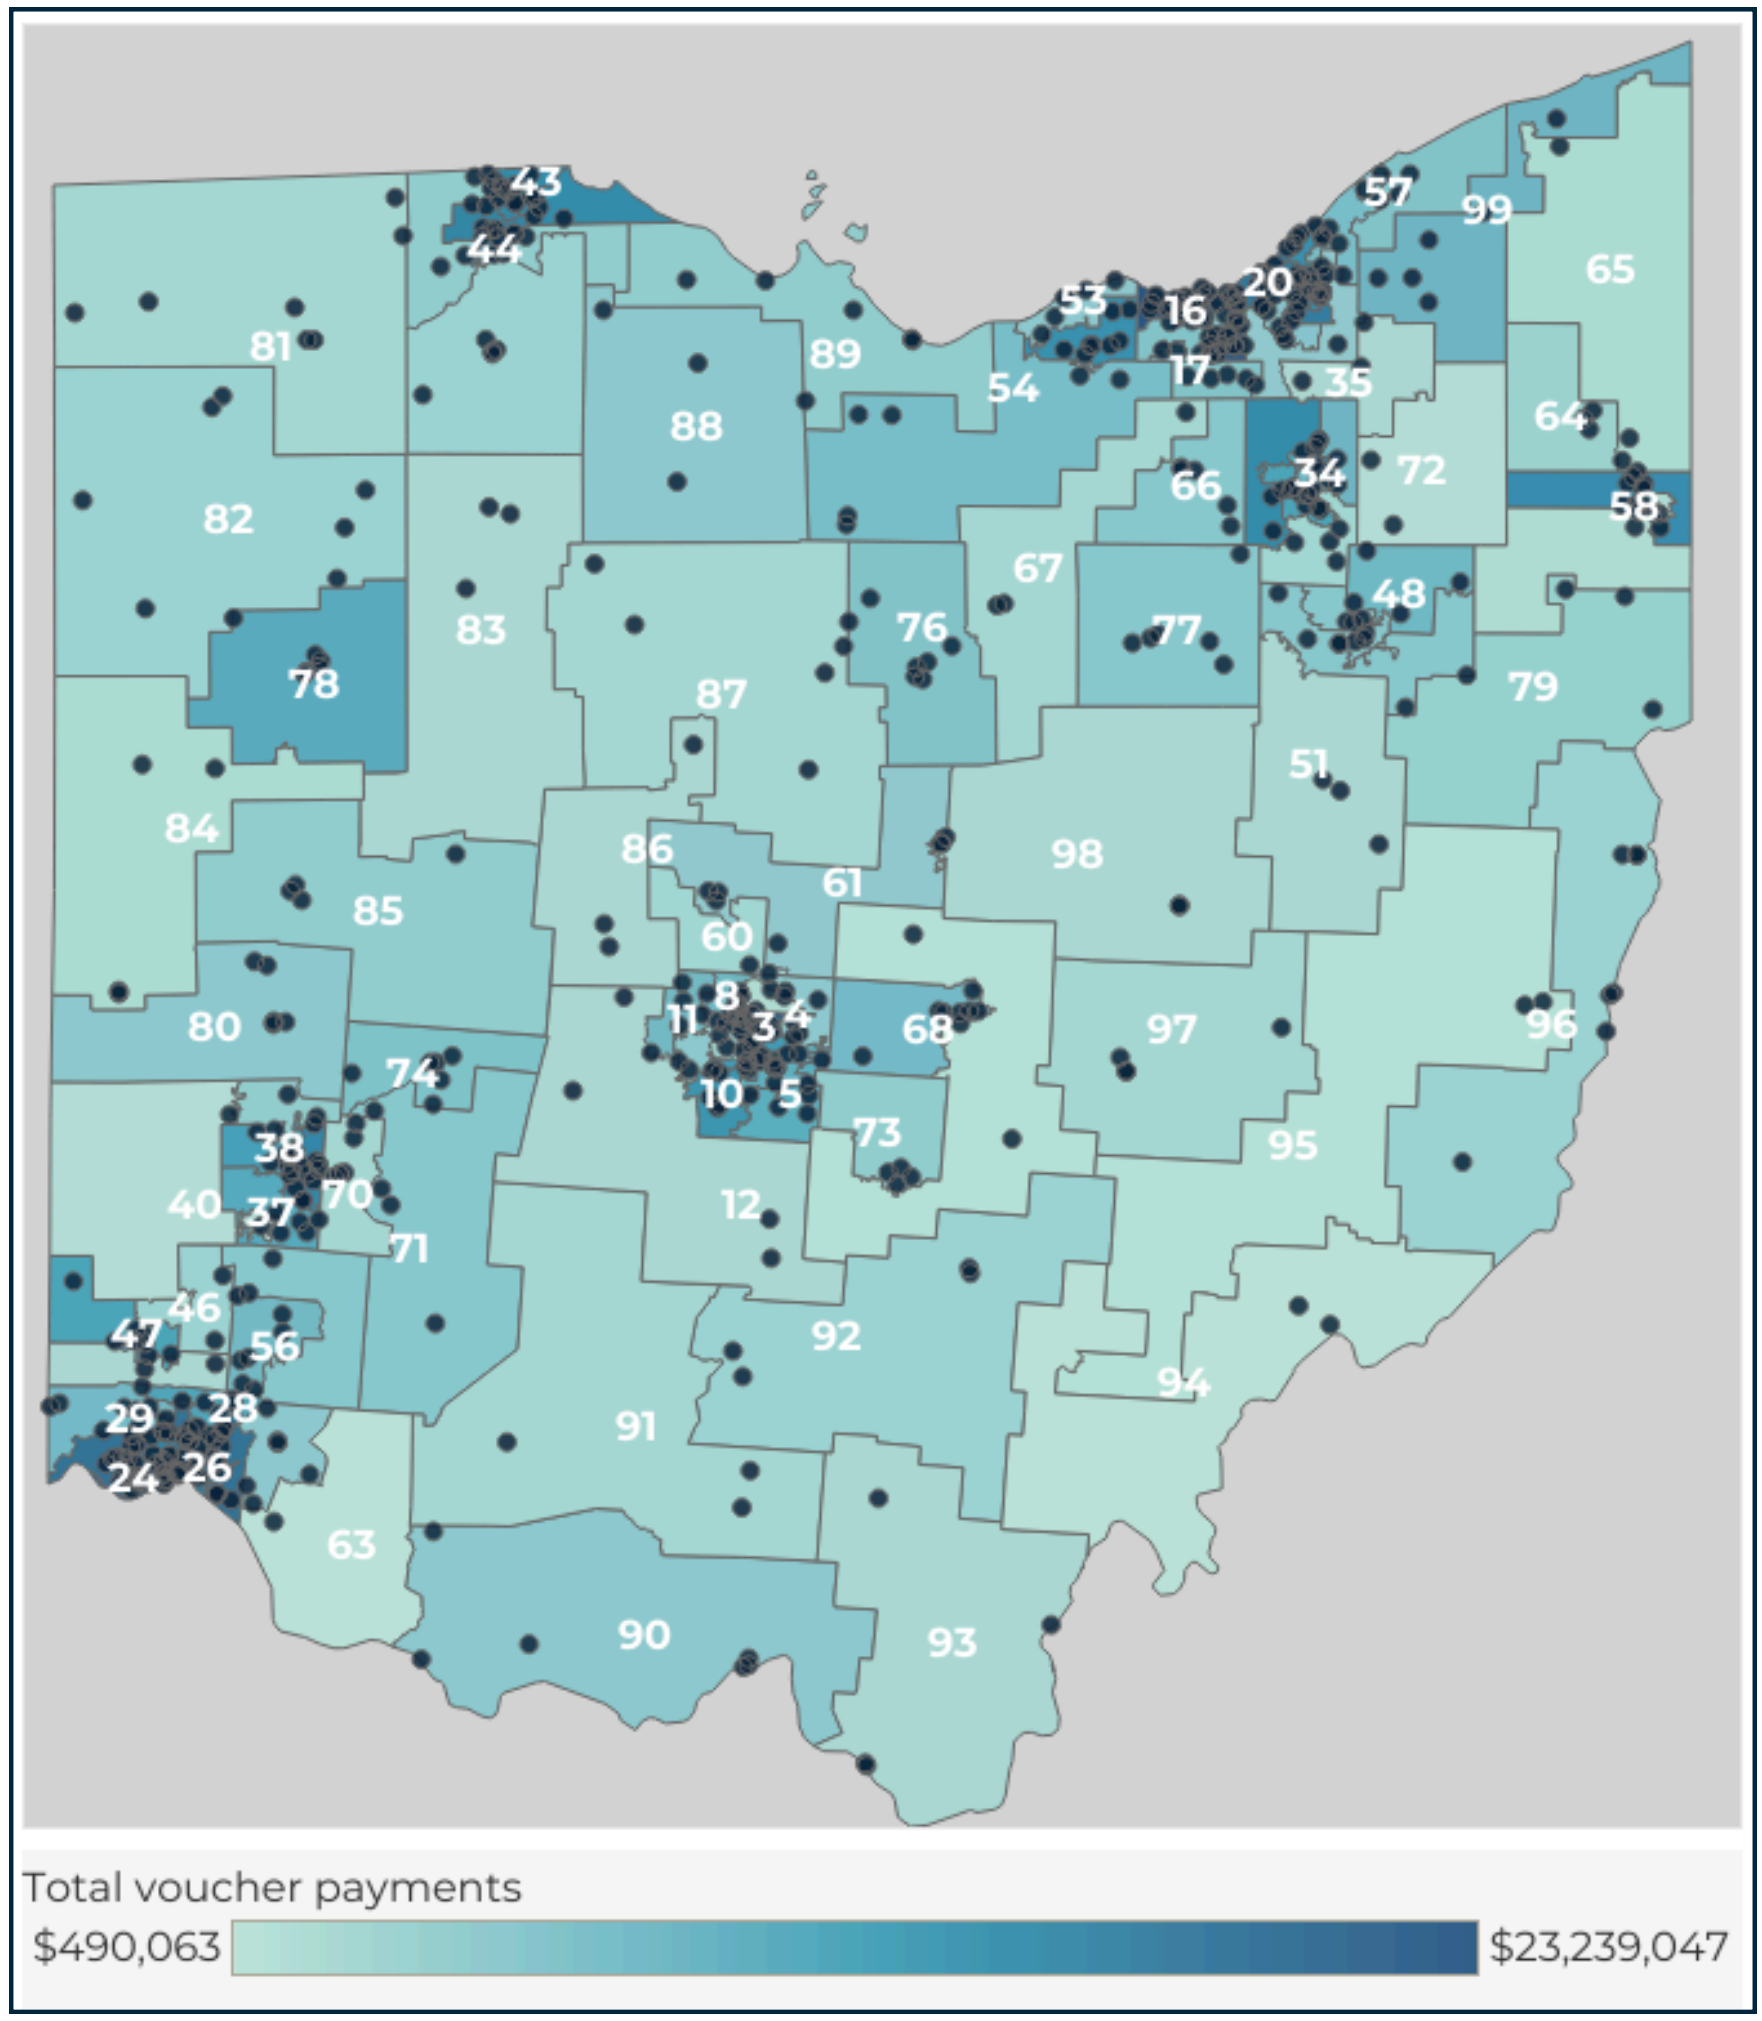
Email them at rep41@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1731

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 42

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 42 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 2,241

voucher students.

In District 42 there are 32

public schools attended by 11,647

students.

Contact Representative Rogers and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

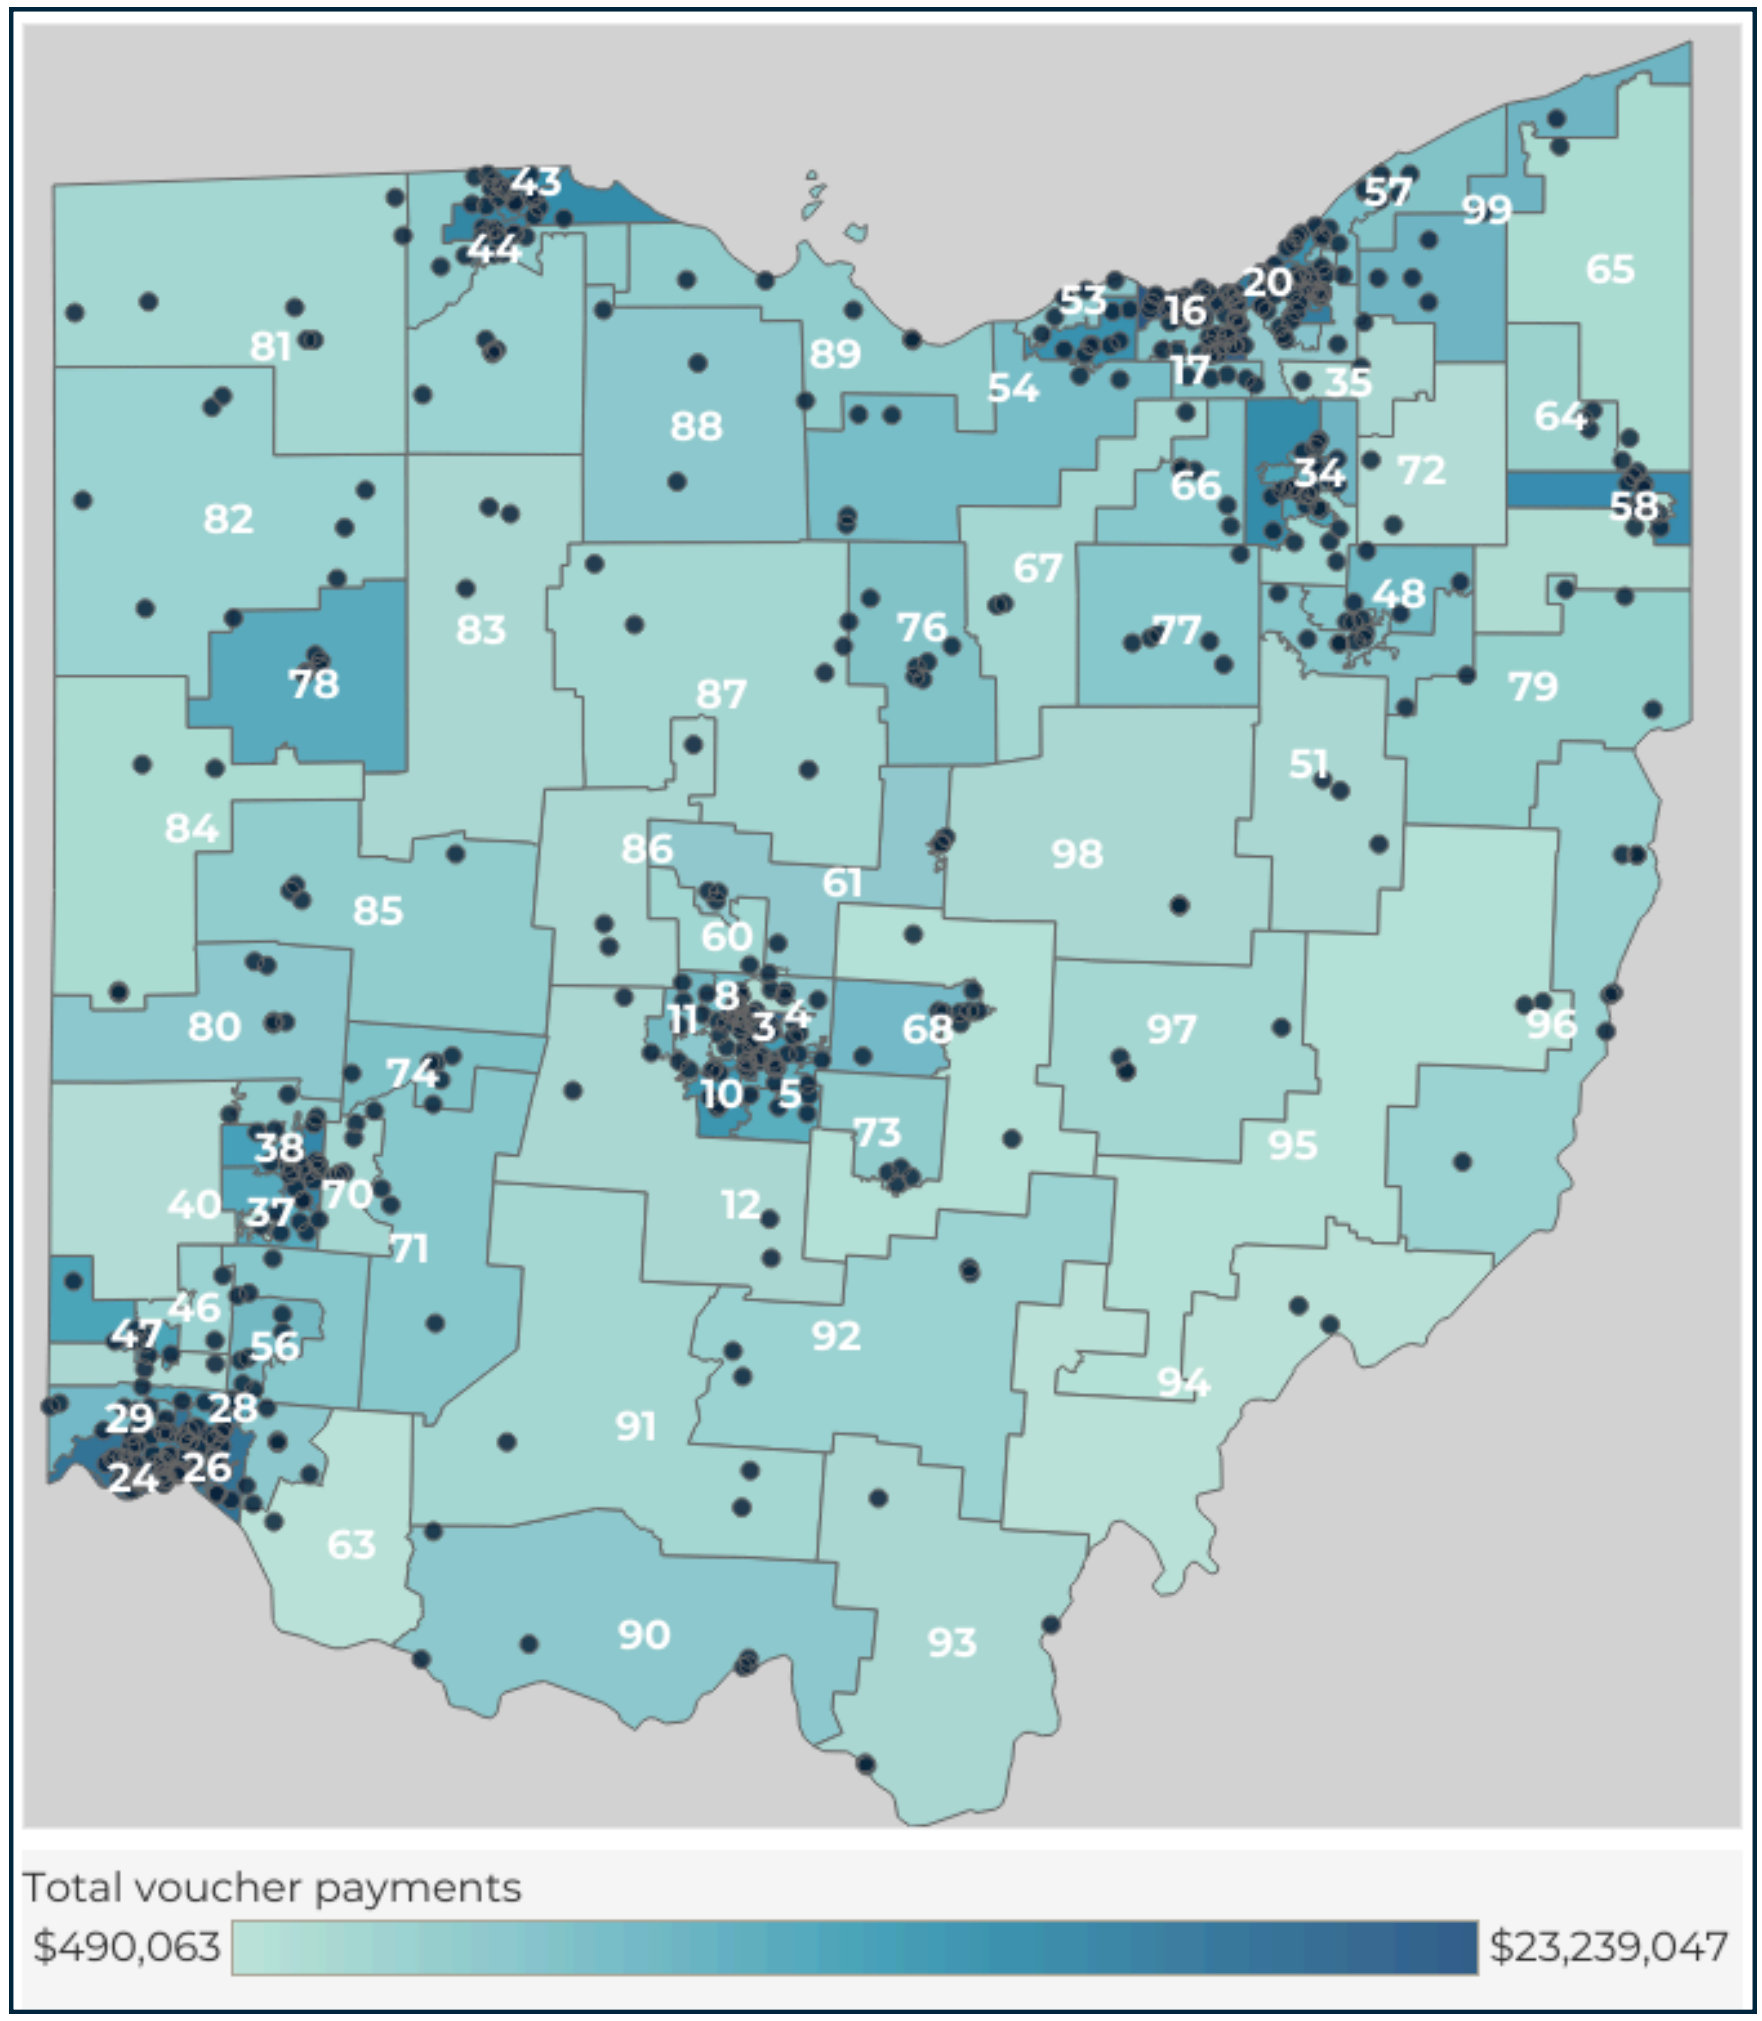
Email them at Rep42@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1401

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 43

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 43 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 2,480

voucher students.

In District 43 there are 28

public schools attended by 14,254

students.

Contact Representative Grim and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

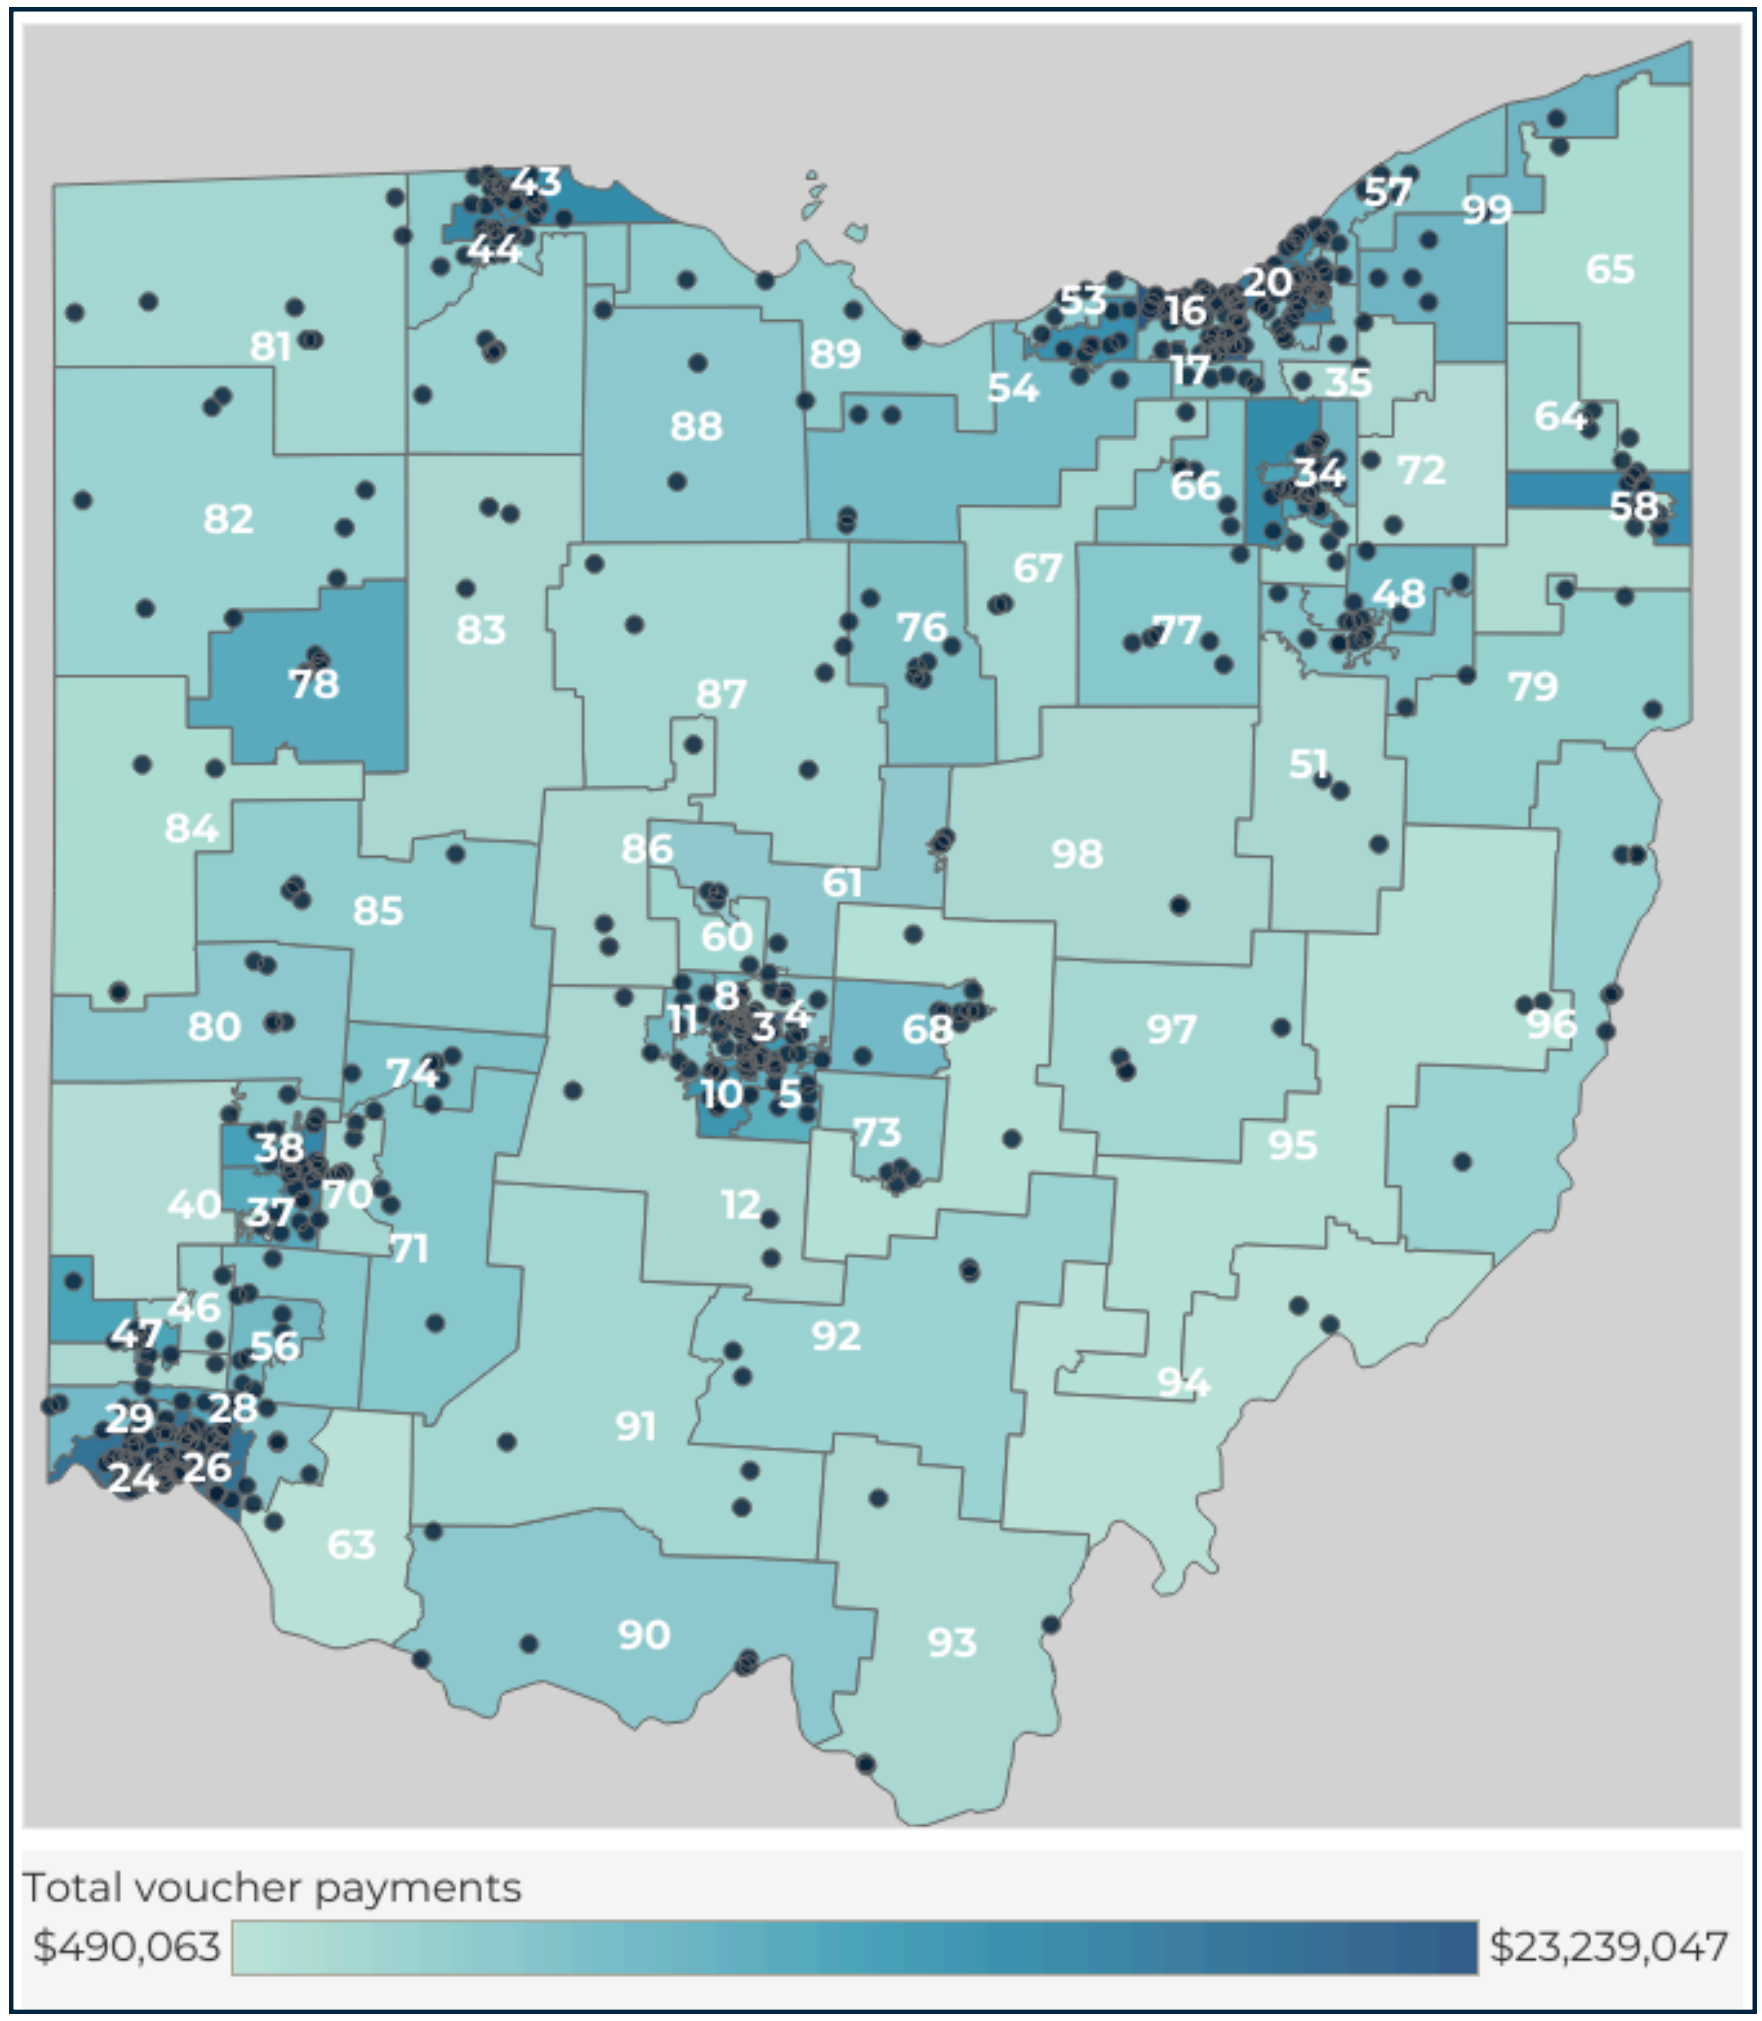
Email them at rep43@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6017

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 44

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 44 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 990

voucher students.

In District 44 there are 27

public schools attended by 15,402

students.

Contact Representative Williams and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

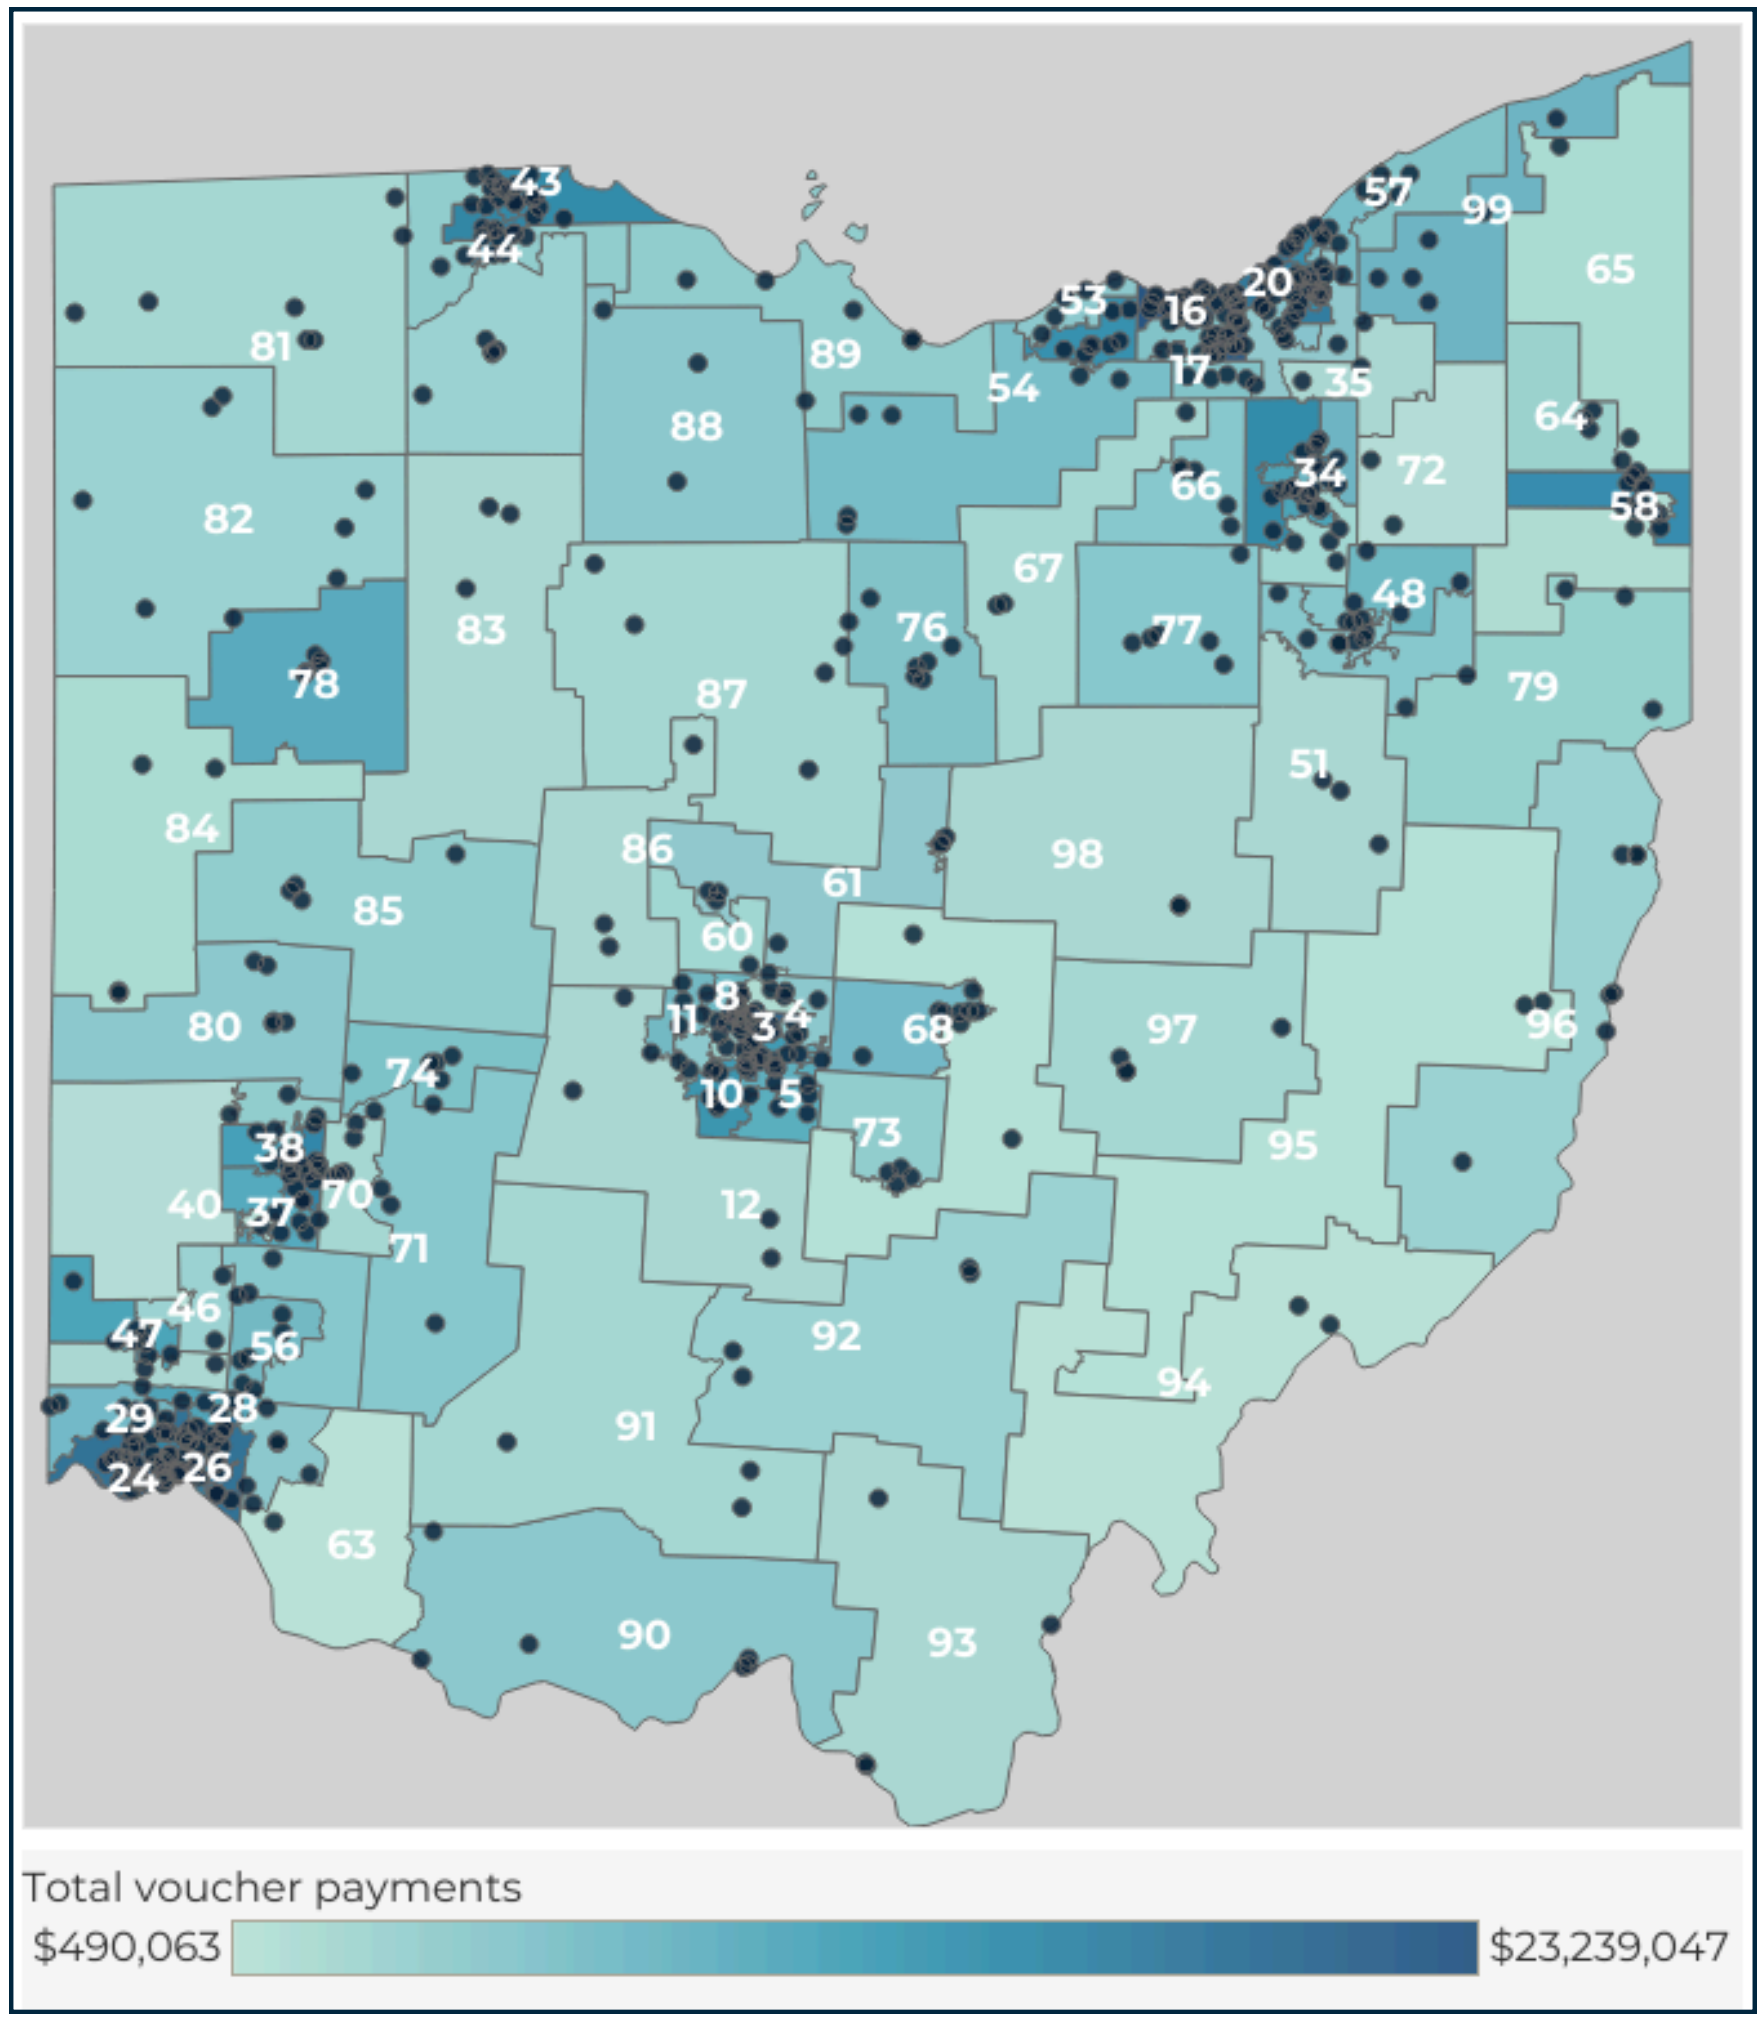
Email them at Rep44@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1418

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 45

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 45 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 577

voucher students.

In District 45 there are 24

public schools attended by 19,935

students.

Contact Representative Gross and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

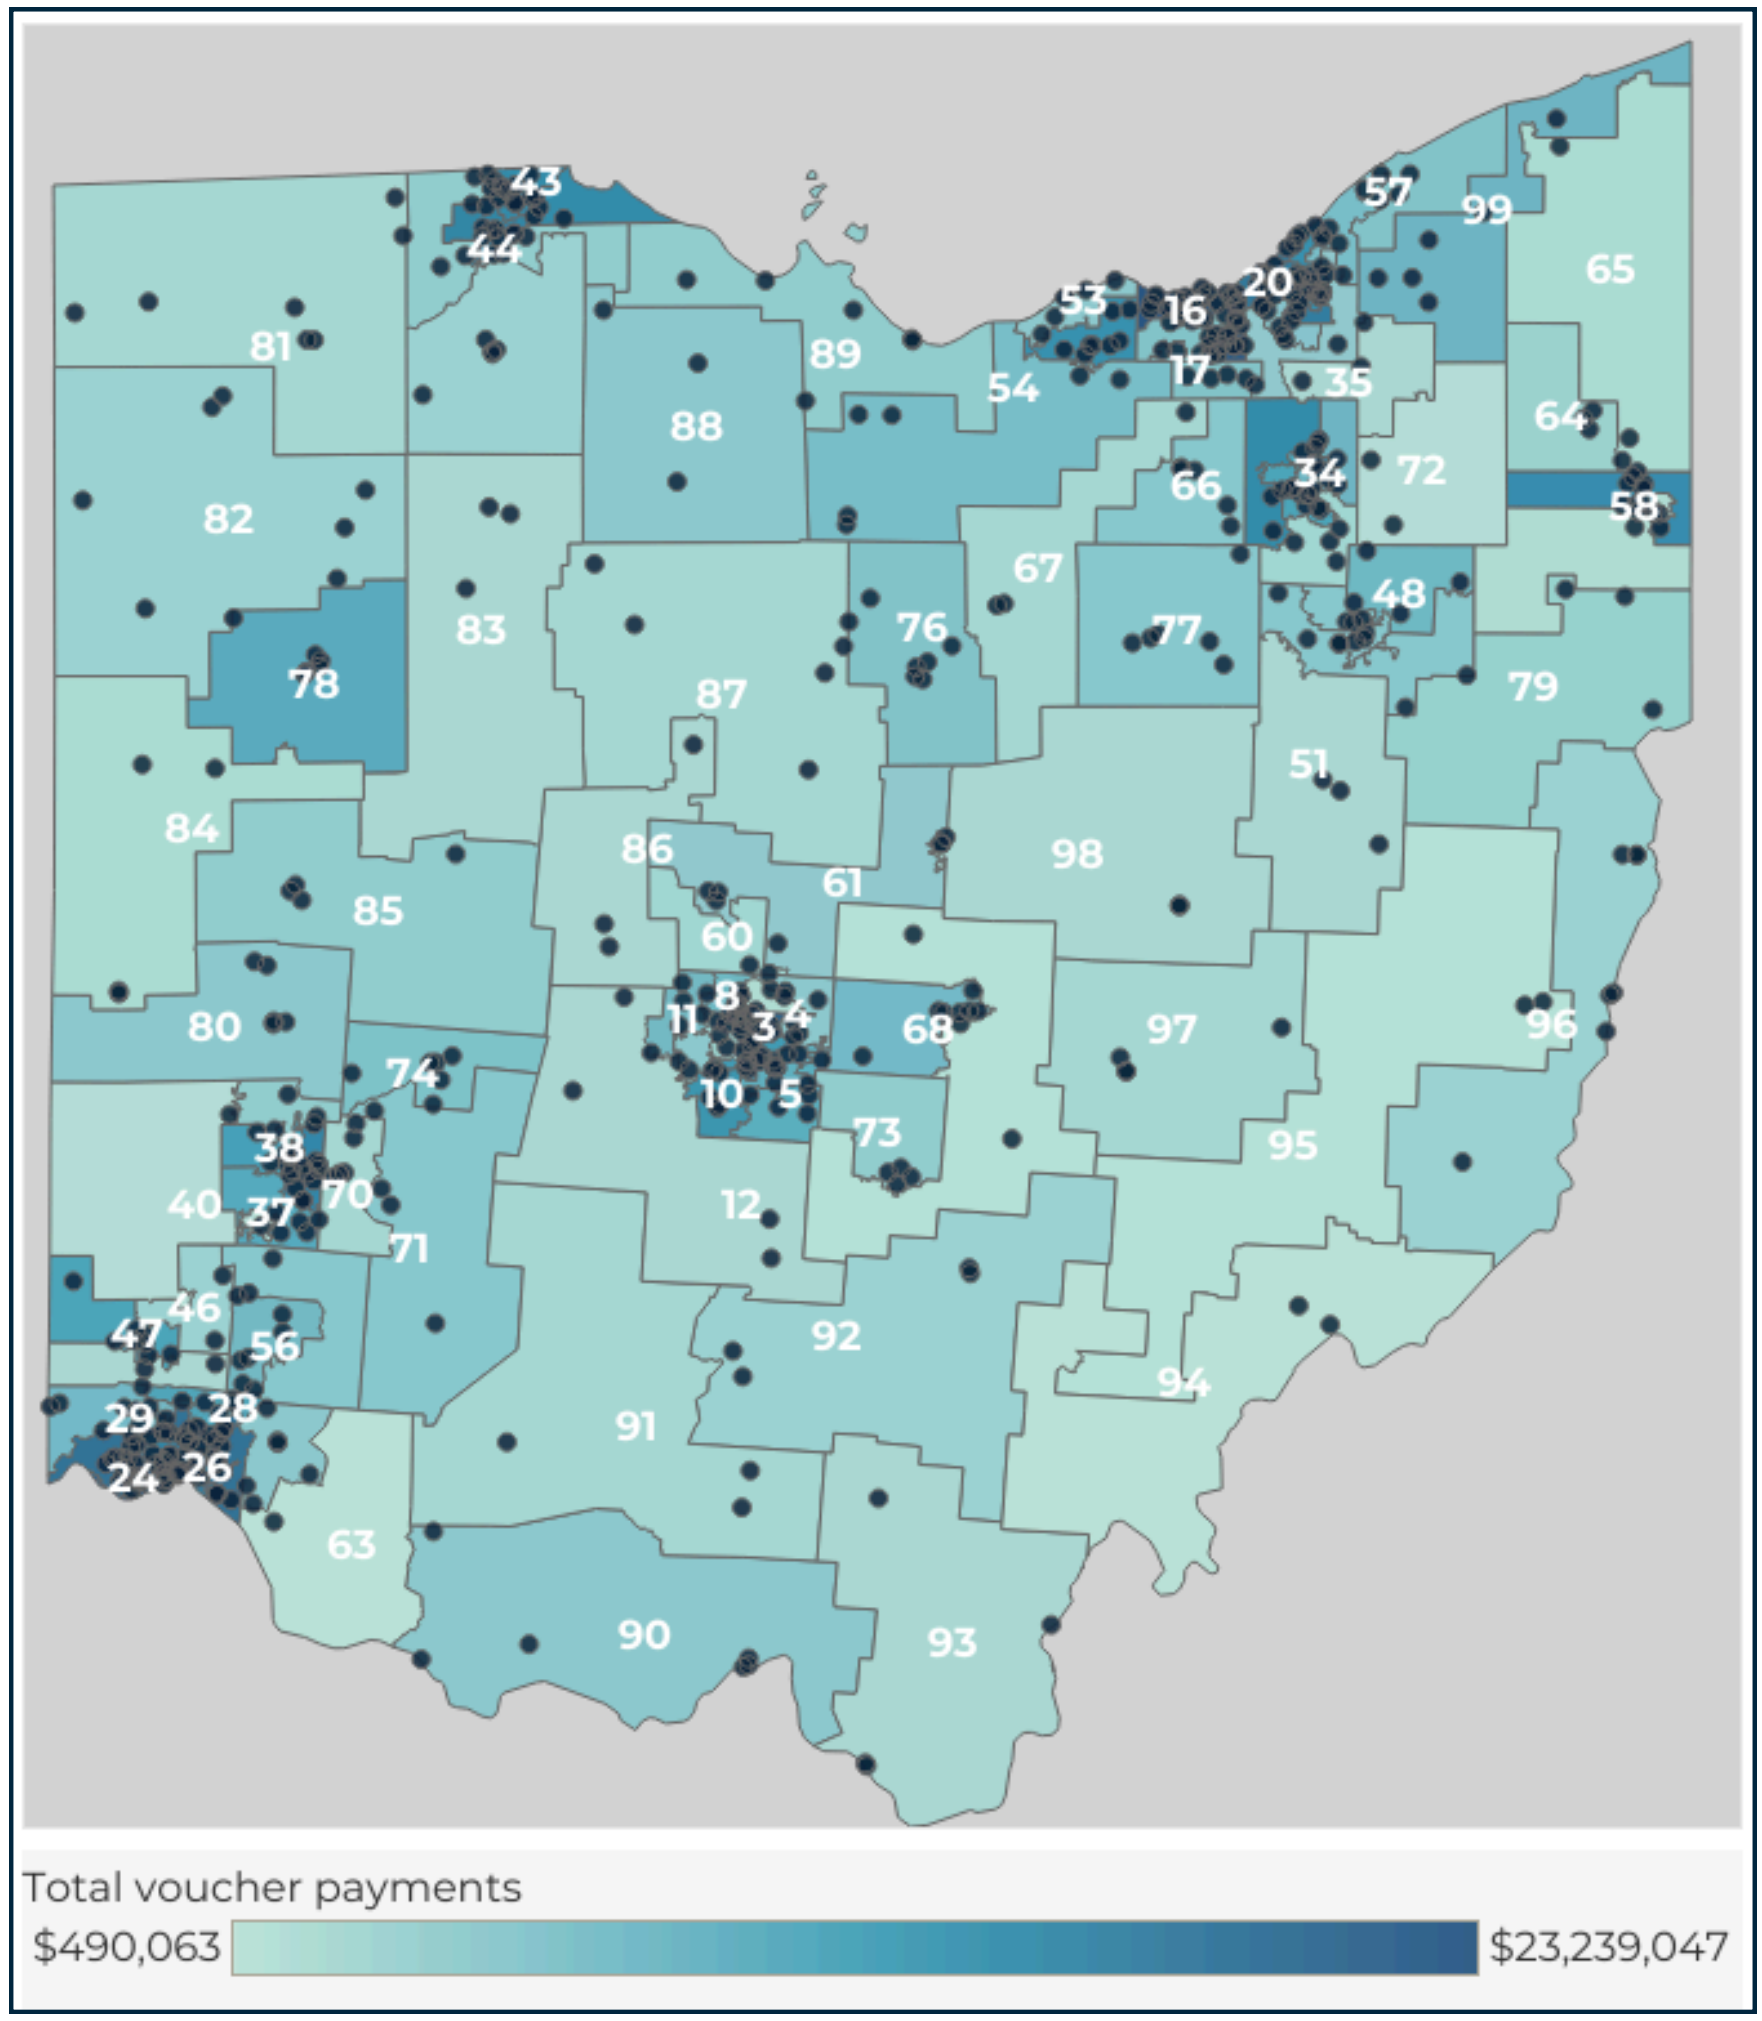
Email them at rep45@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8550

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 46

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 46 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 947

voucher students.

In District 46 there are 33

public schools attended by 21,876

students.

Contact Representative Hall and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

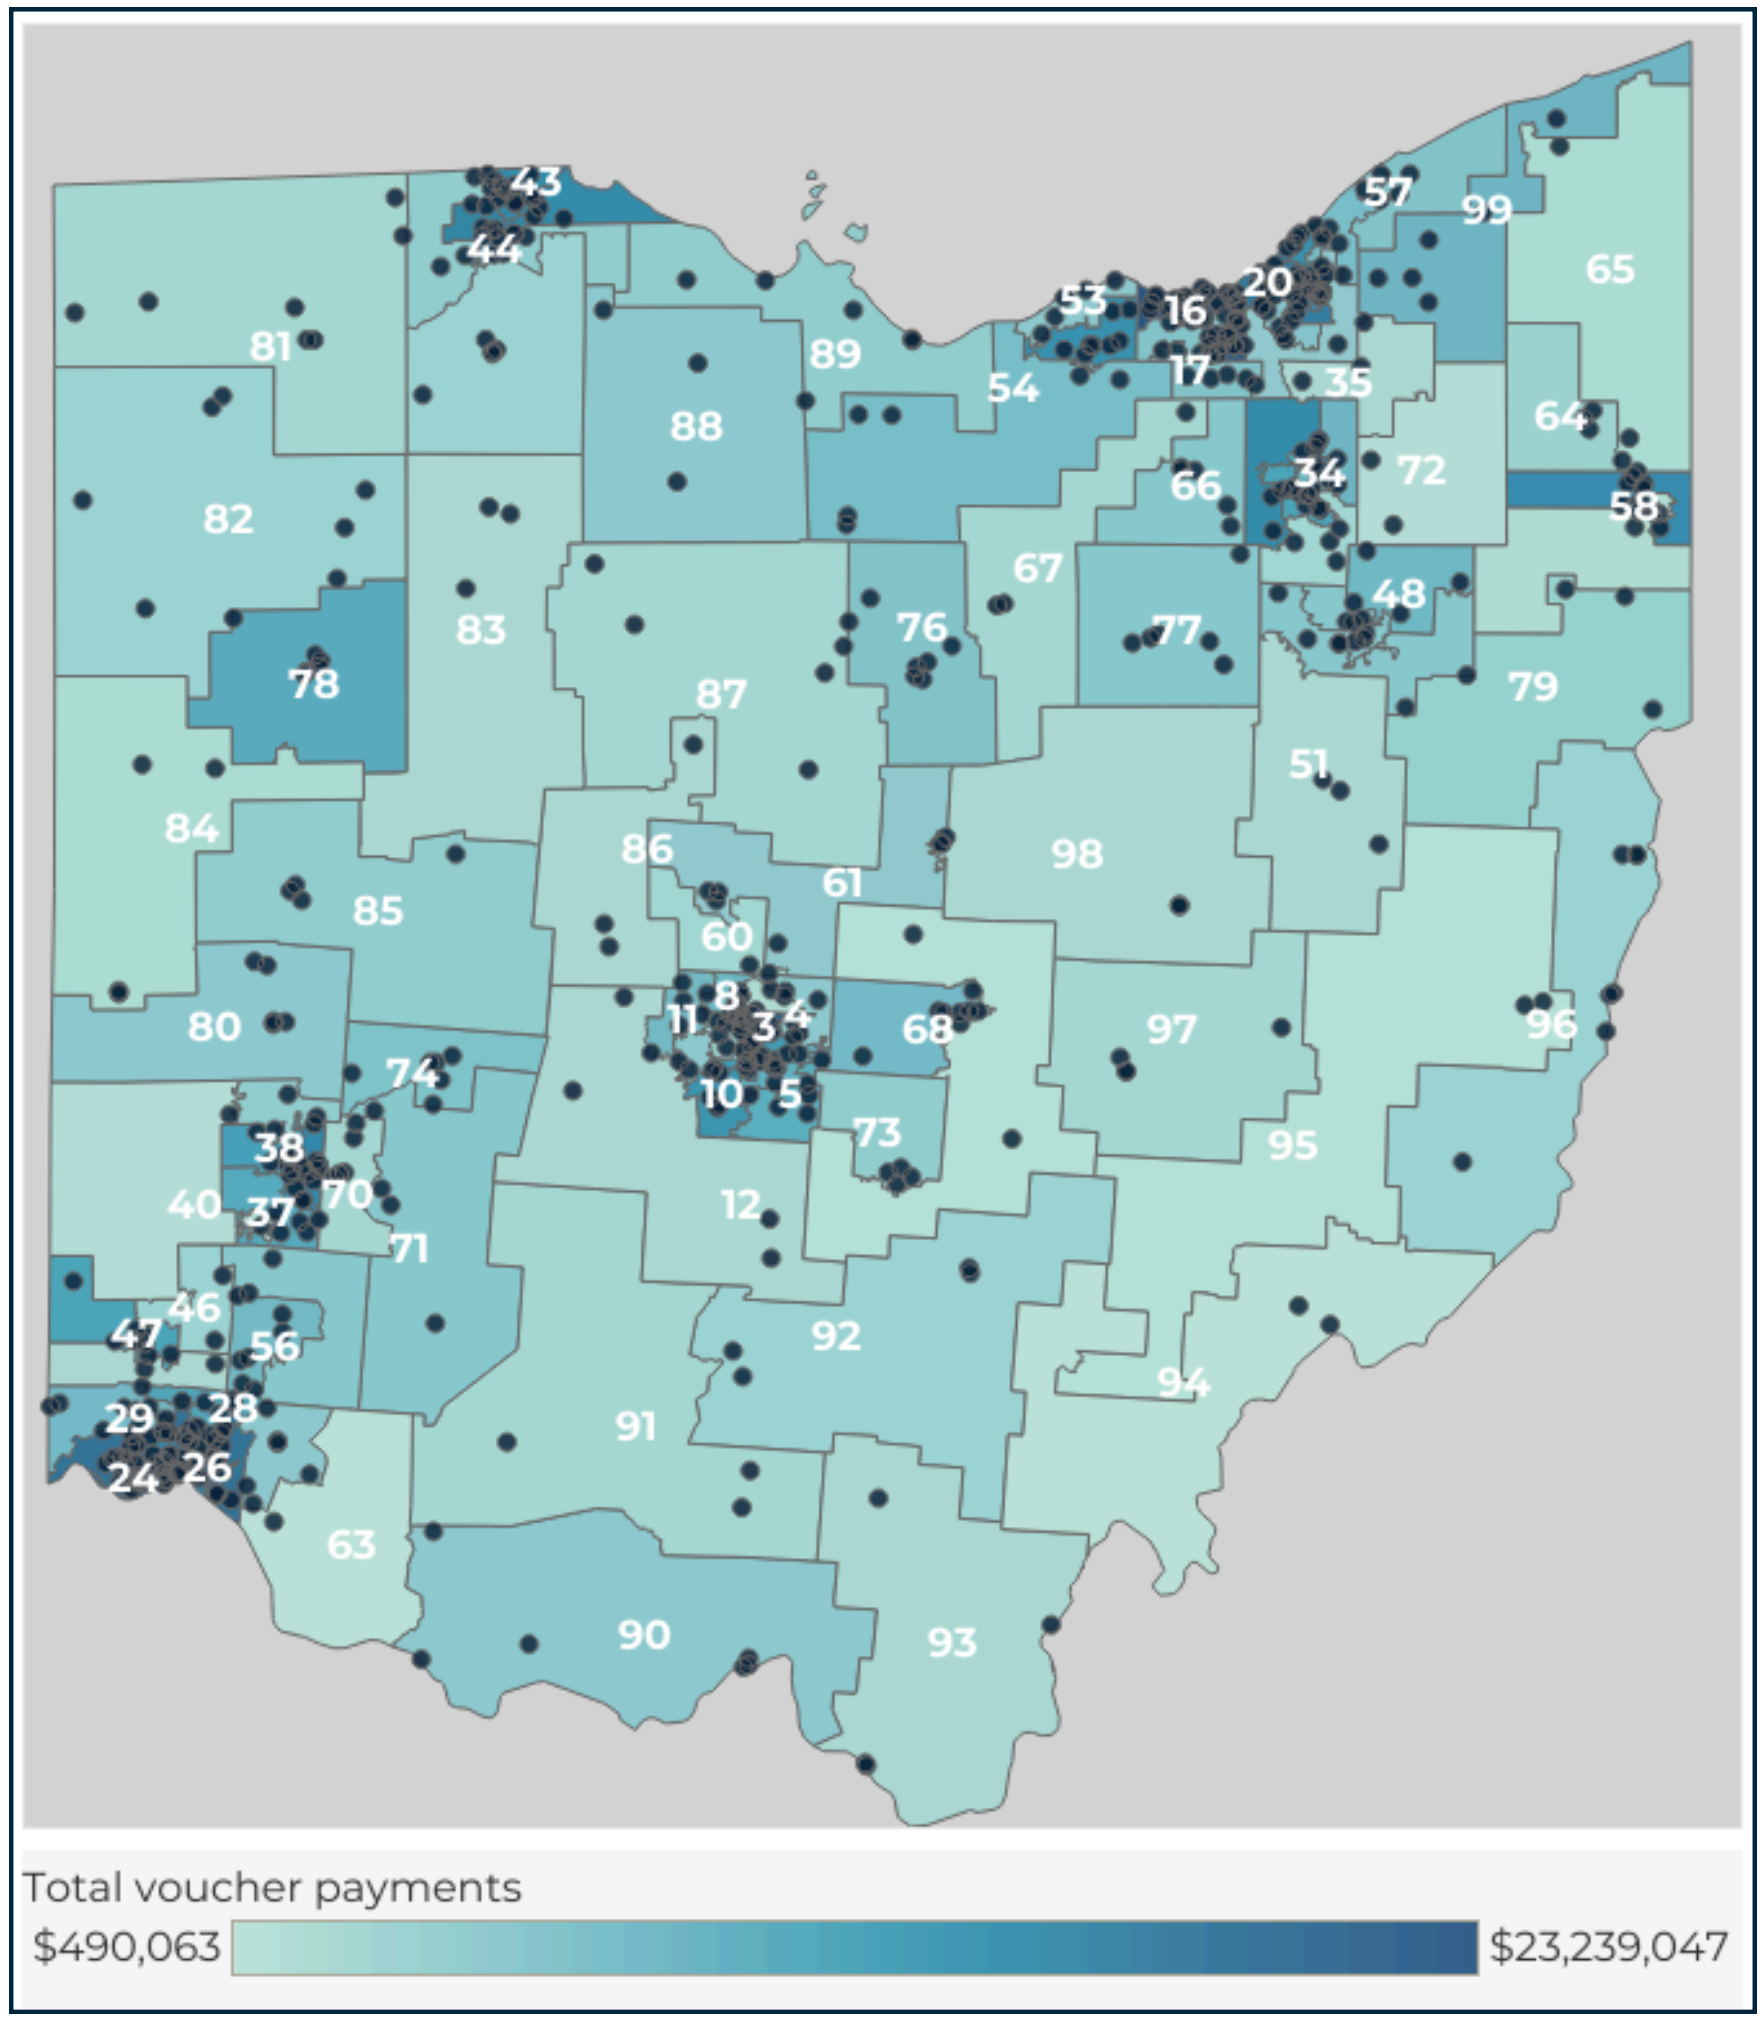
Email them at rep46@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5094

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 47

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 47 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 2,116

voucher students.

In District 47 there are 18

public schools attended by 12,182

students.

Contact Representative Mullins and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

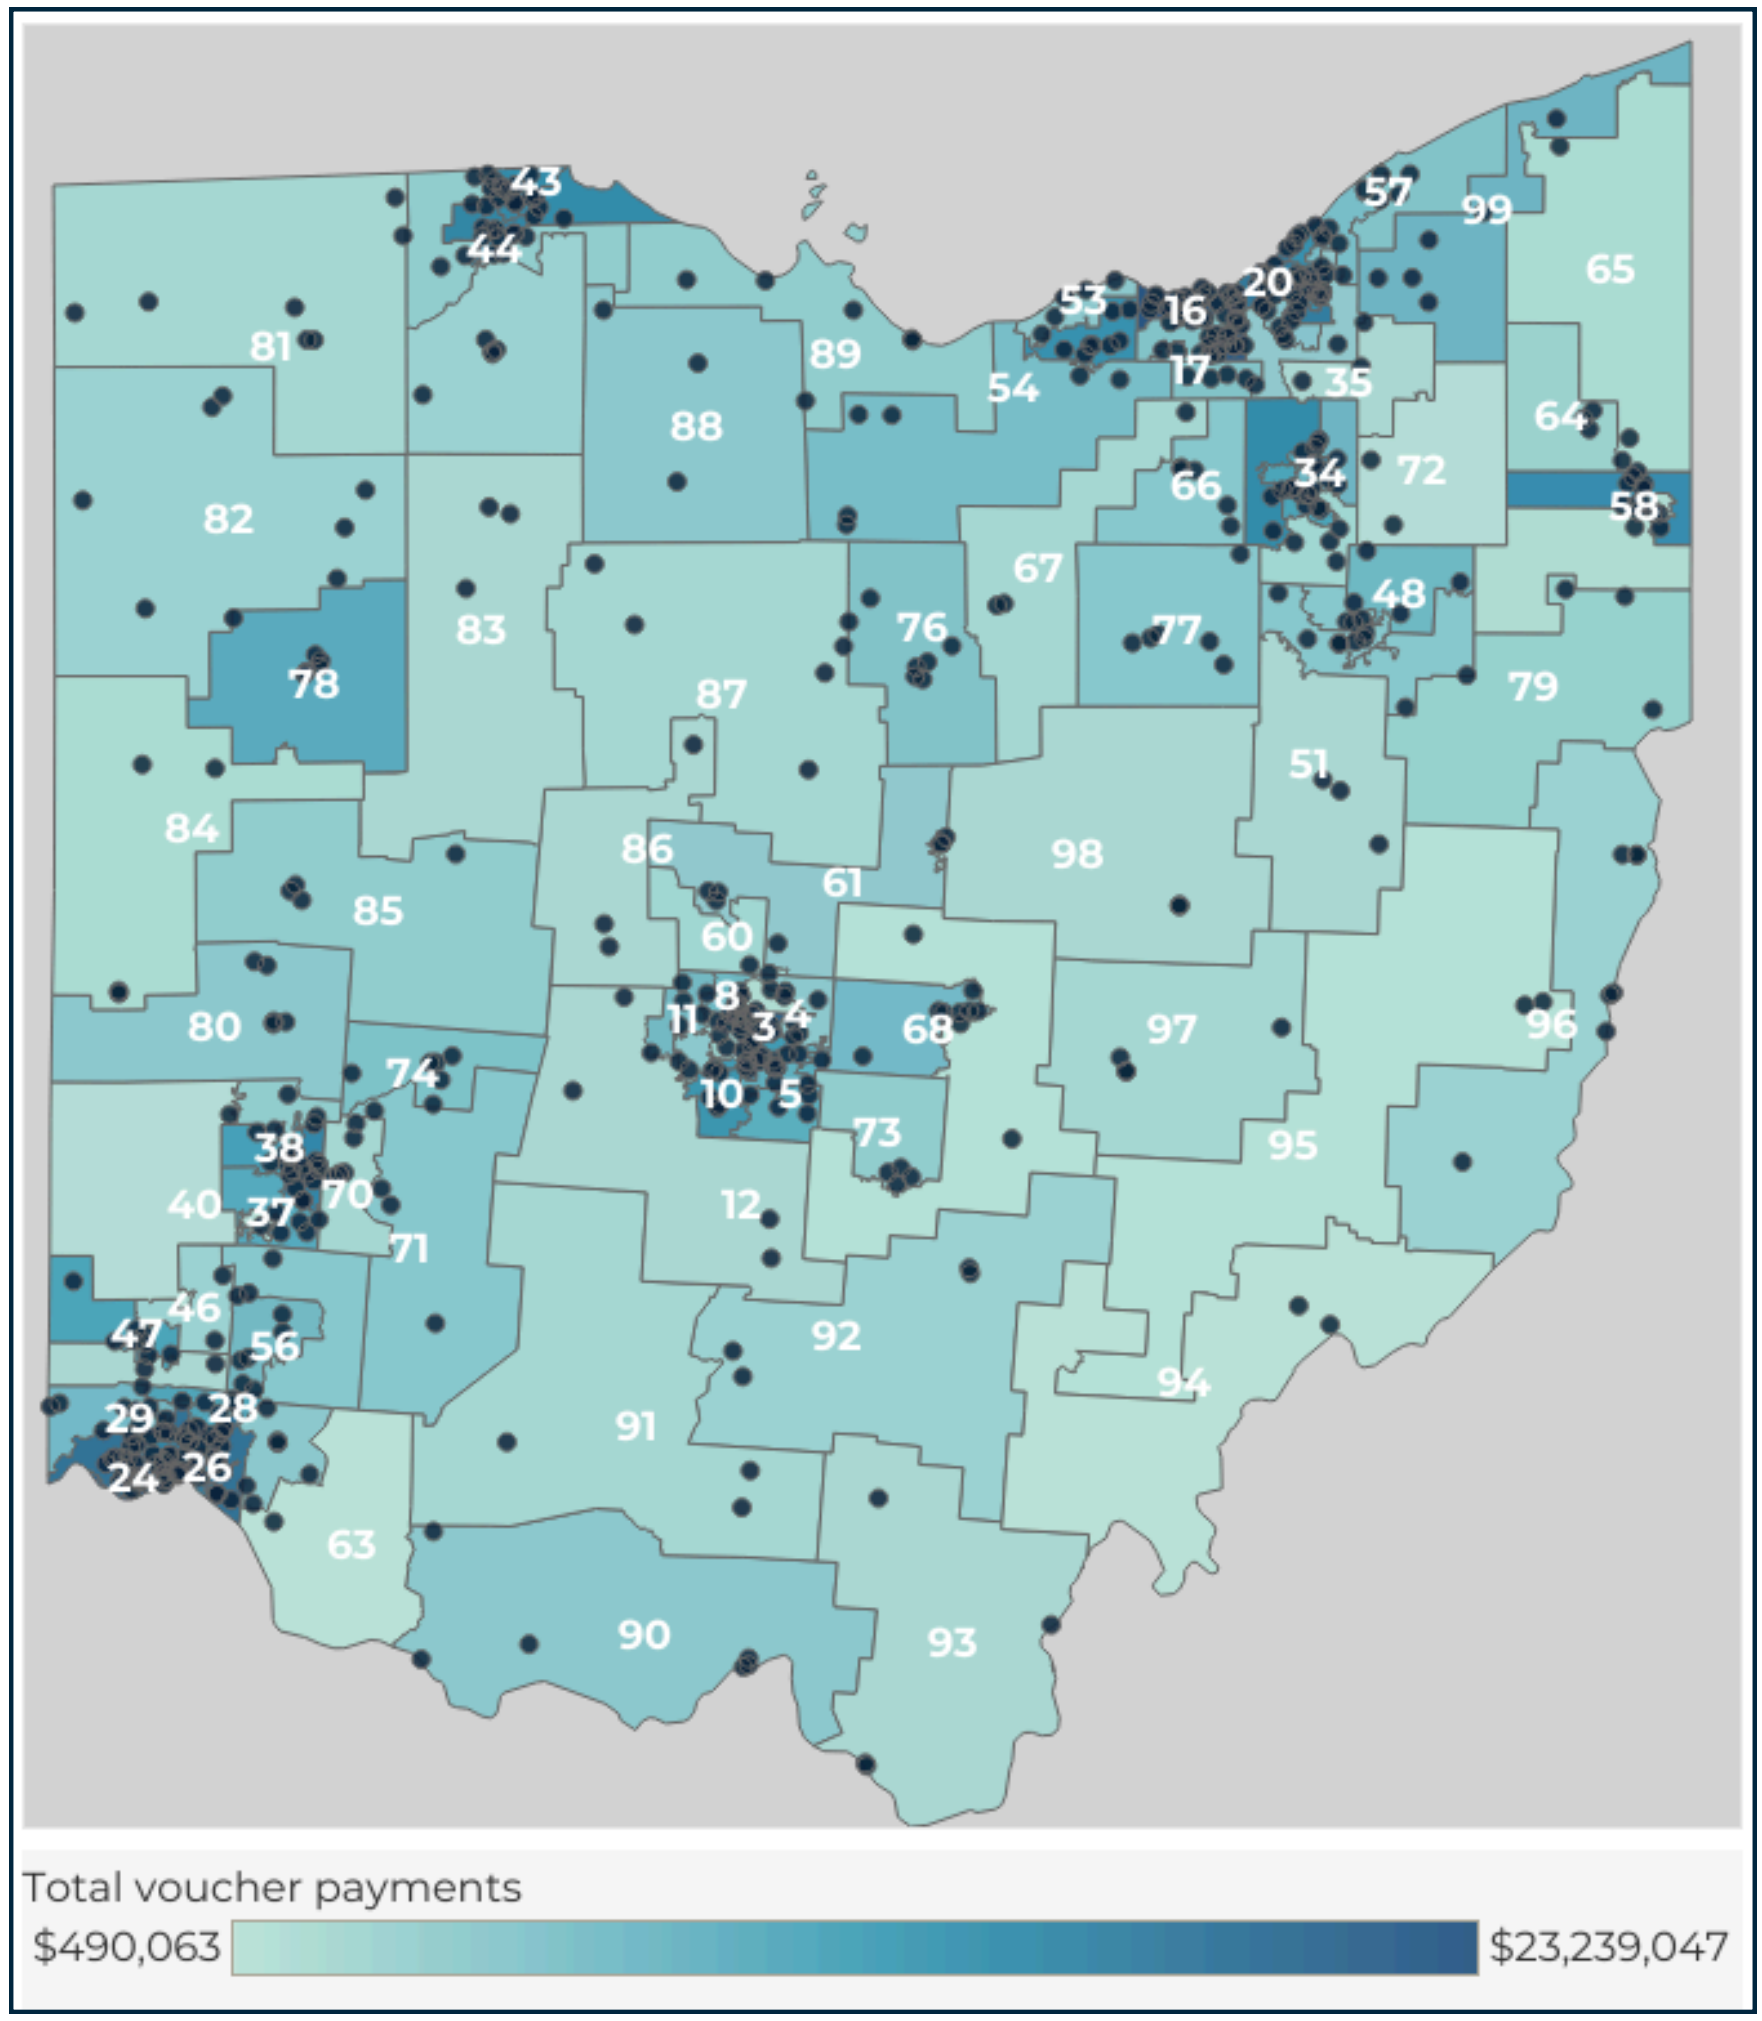
Email them at rep47@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6721

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 48

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 48 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 1,482

voucher students.

In District 48 there are 24

public schools attended by 18,332

students.

Contact Representative Oelslager and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

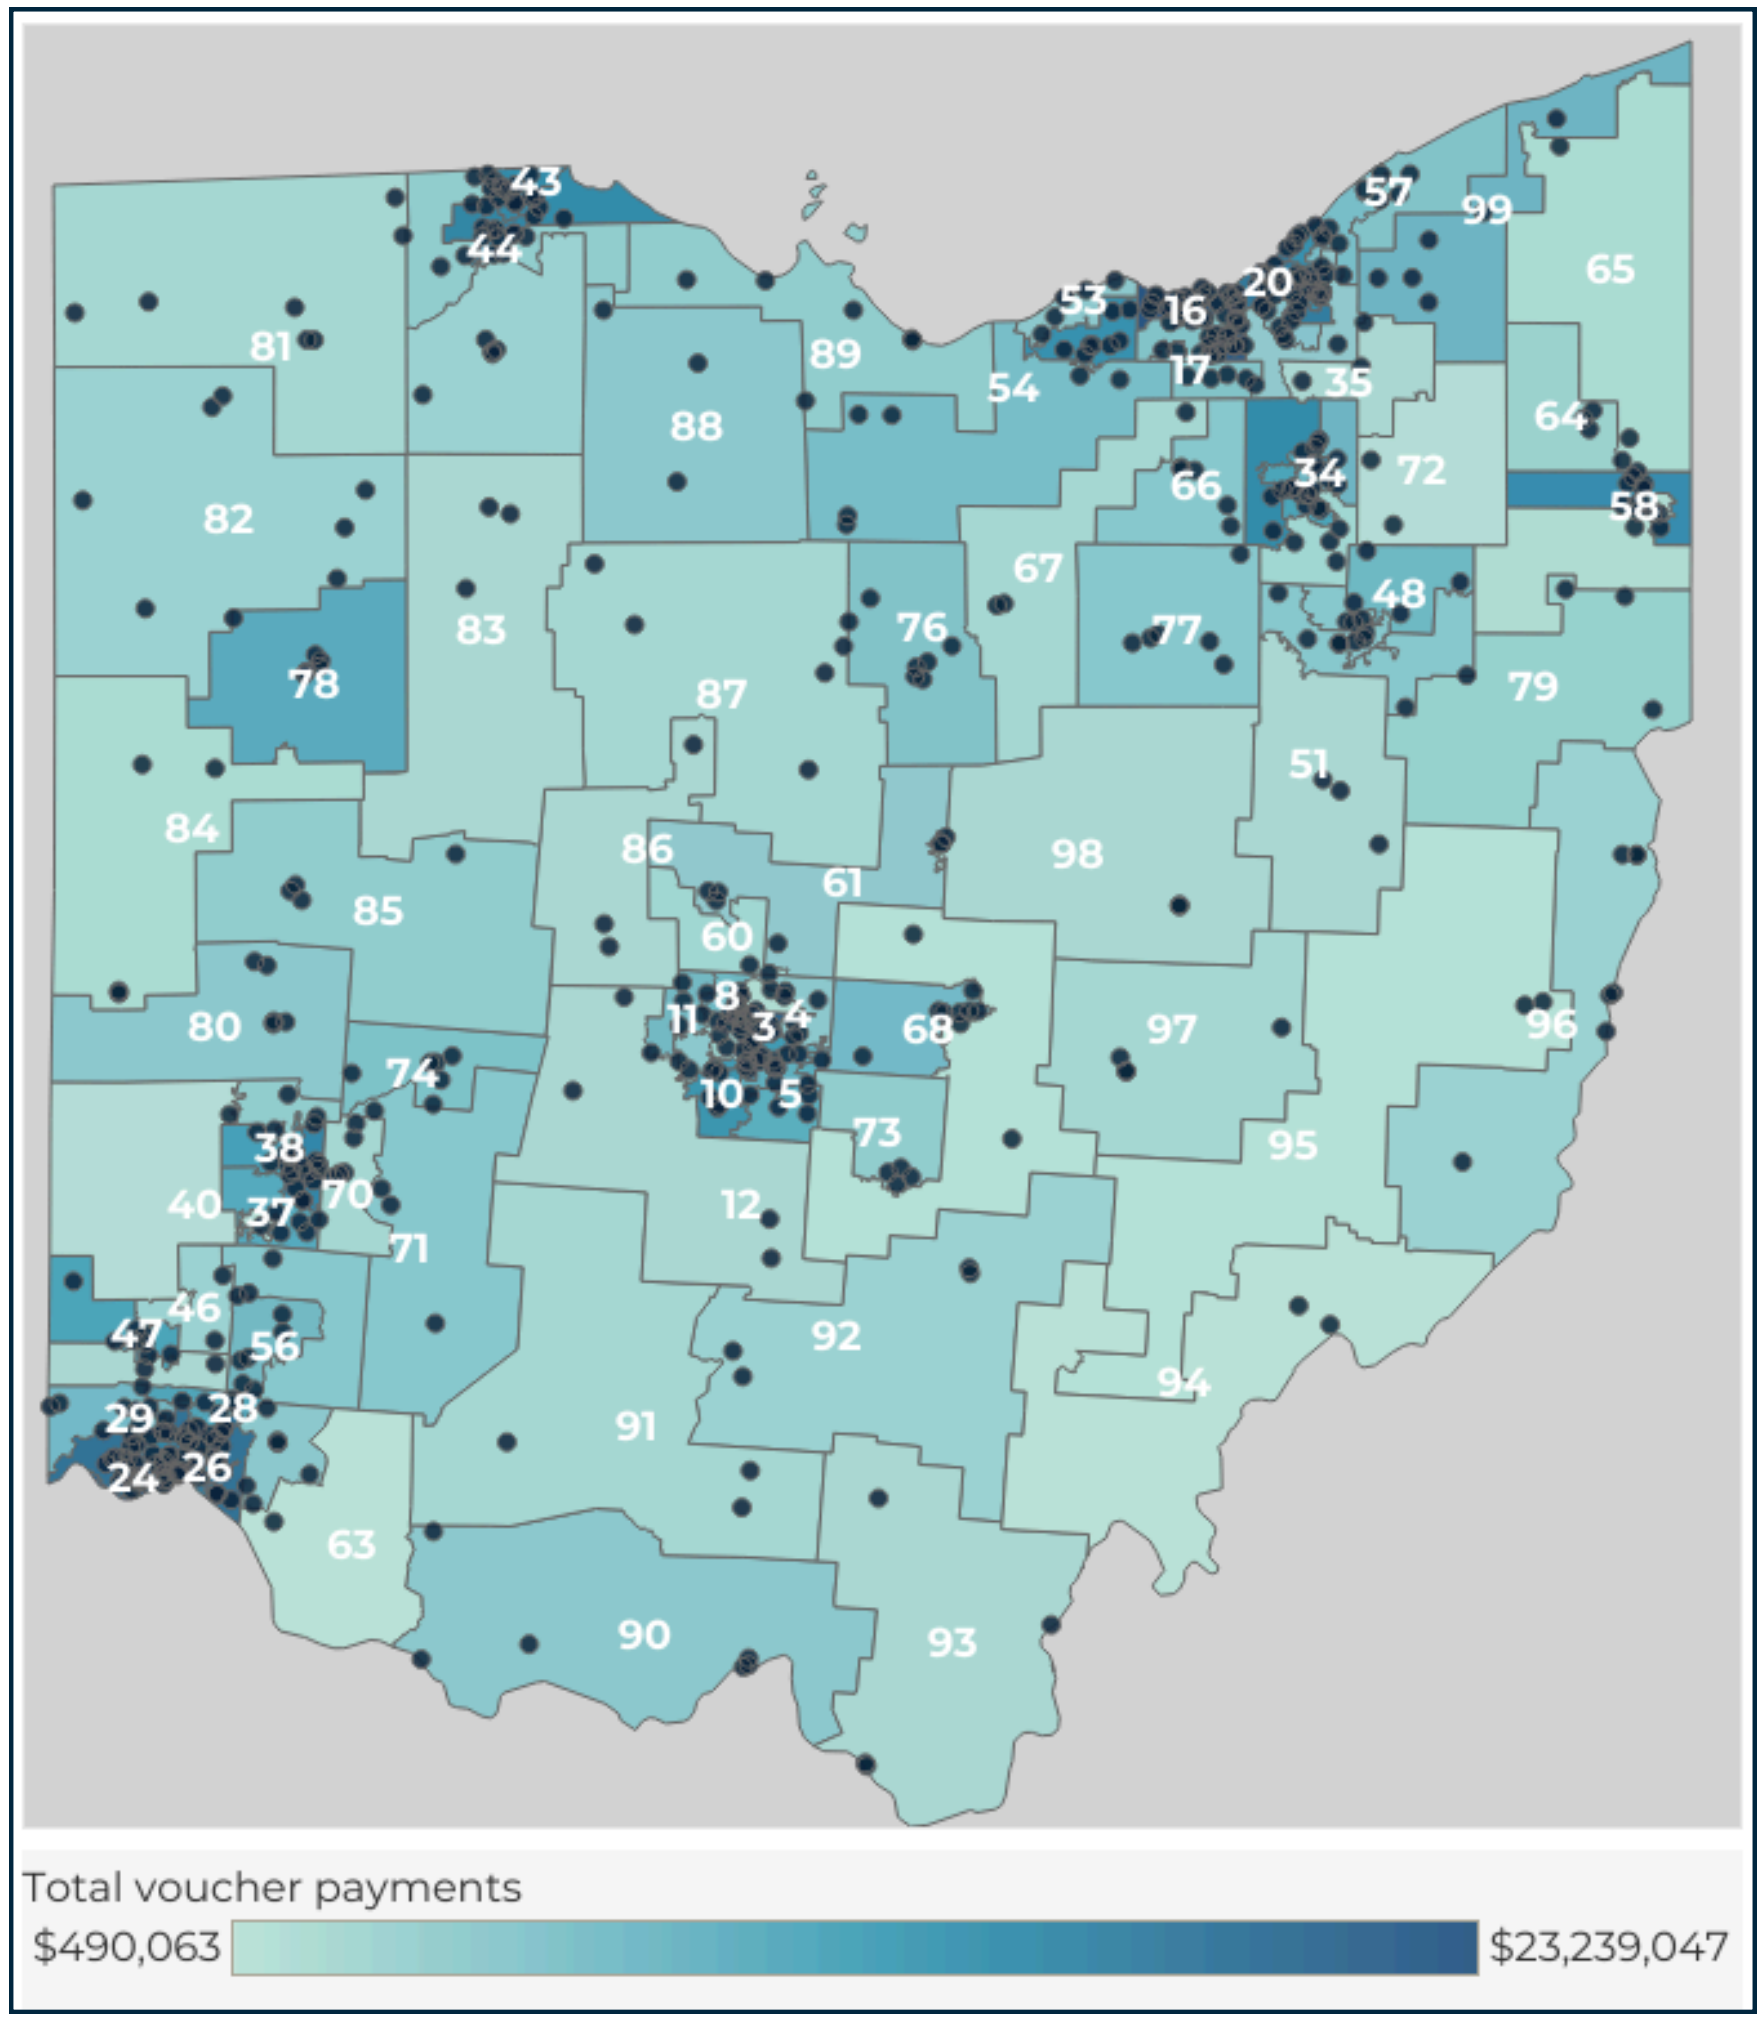
Email them at rep48@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-752-2438

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 49

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 49 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,001

voucher students.

In District 49 there are 27

public schools attended by 14,888

students.

Contact Representative Thomas and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

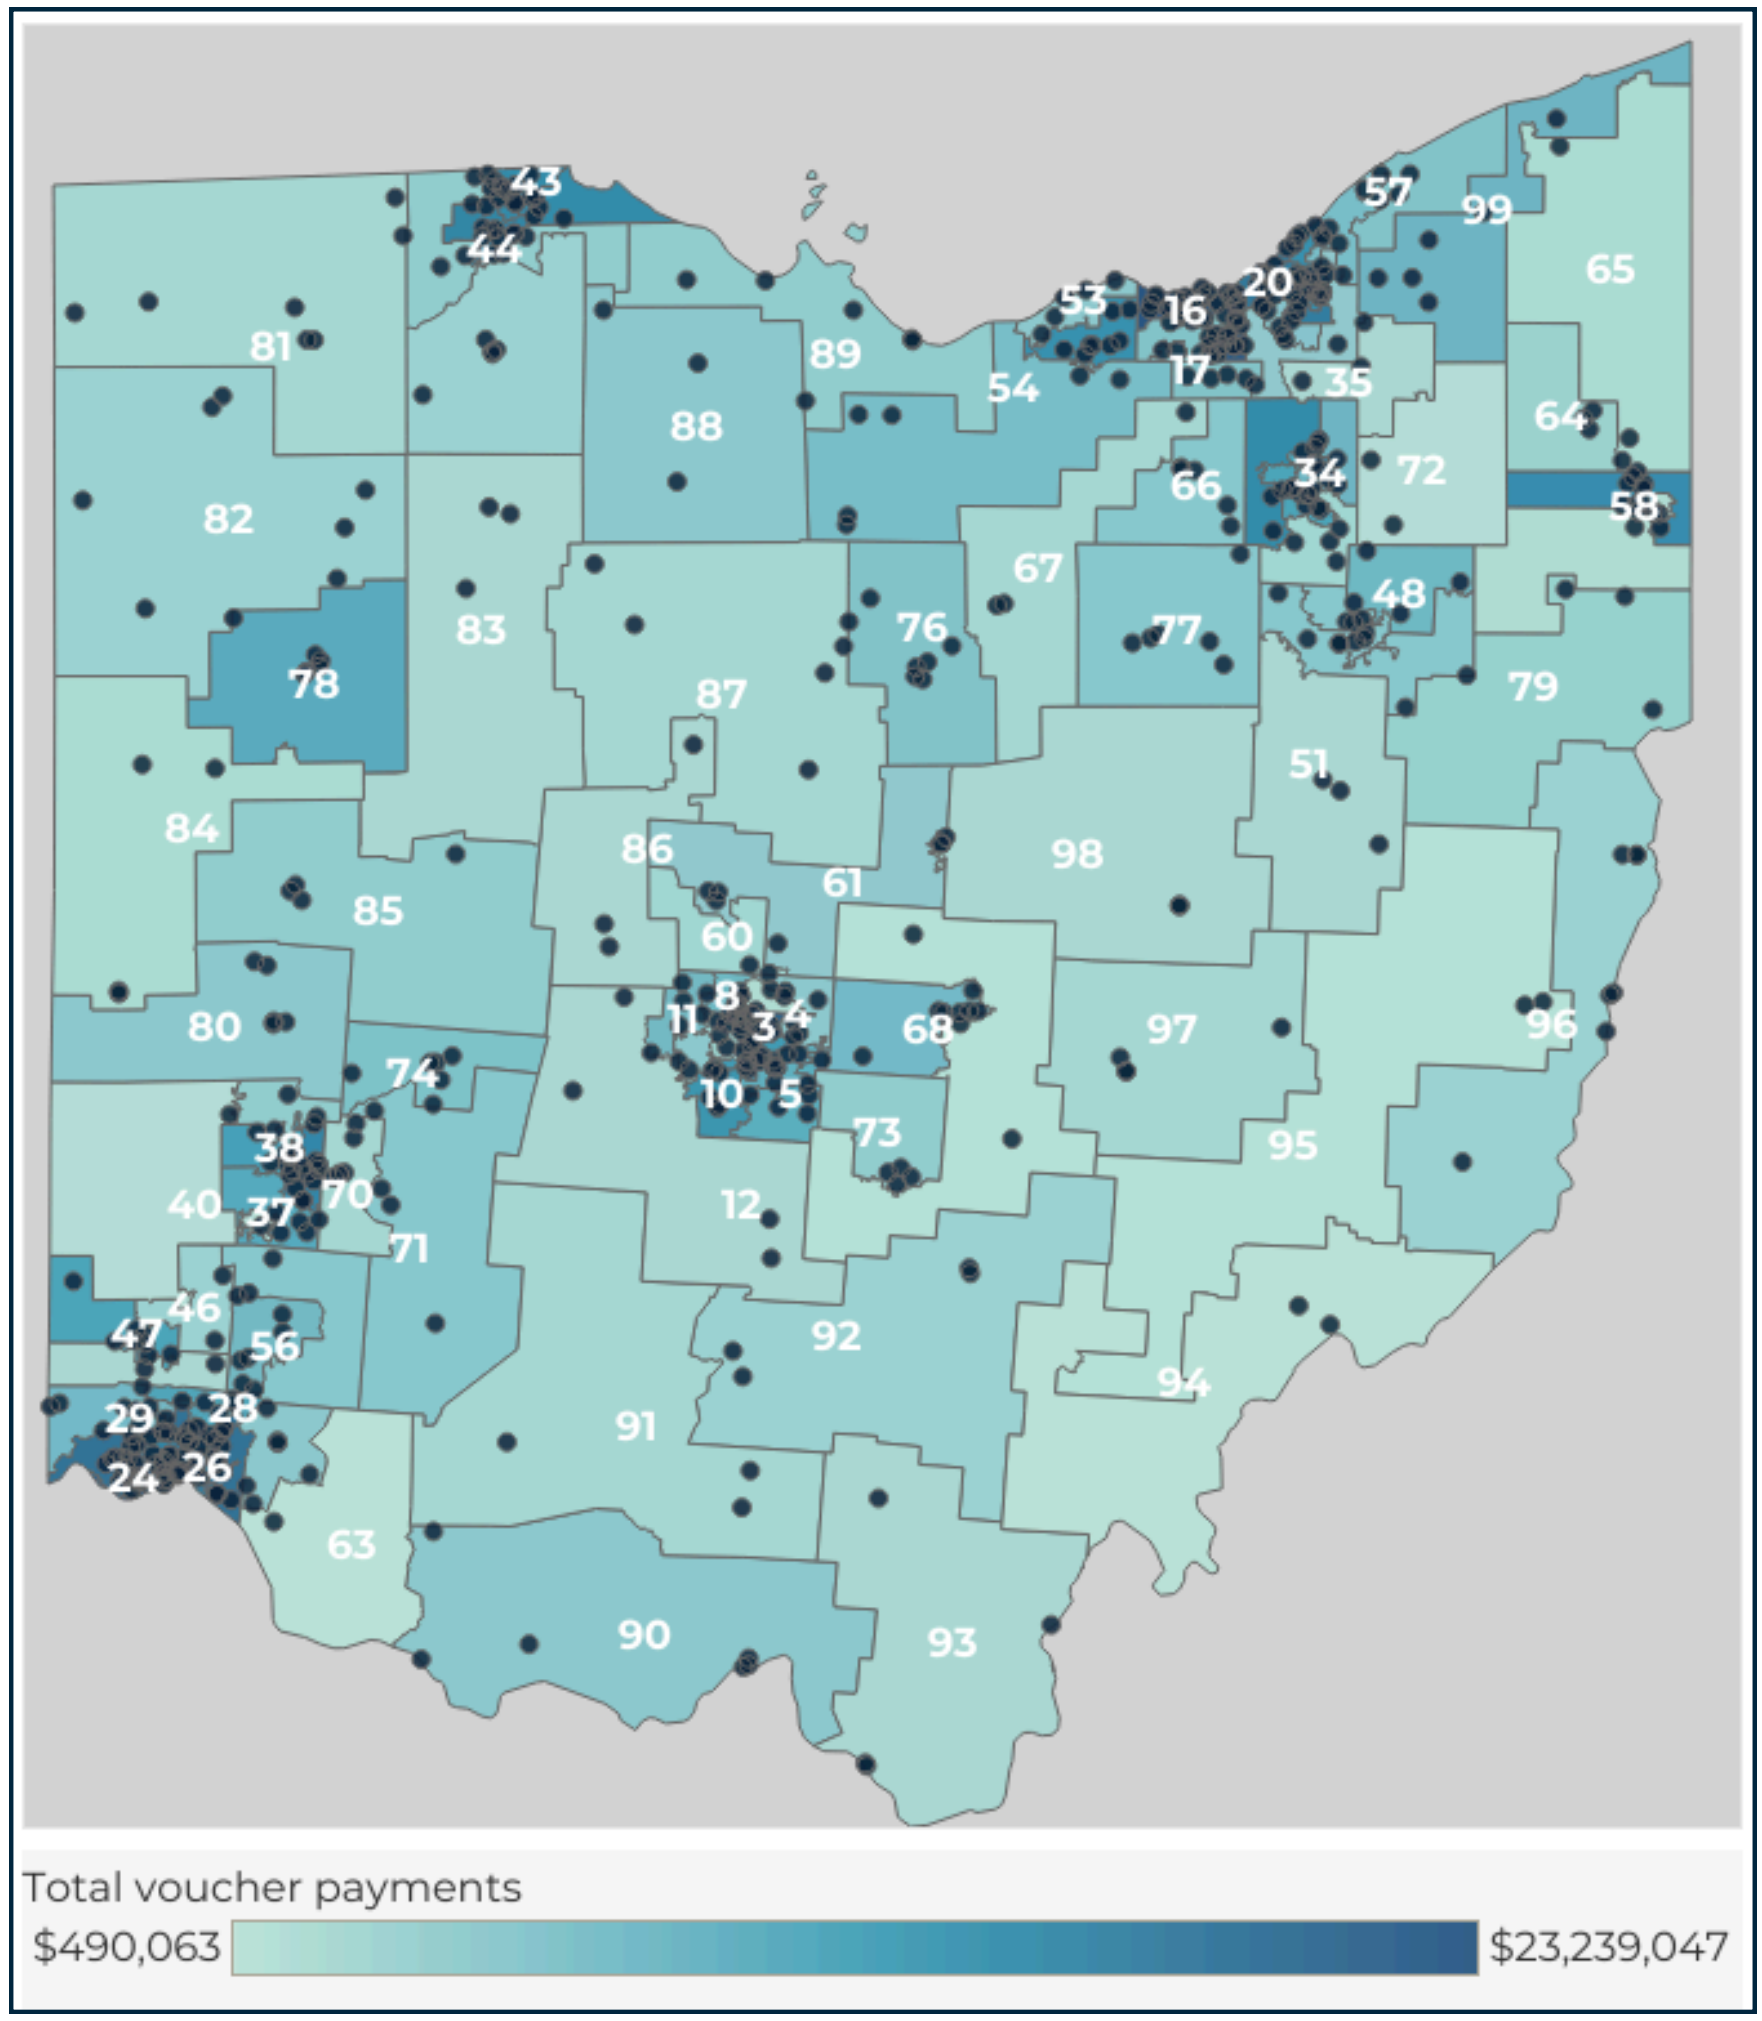
Email them at rep49@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8030

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 5

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 5 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 1,626

voucher students.

In District 5 there are 29

public schools attended by 19,793

students.

Contact Representative Lawson-Rowe and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

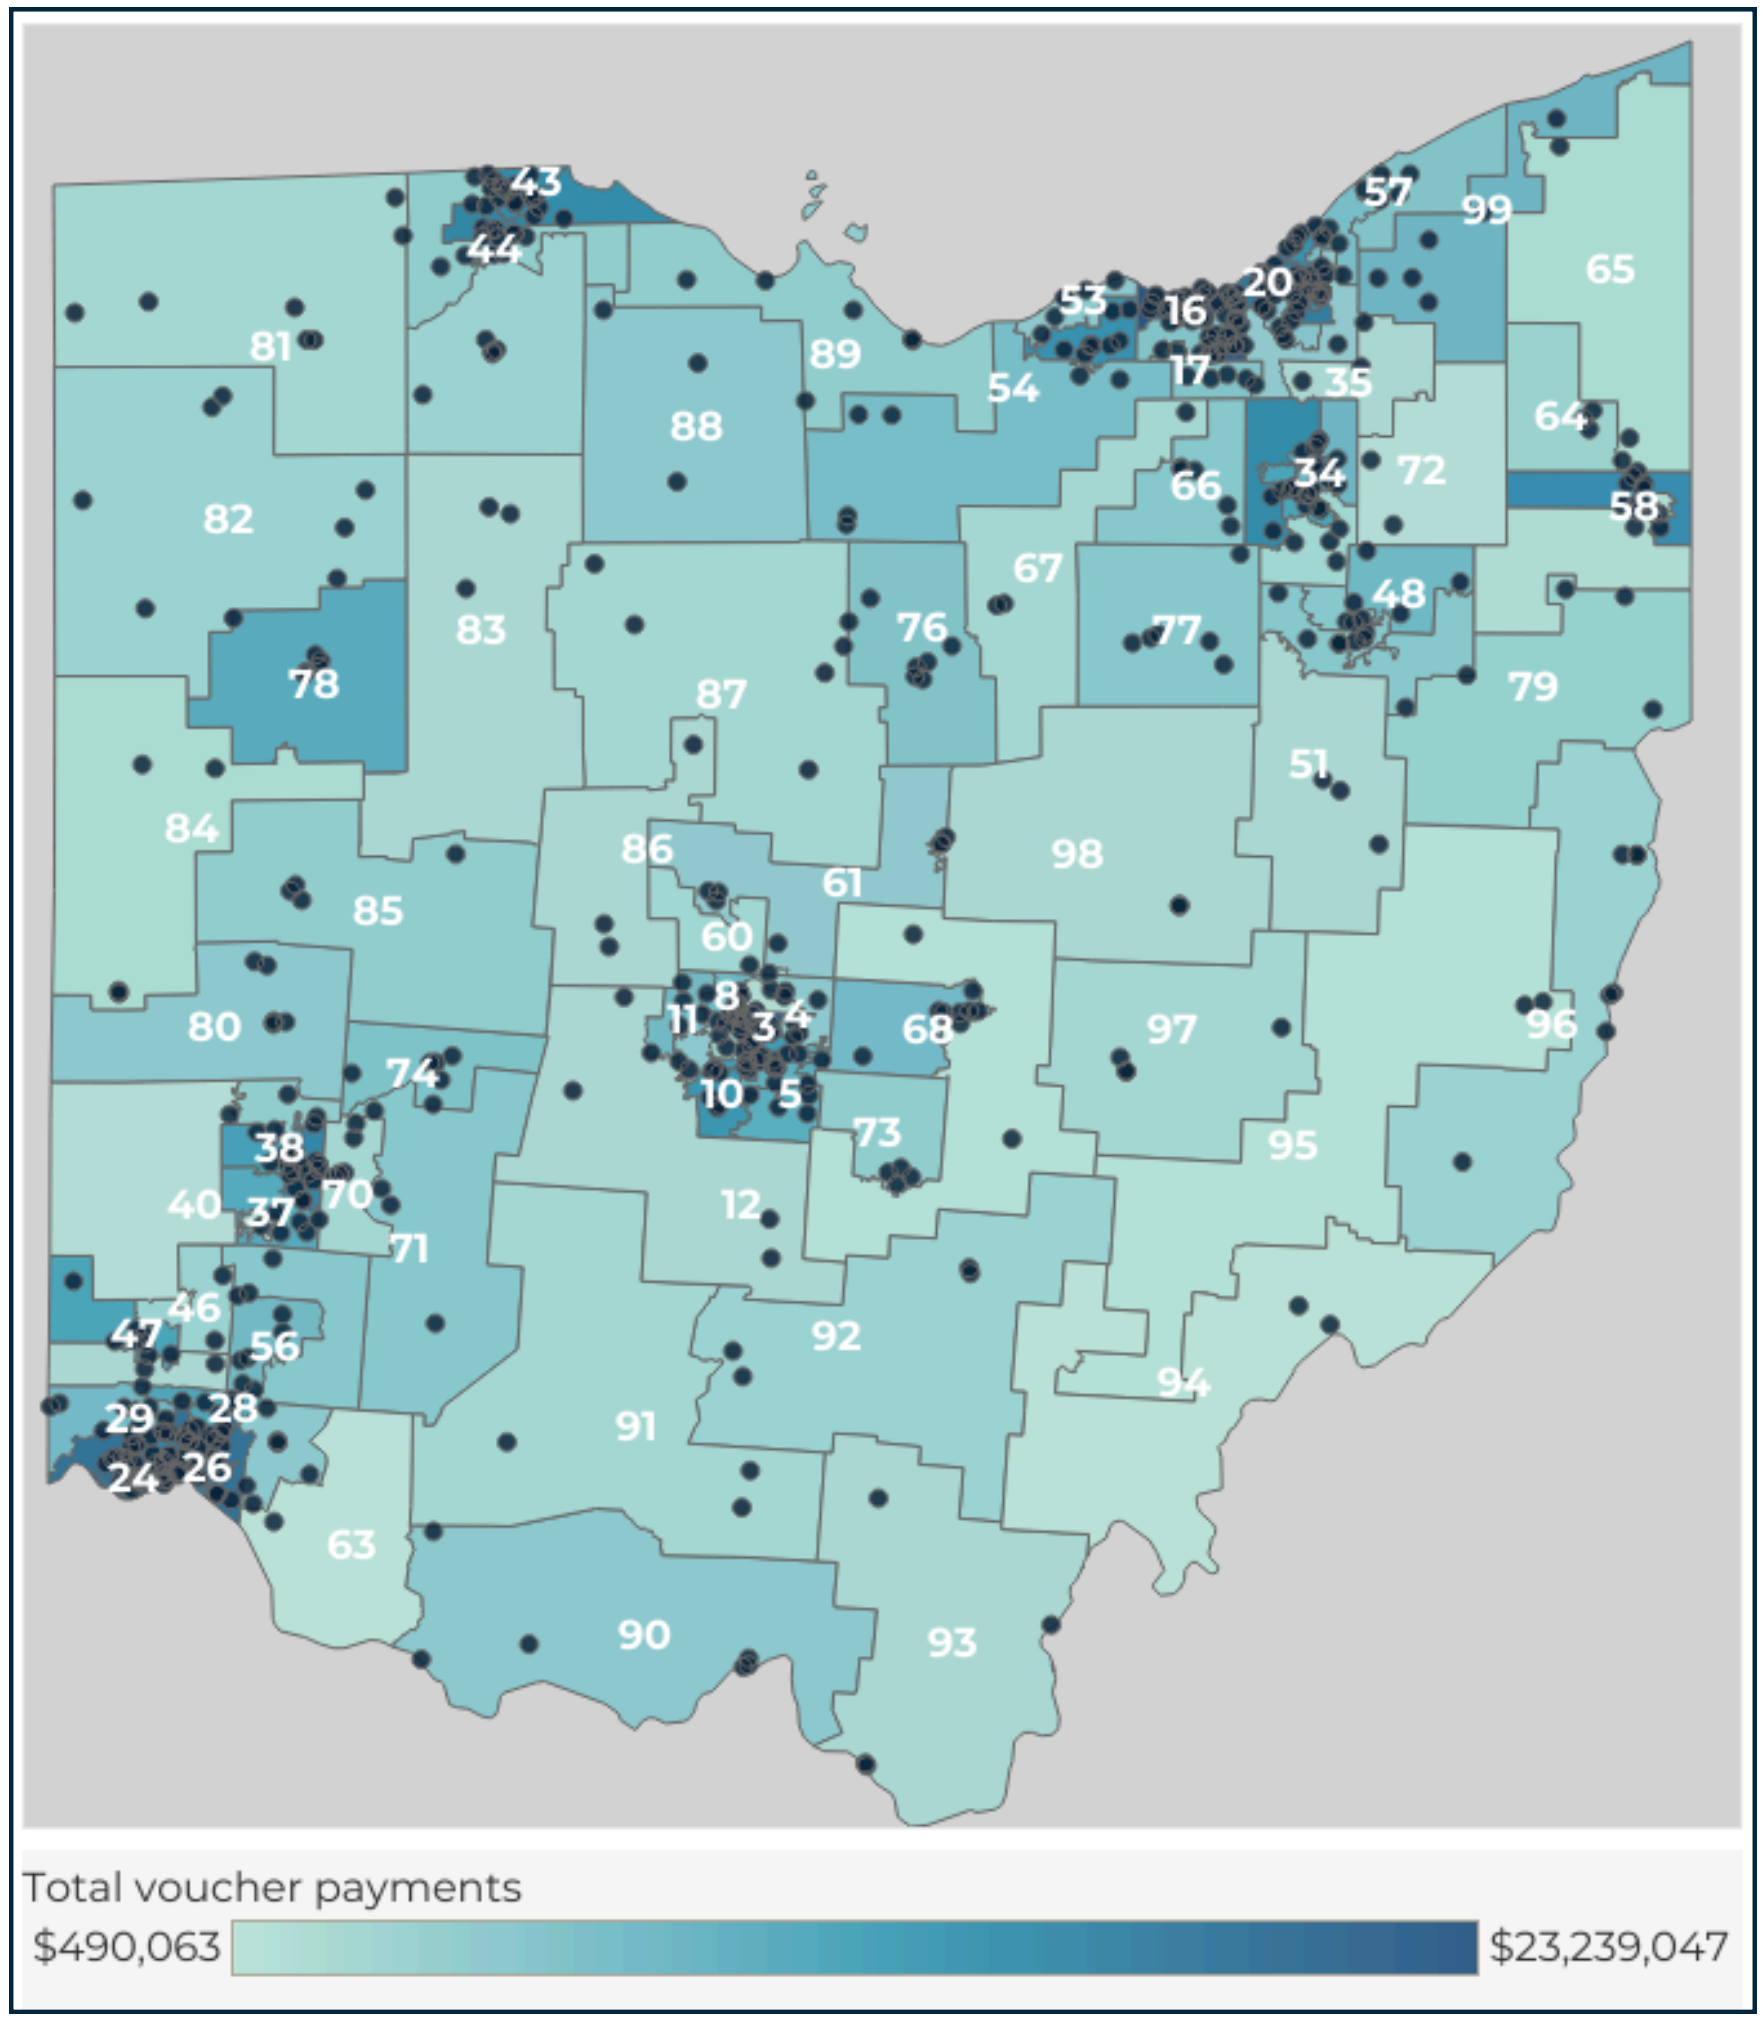
Email them at rep05@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6002

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 50

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 50 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 932

voucher students.

In District 50 there are 29

public schools attended by 14,782

students.

Contact Representative Kishman and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

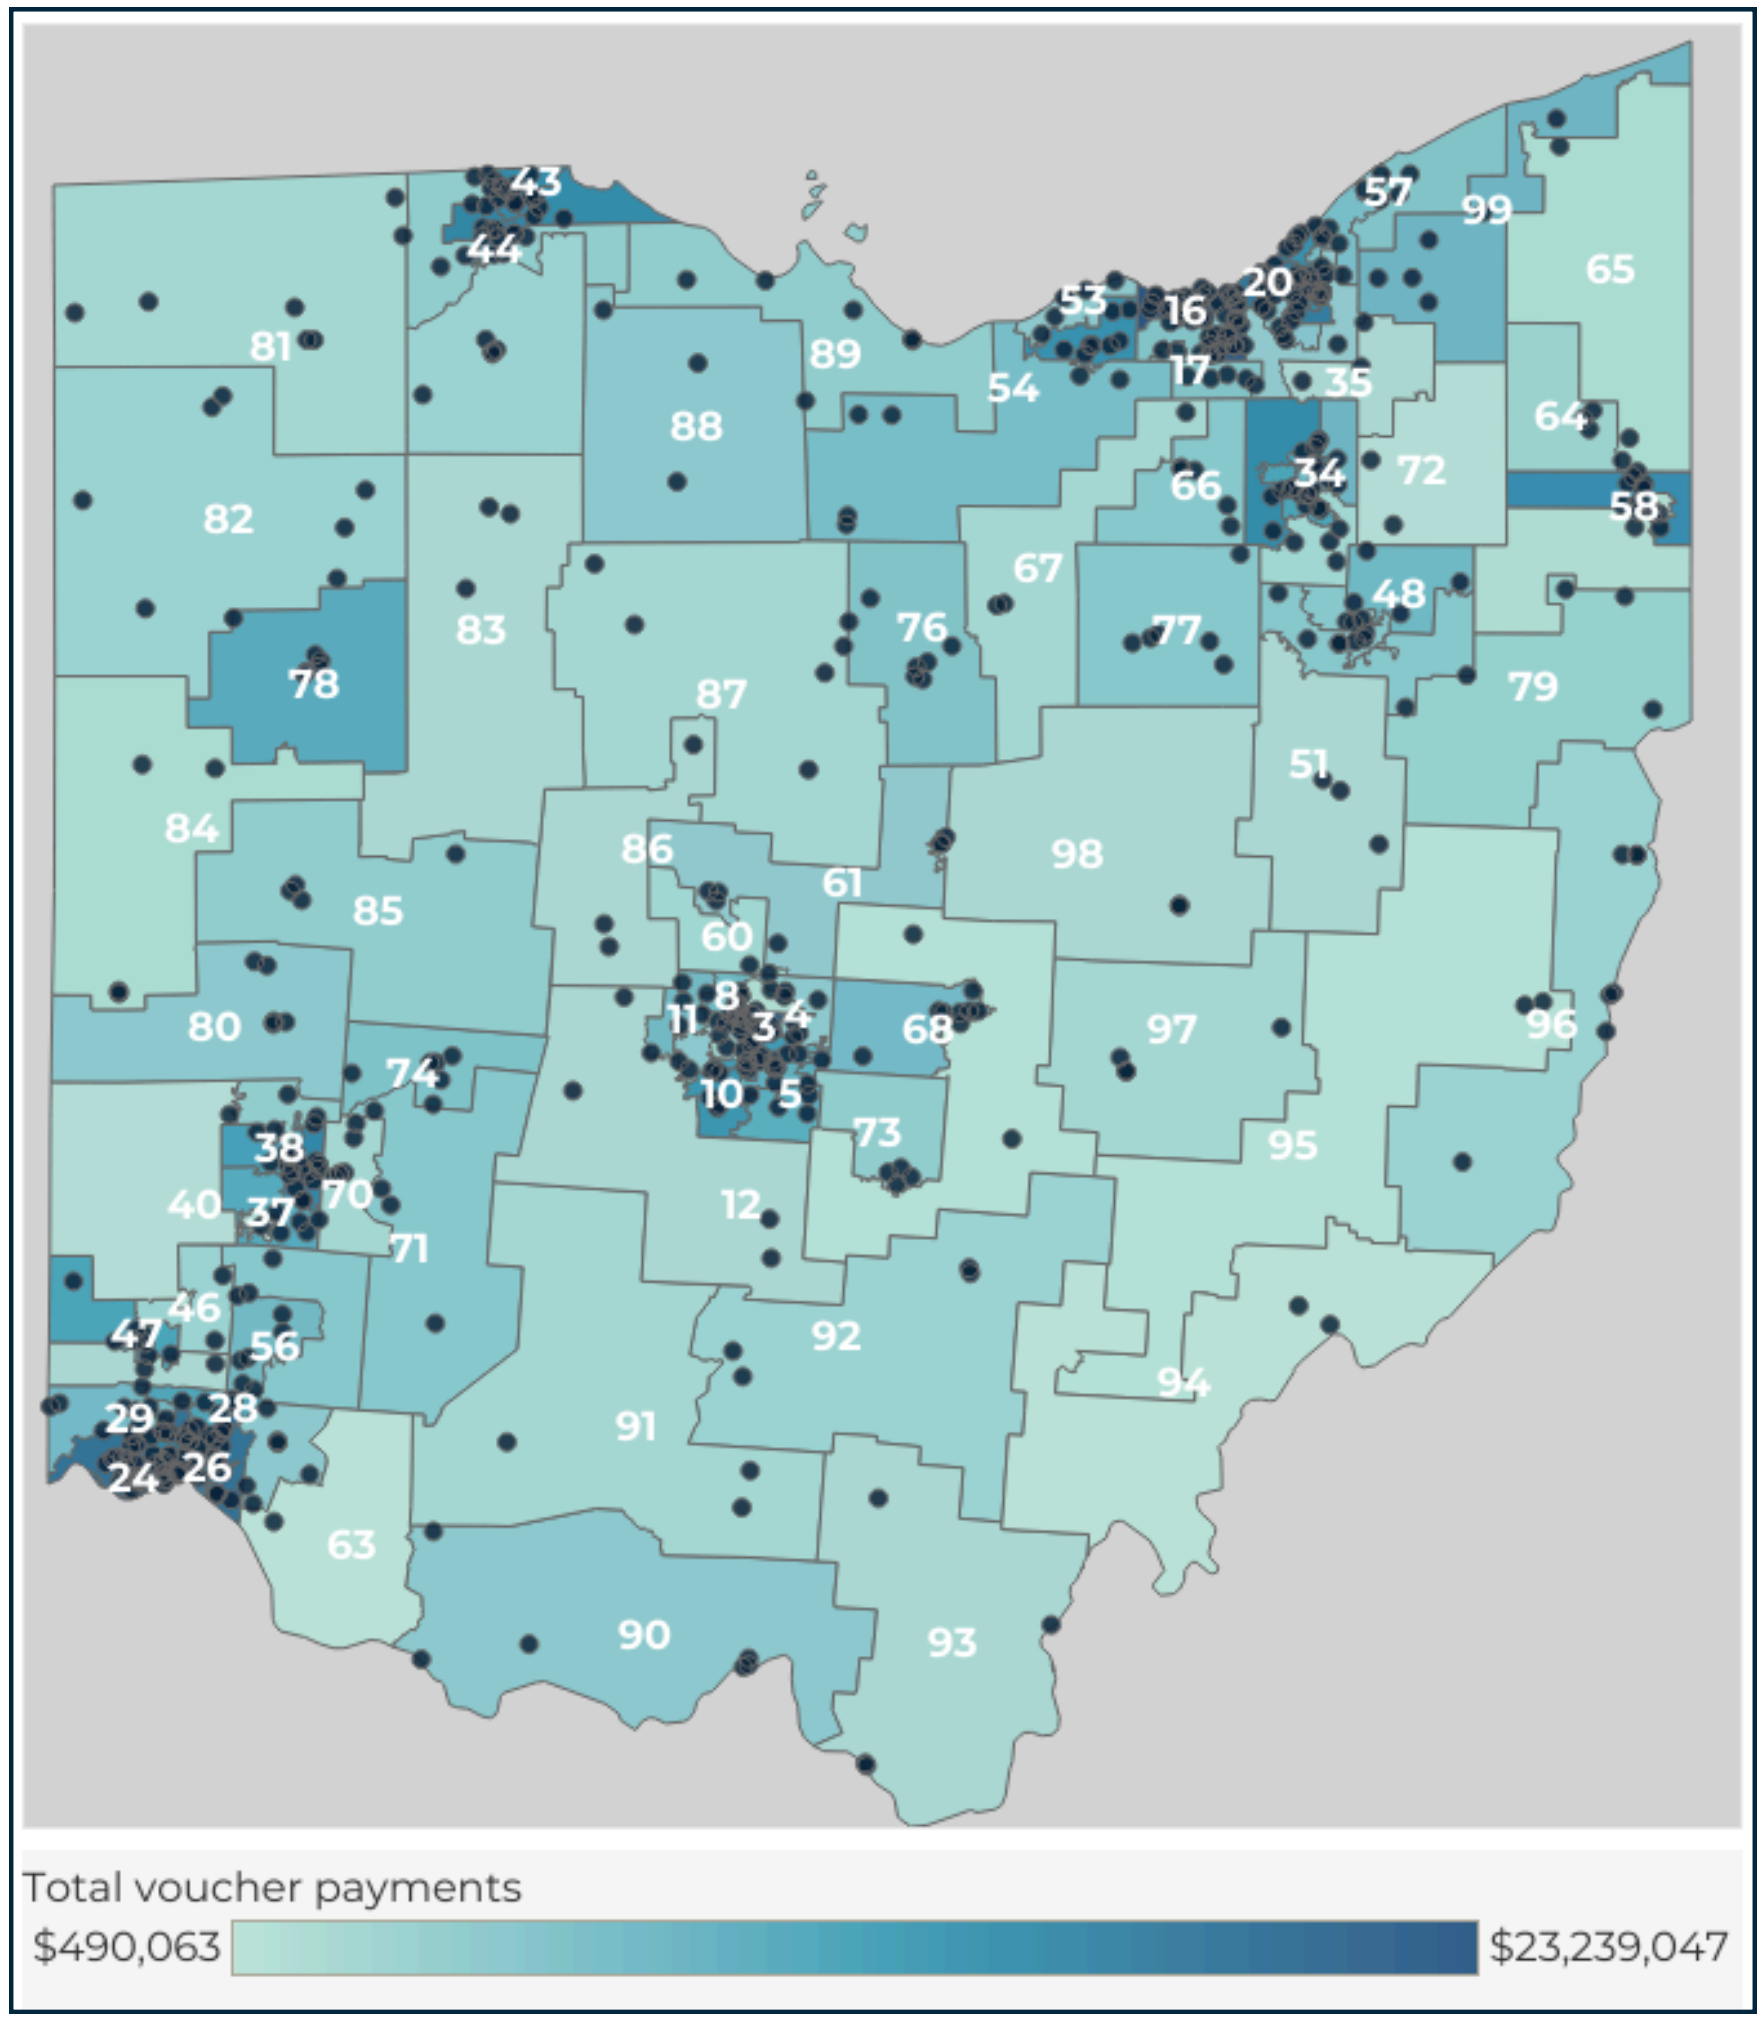
Email them at rep50@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9078

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 51

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 51 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 381

voucher students.

In District 51 there are 44

public schools attended by 15,812

students.

Contact Representative Salvo and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

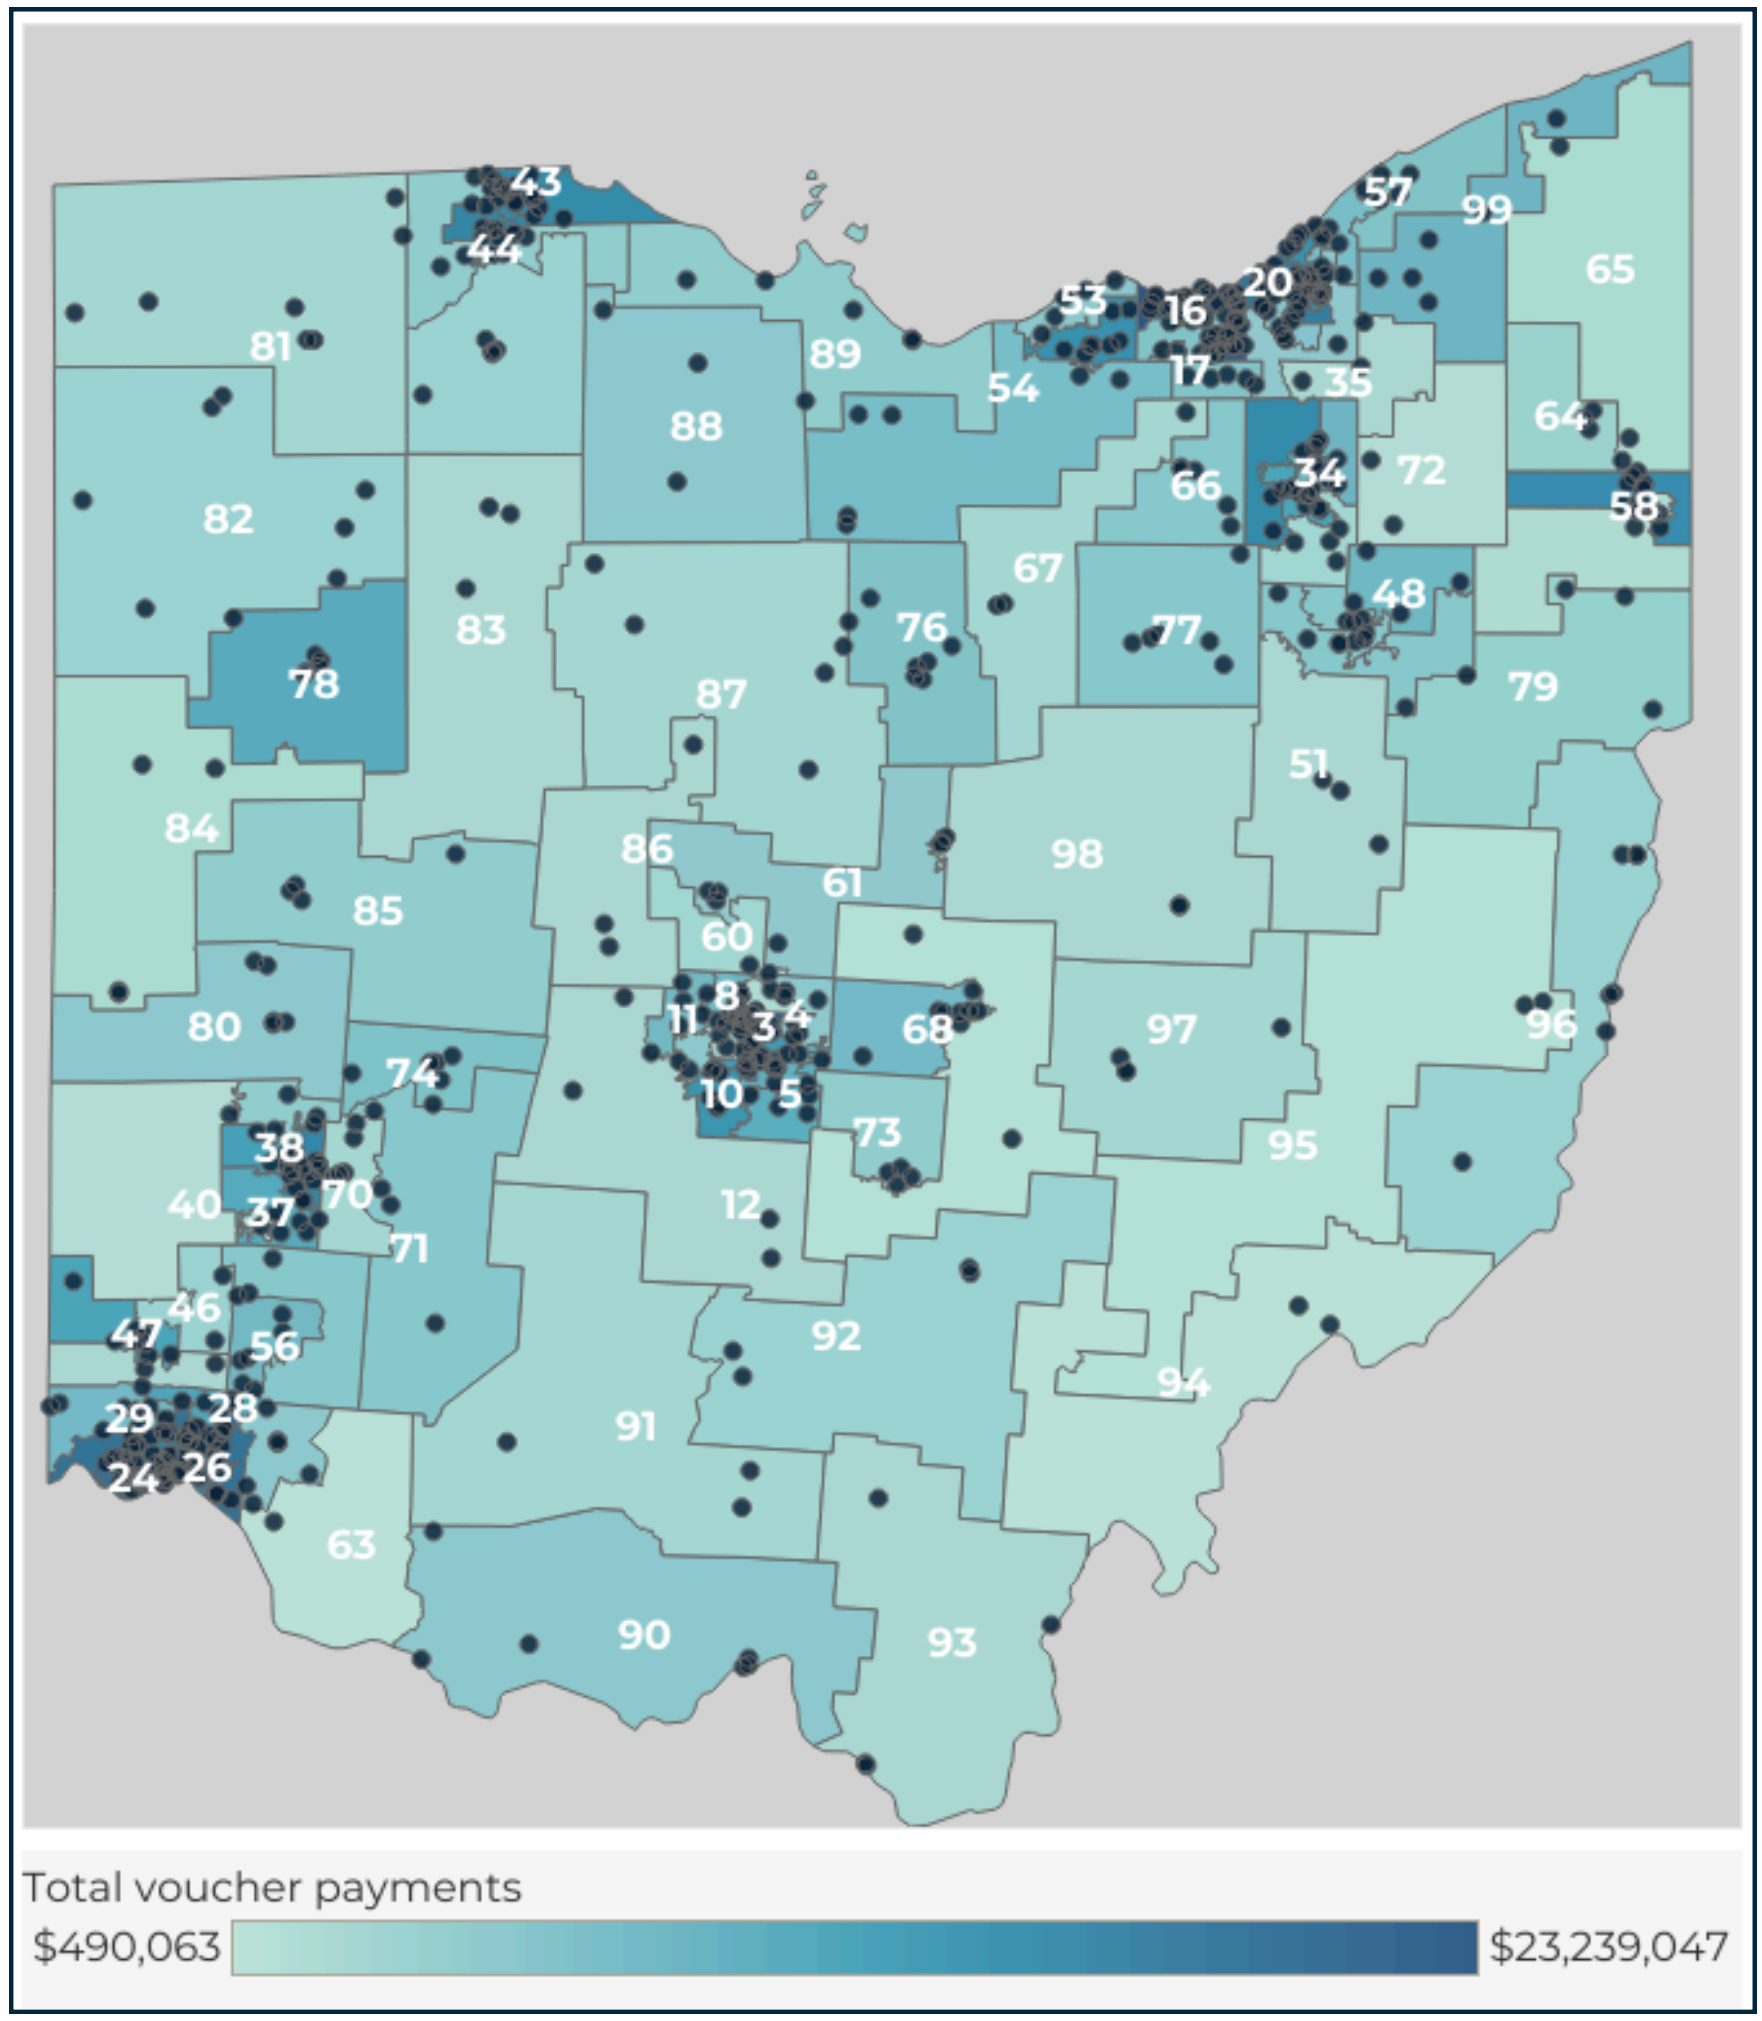
Email them at rep51@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8035

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 52

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 52 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 2,814

voucher students.

In District 52 there are 20

public schools attended by 14,545

students.

Contact Representative Manning and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

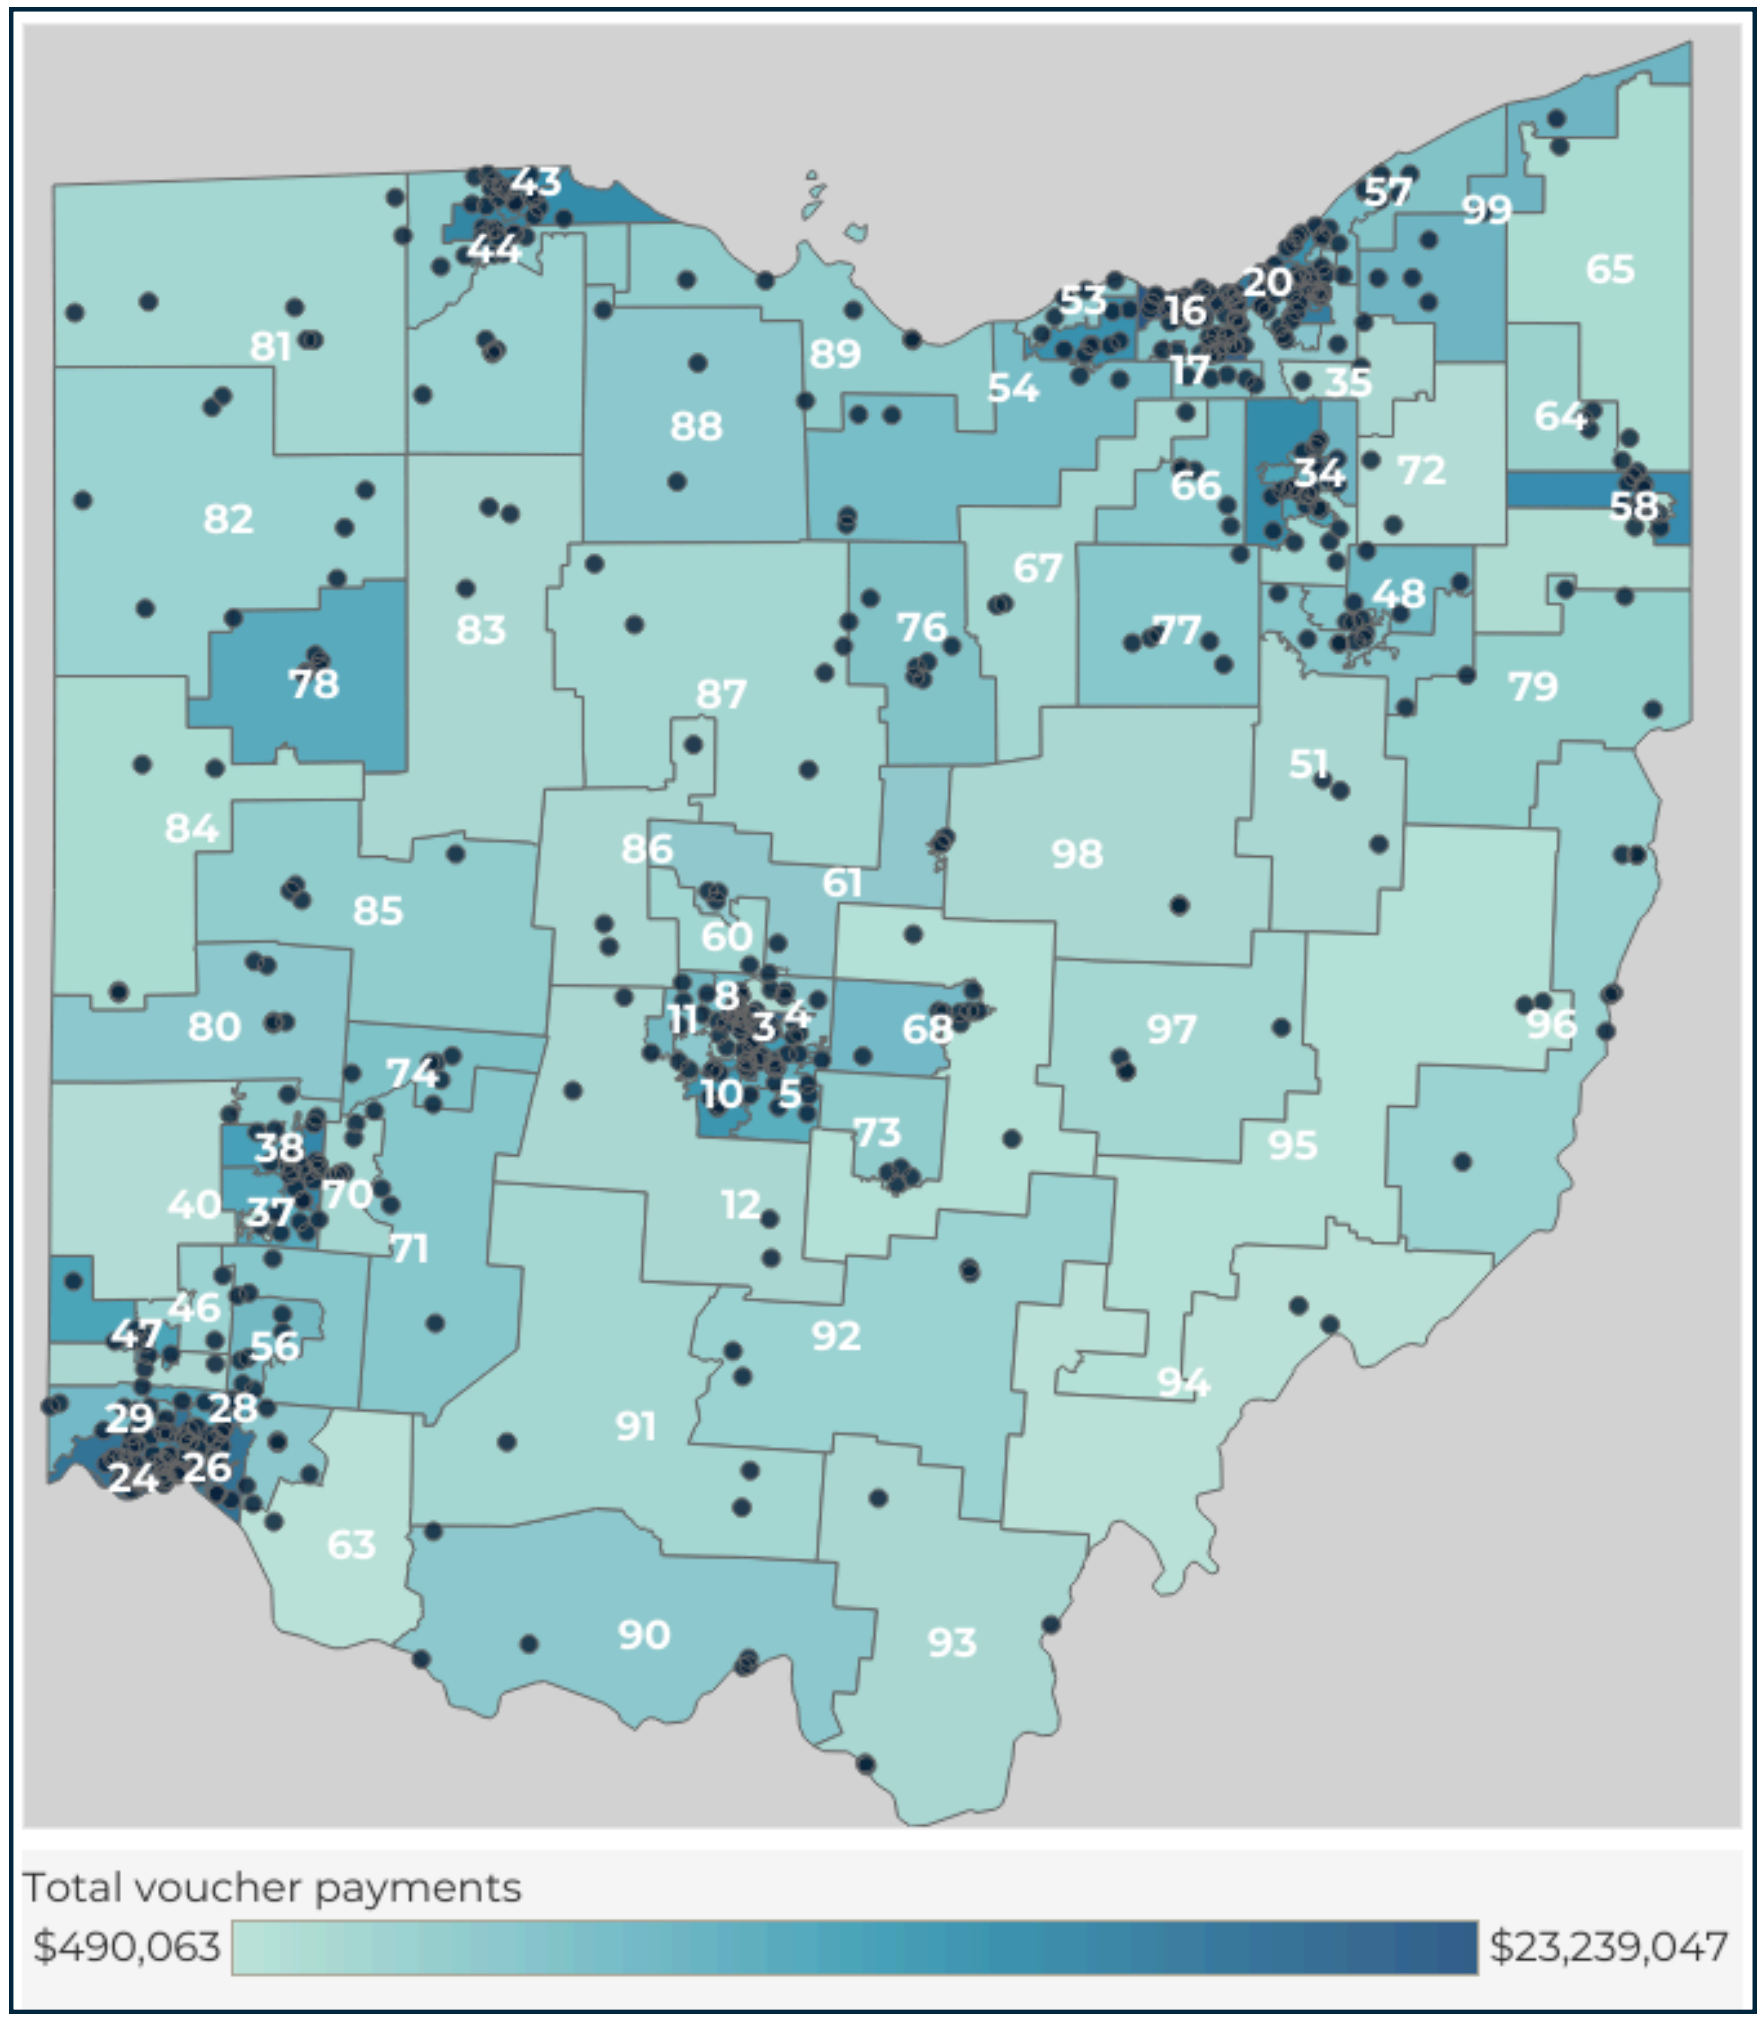
Email them at rep52@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5076

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 53

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 53 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 957

voucher students.

In District 53 there are 34

public schools attended by 14,903

students.

Contact Representative Miller and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

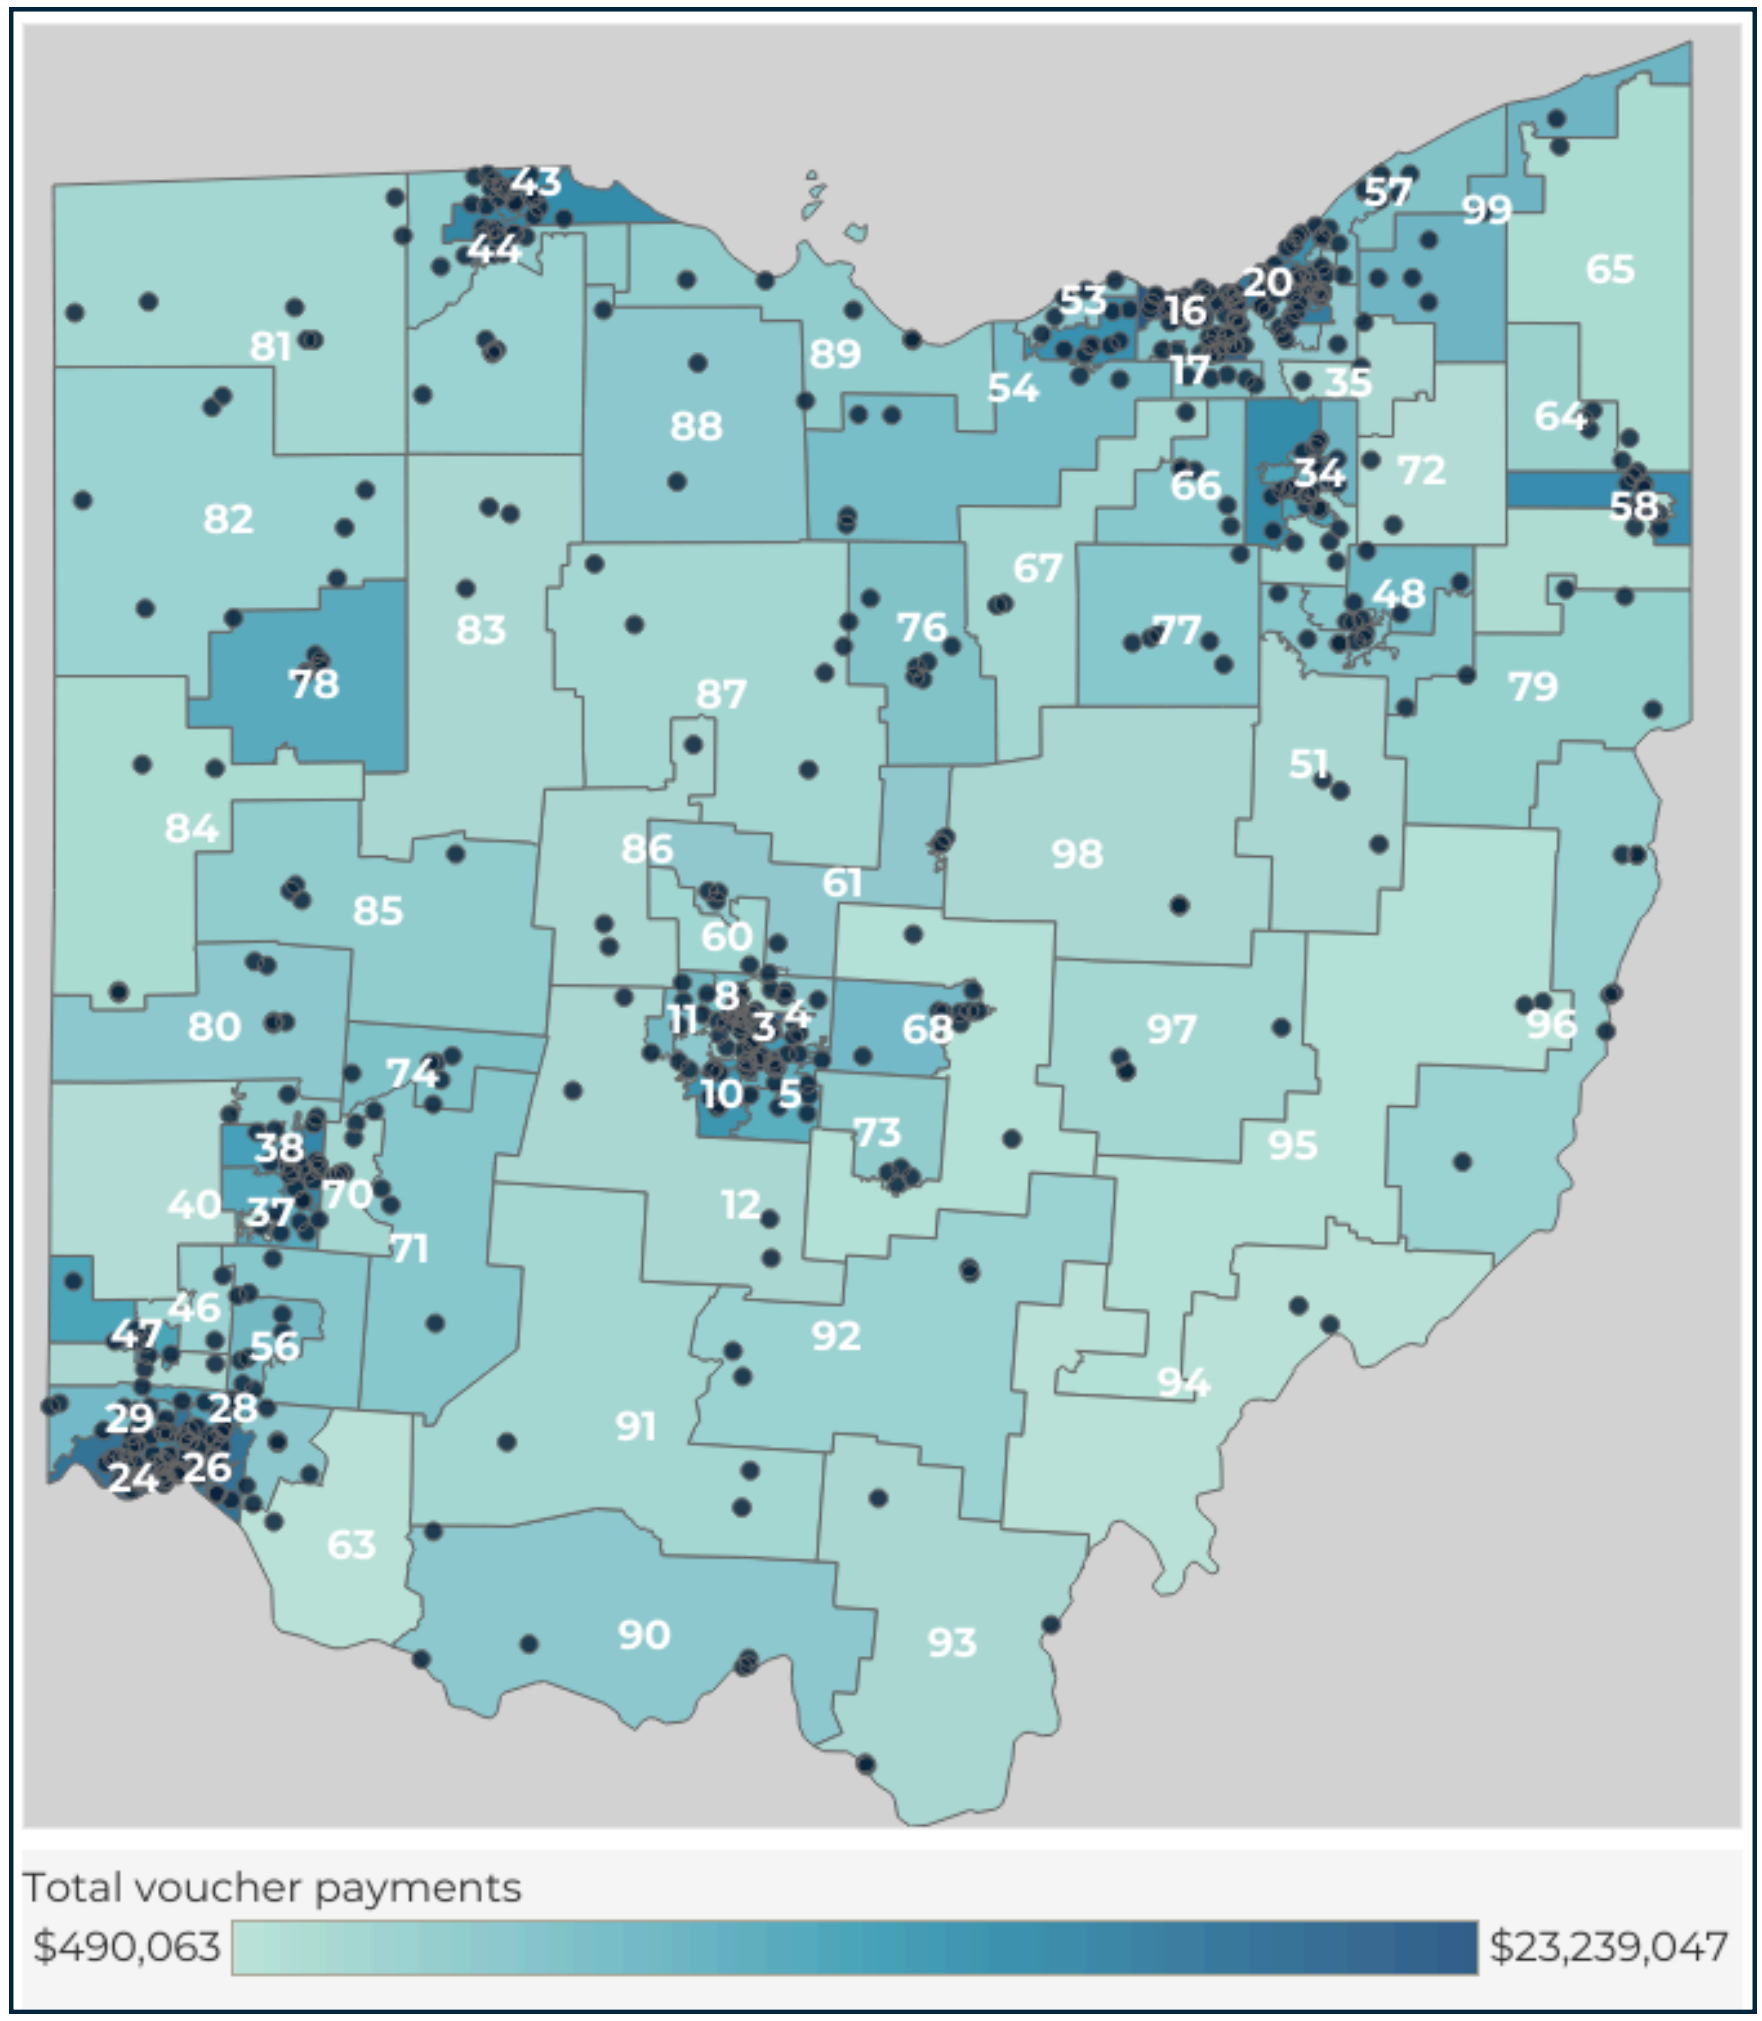
Email them at rep53@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5141

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 54

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 54 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,206

voucher students.

In District 54 there are

41

public schools attended by 14,849

students.

Contact Representative Deeter and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

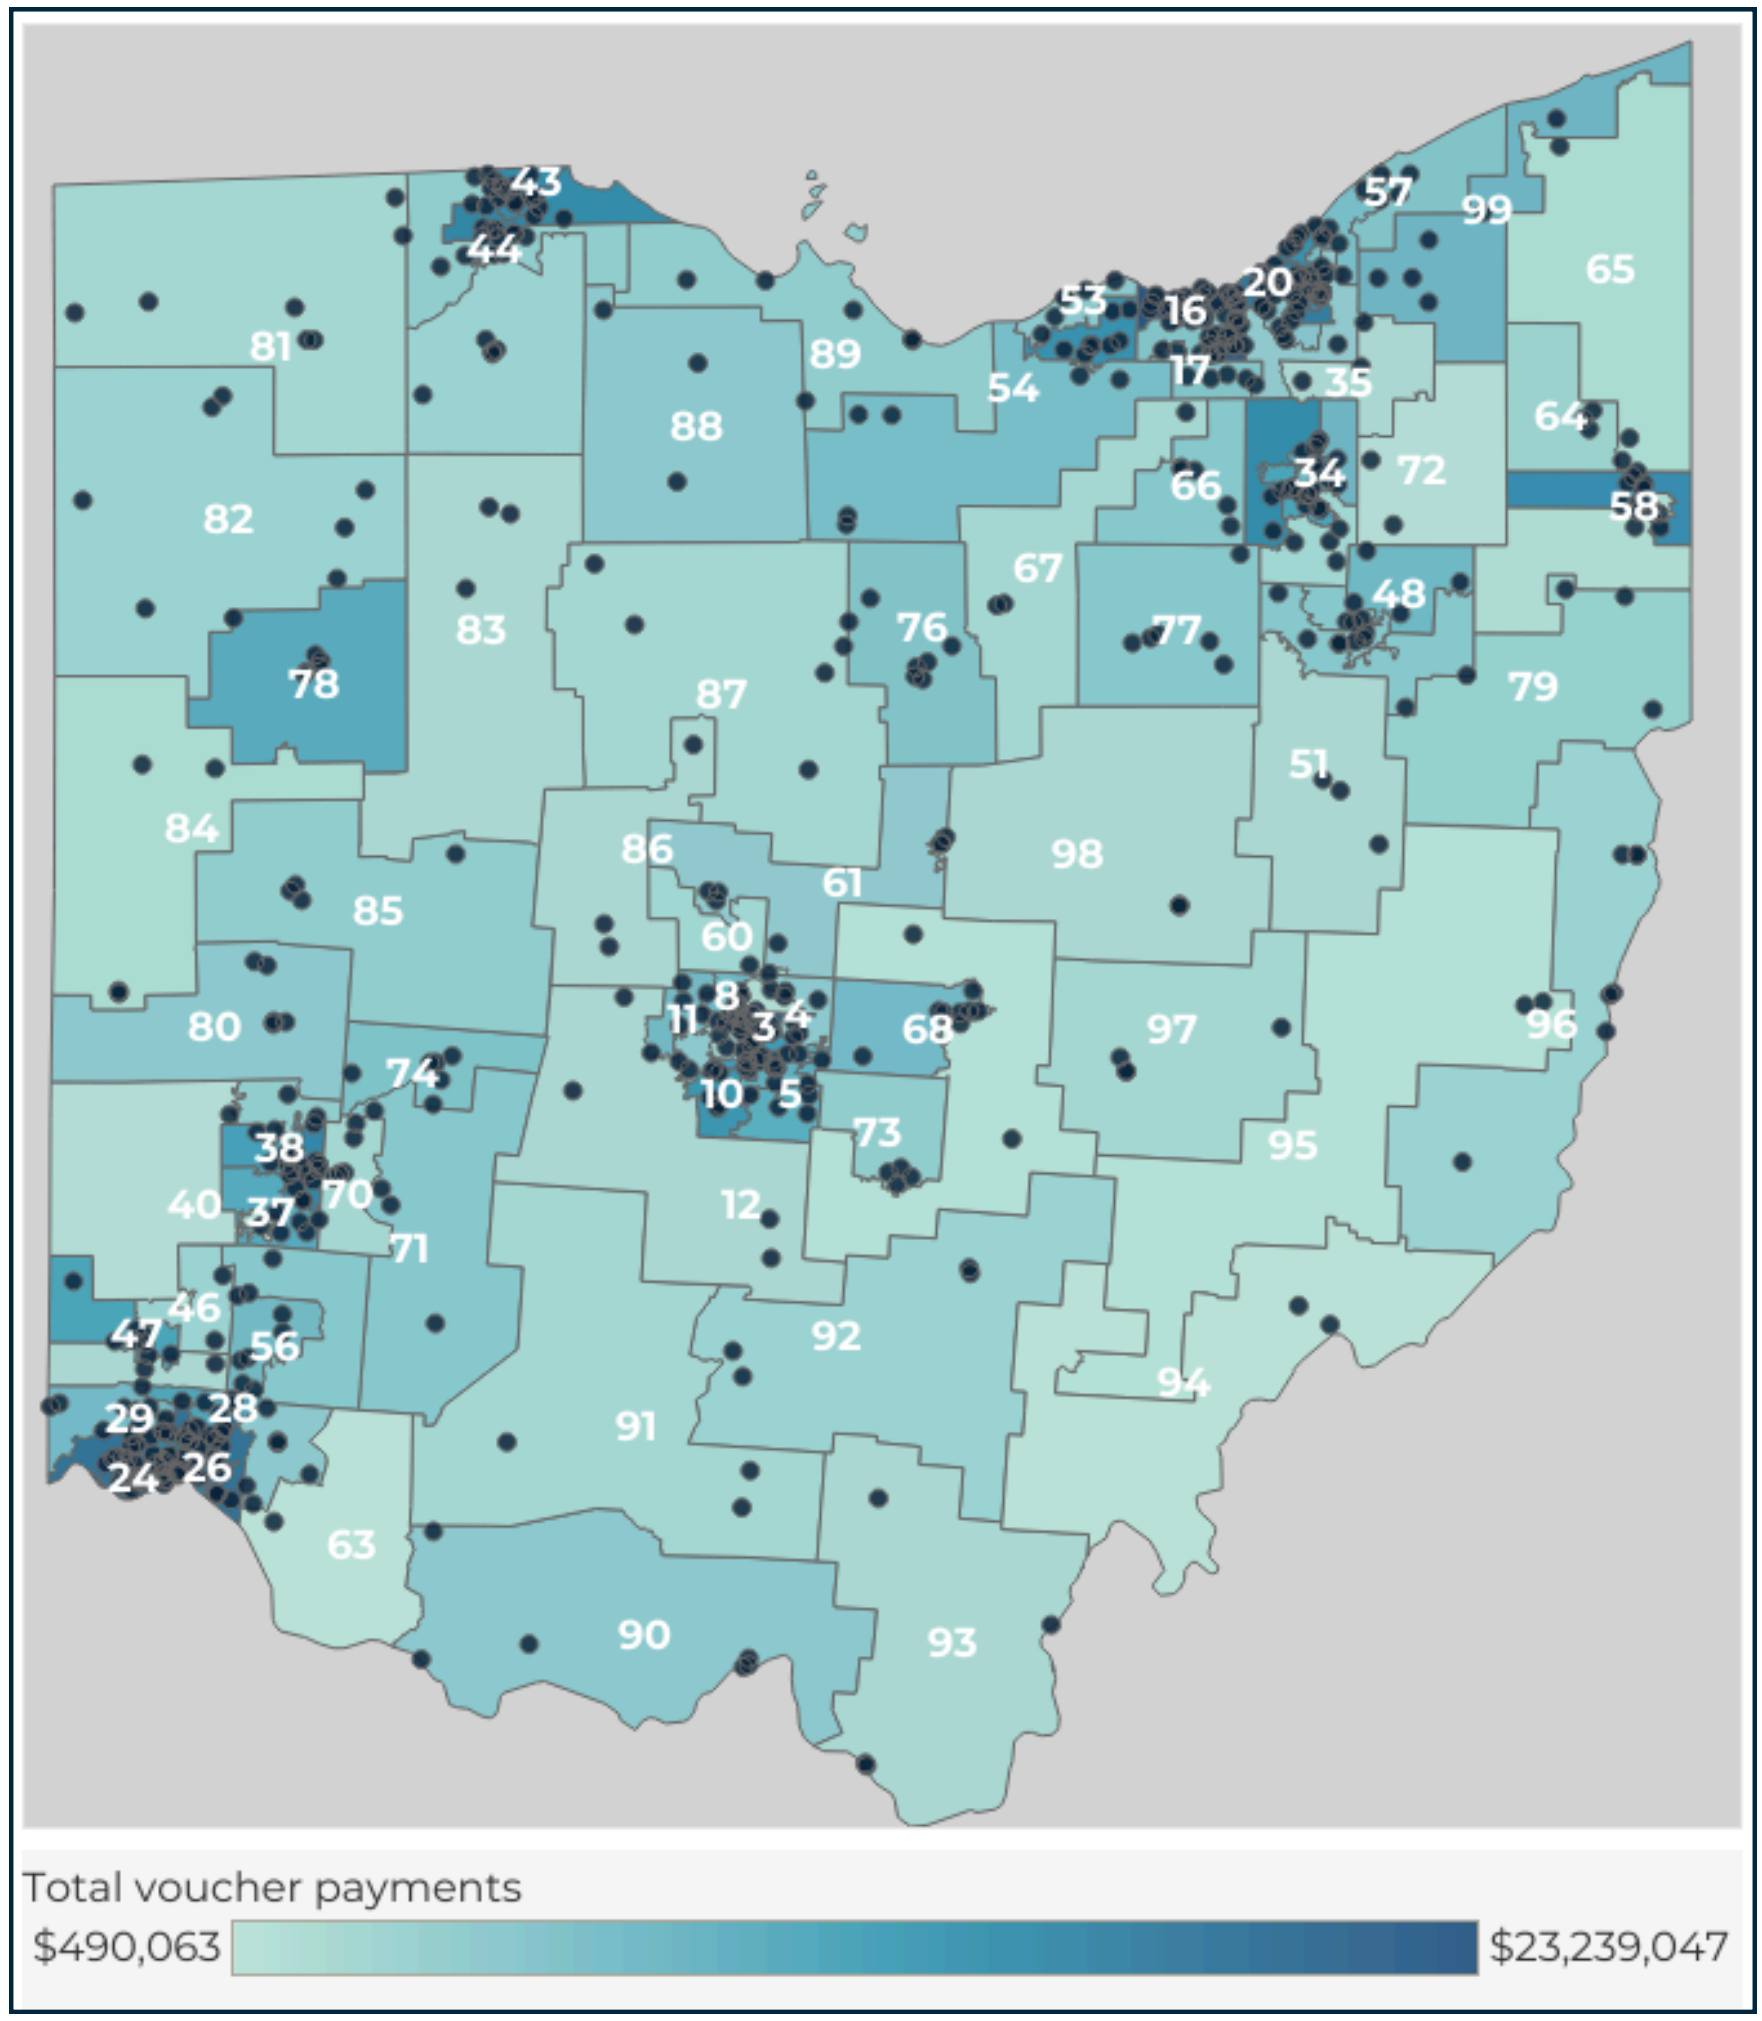
Email them at Rep54@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9628

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 55

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 55 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 967

voucher students.

In District 55 there are 25

public schools attended by 17,226

students.

Contact Representative Teska and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

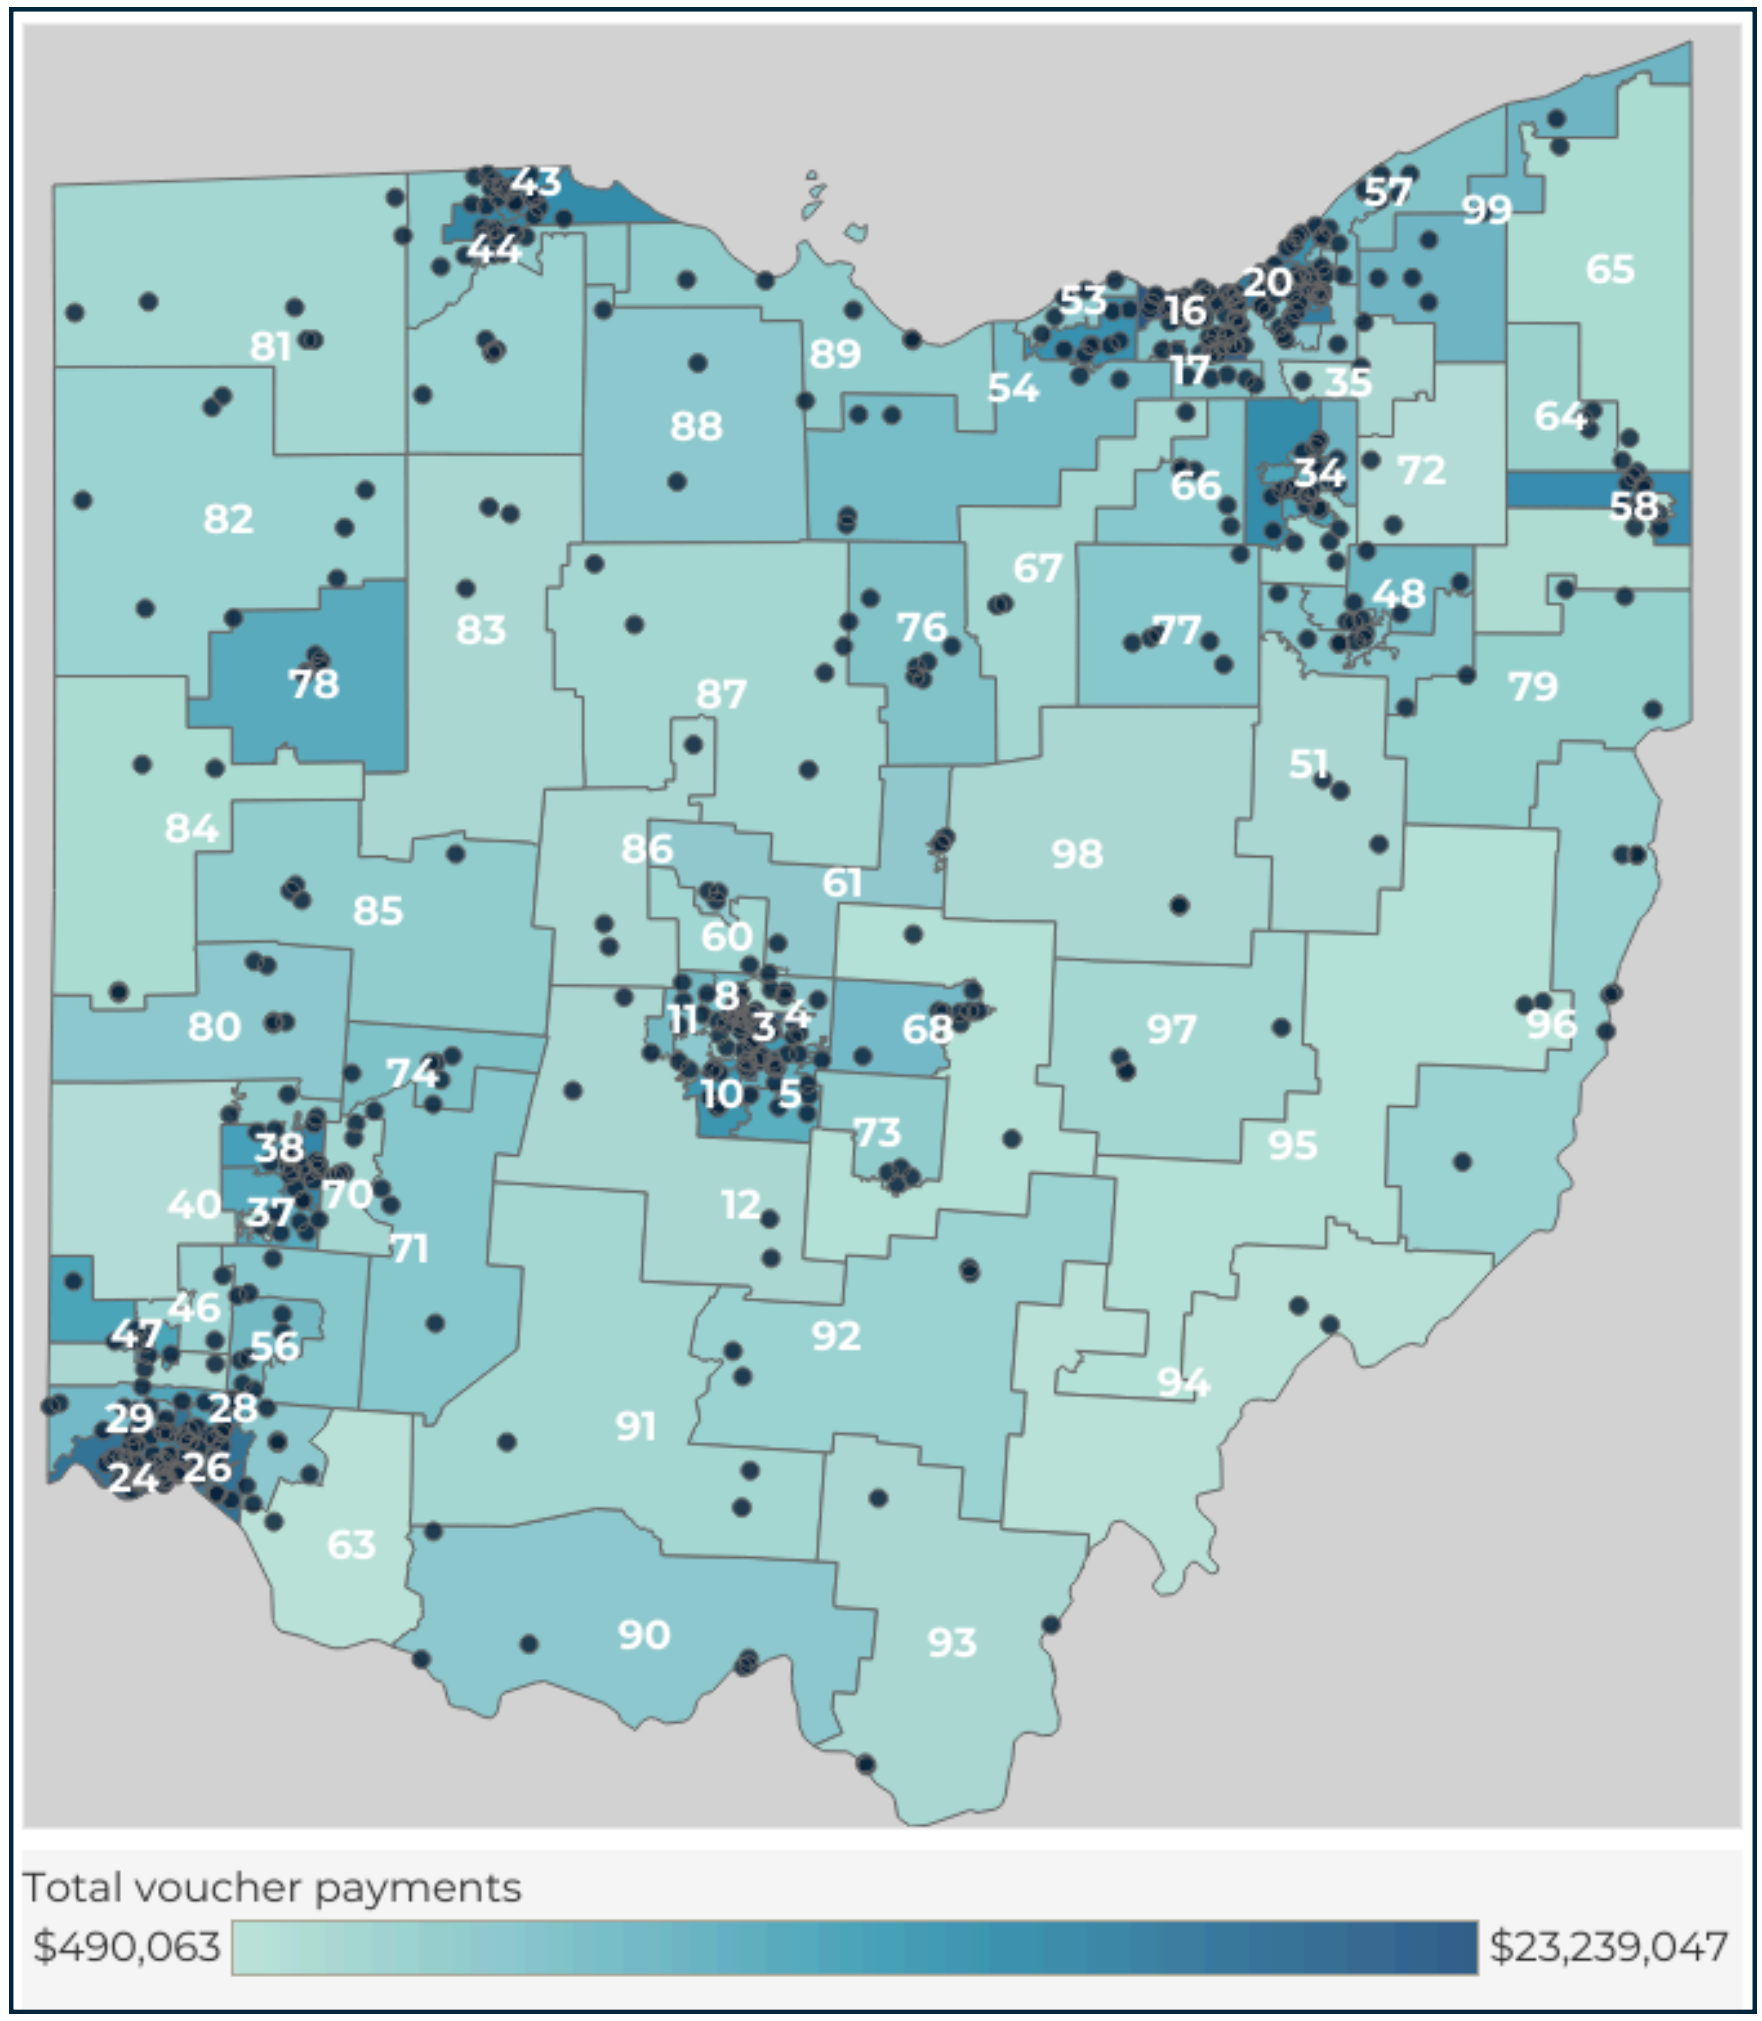
Email them at rep55@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6023

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 56

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 56 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,993

voucher students.

In District 56 there are 15 public schools attended by 19,974

students.

Contact Representative Mathews and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

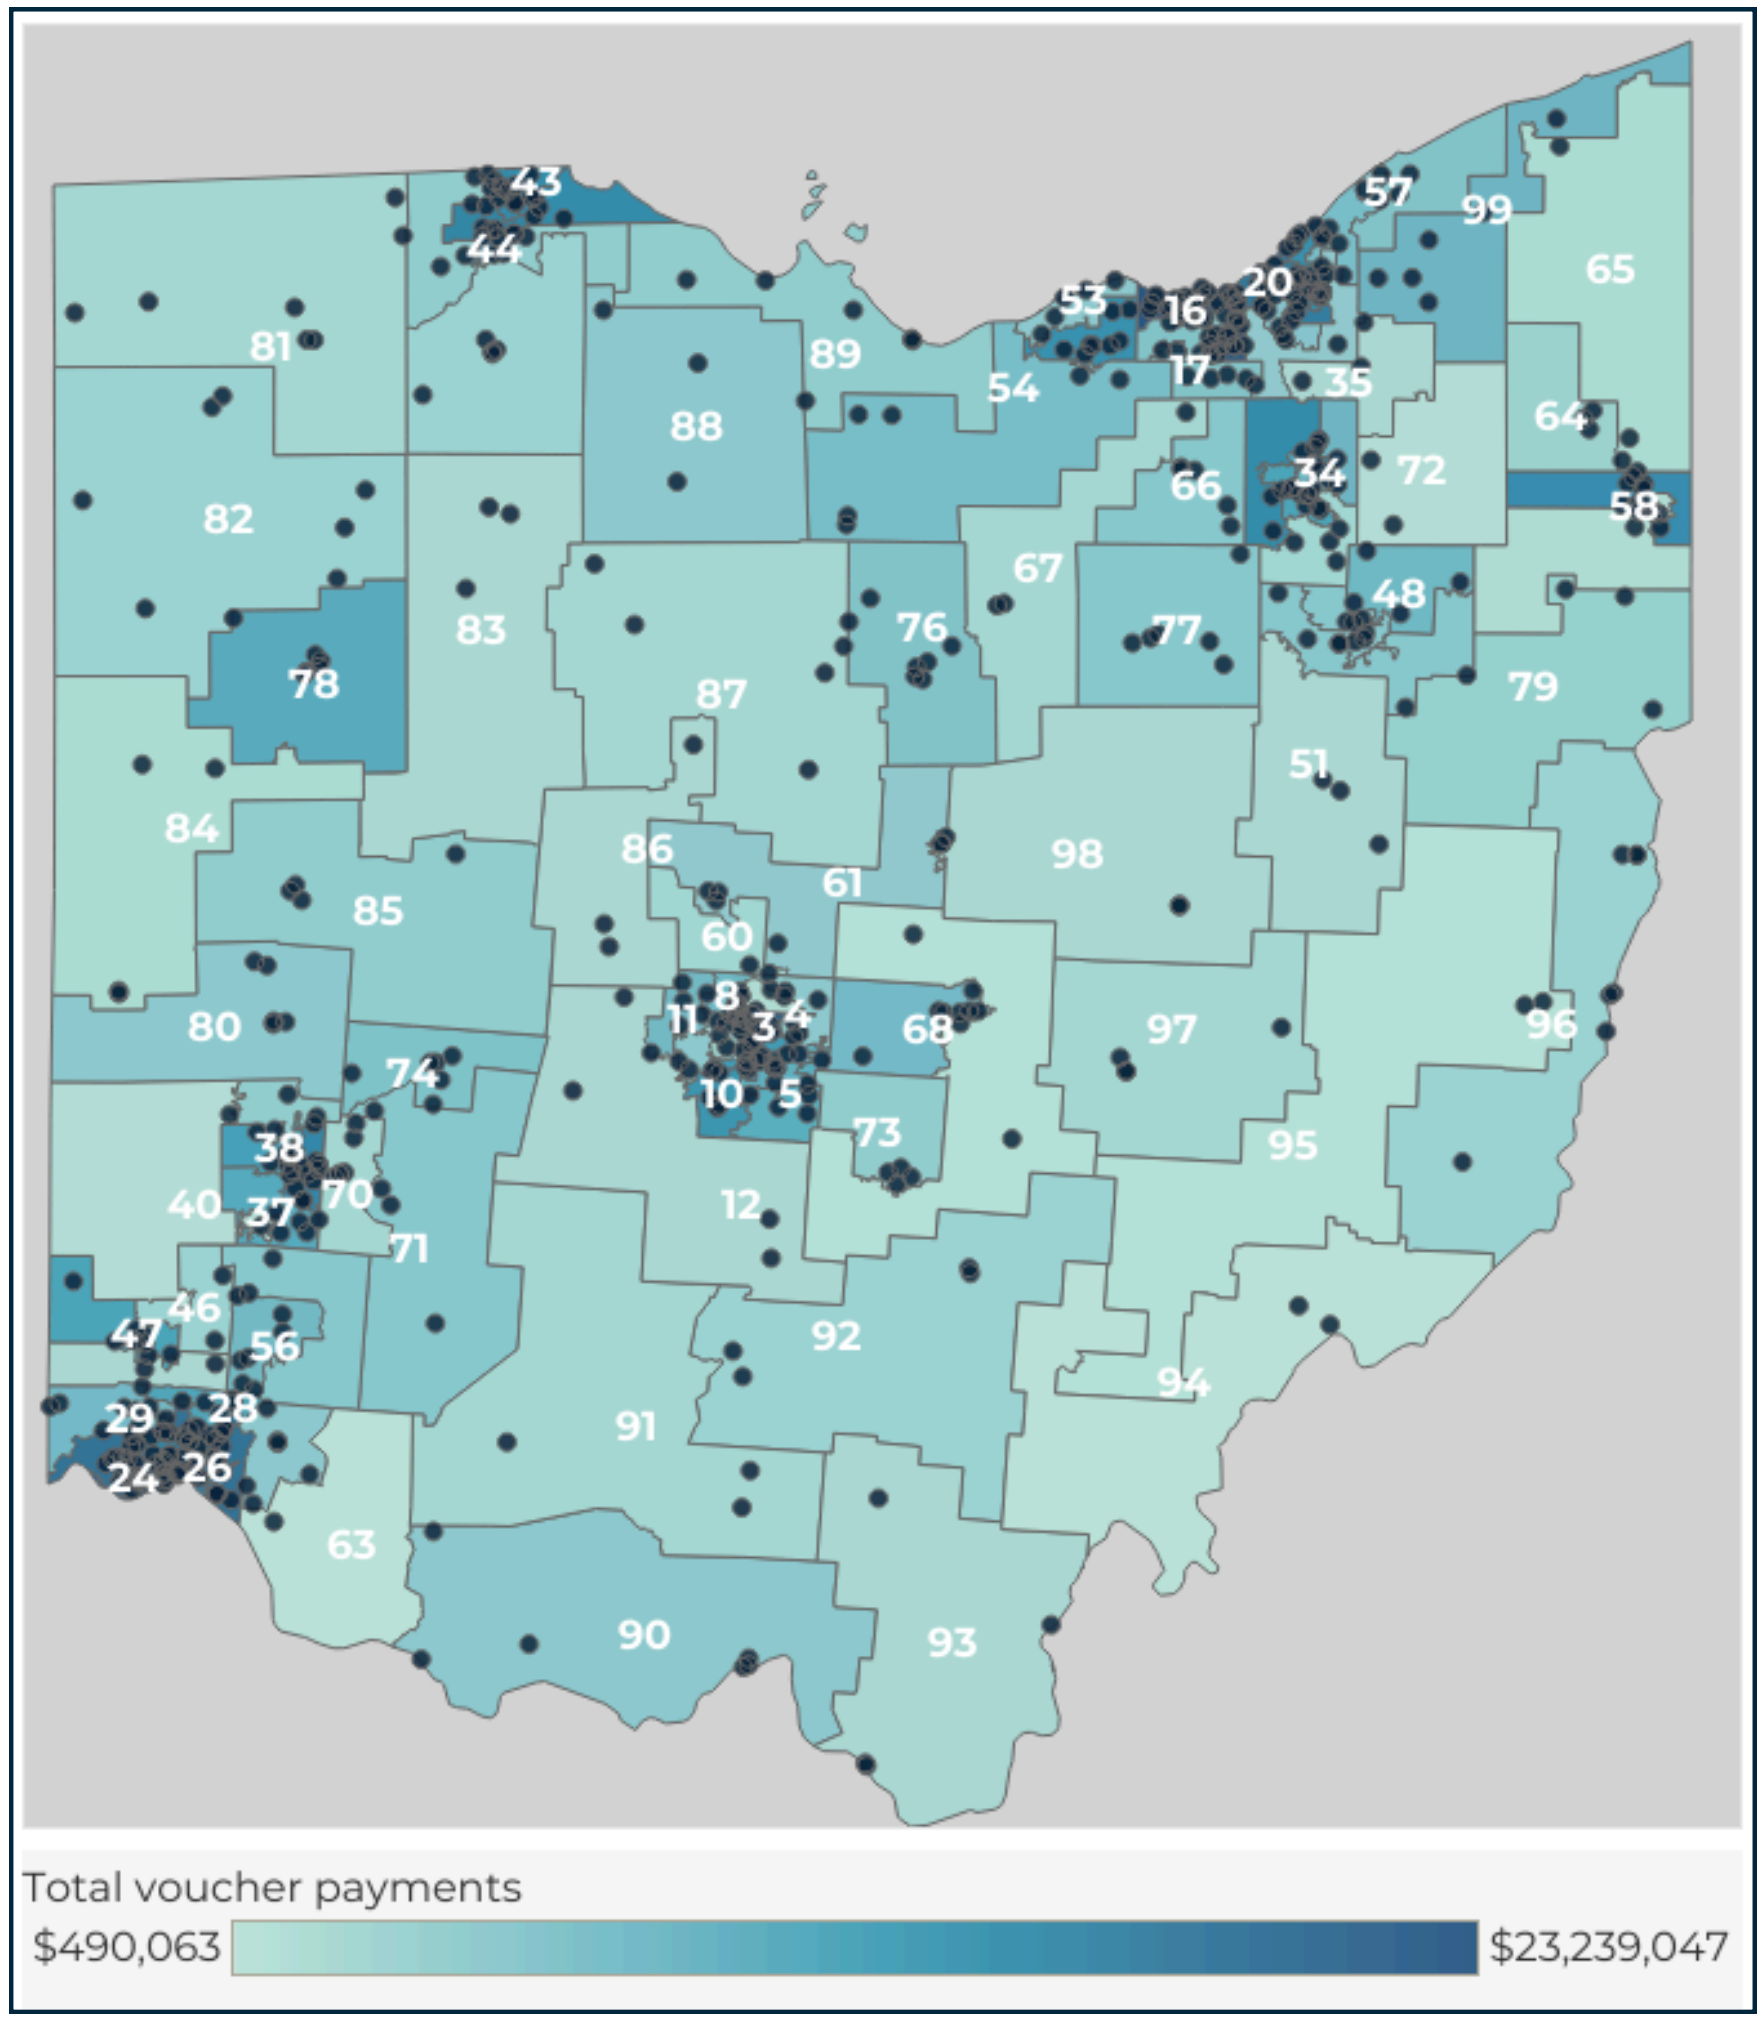
Email them at rep56@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6027

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 57

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 57 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 1,126

voucher students.

In District 57 there are 29

public schools attended by 14,722

students.

Contact Representative Callender and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

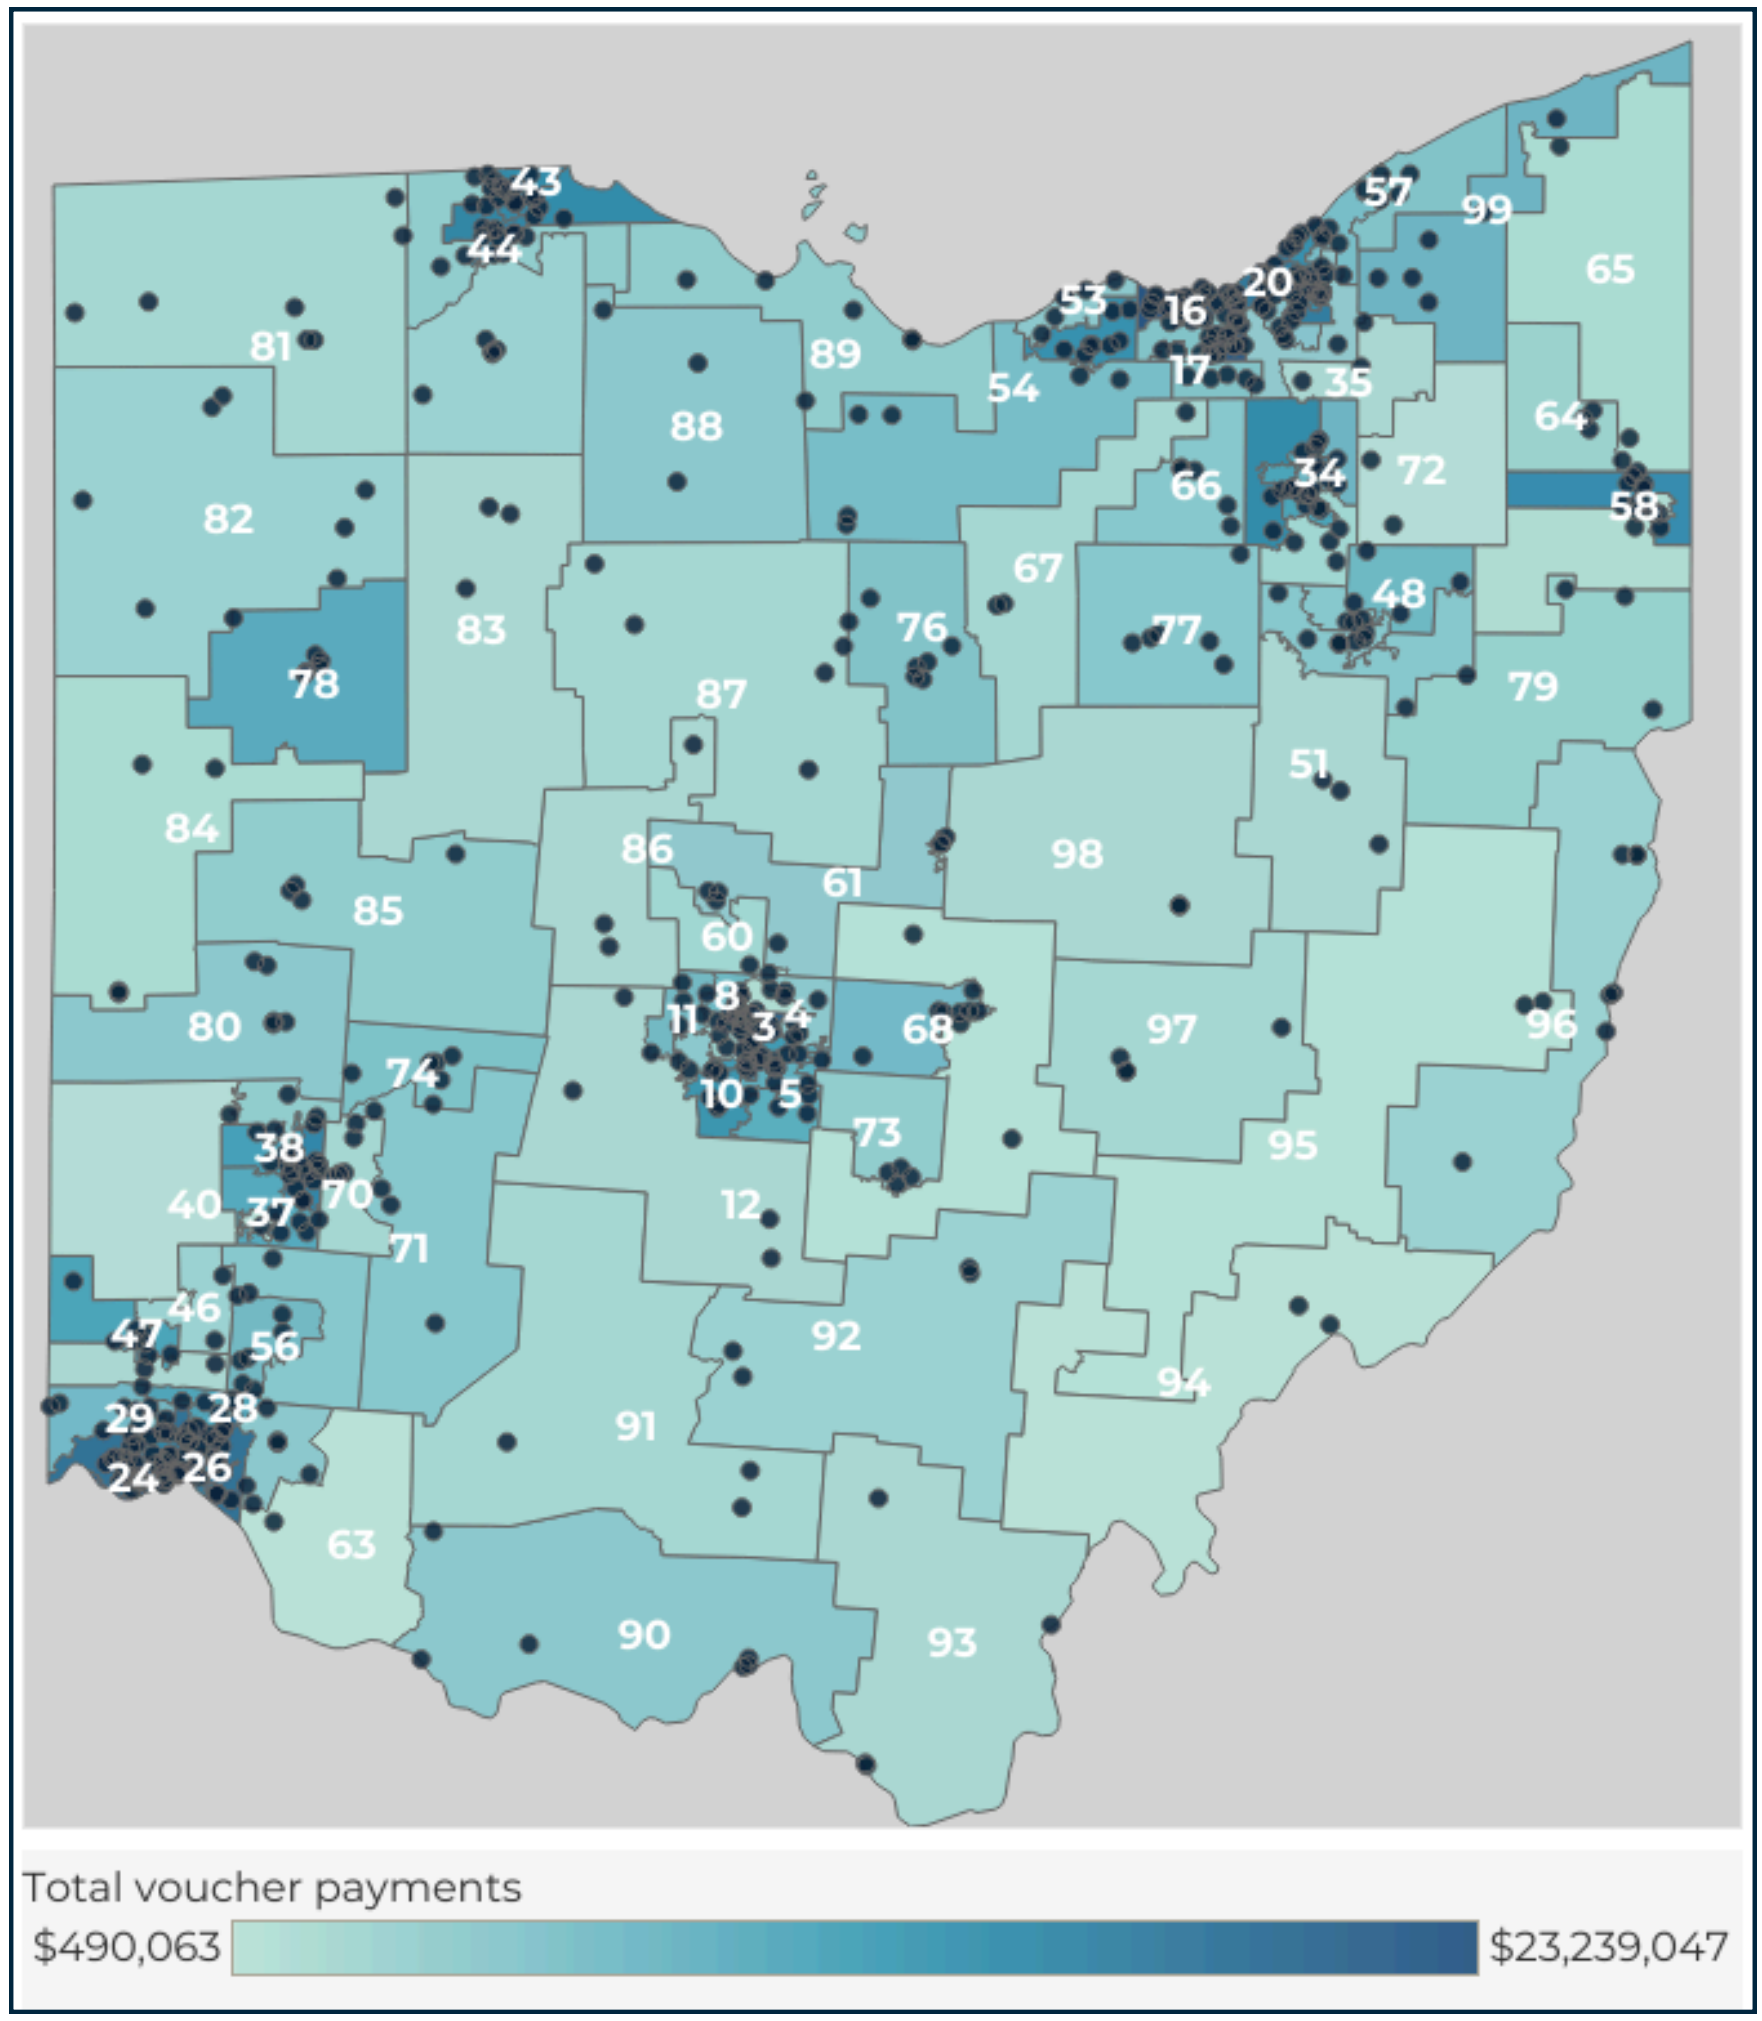
Email them at Rep57@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6074

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 58

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 58 there are

11

private voucher schools attended by 2,373

voucher students.

In District 58 there are 26

public schools attended by 11,072

students.

Contact Representative McNally and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

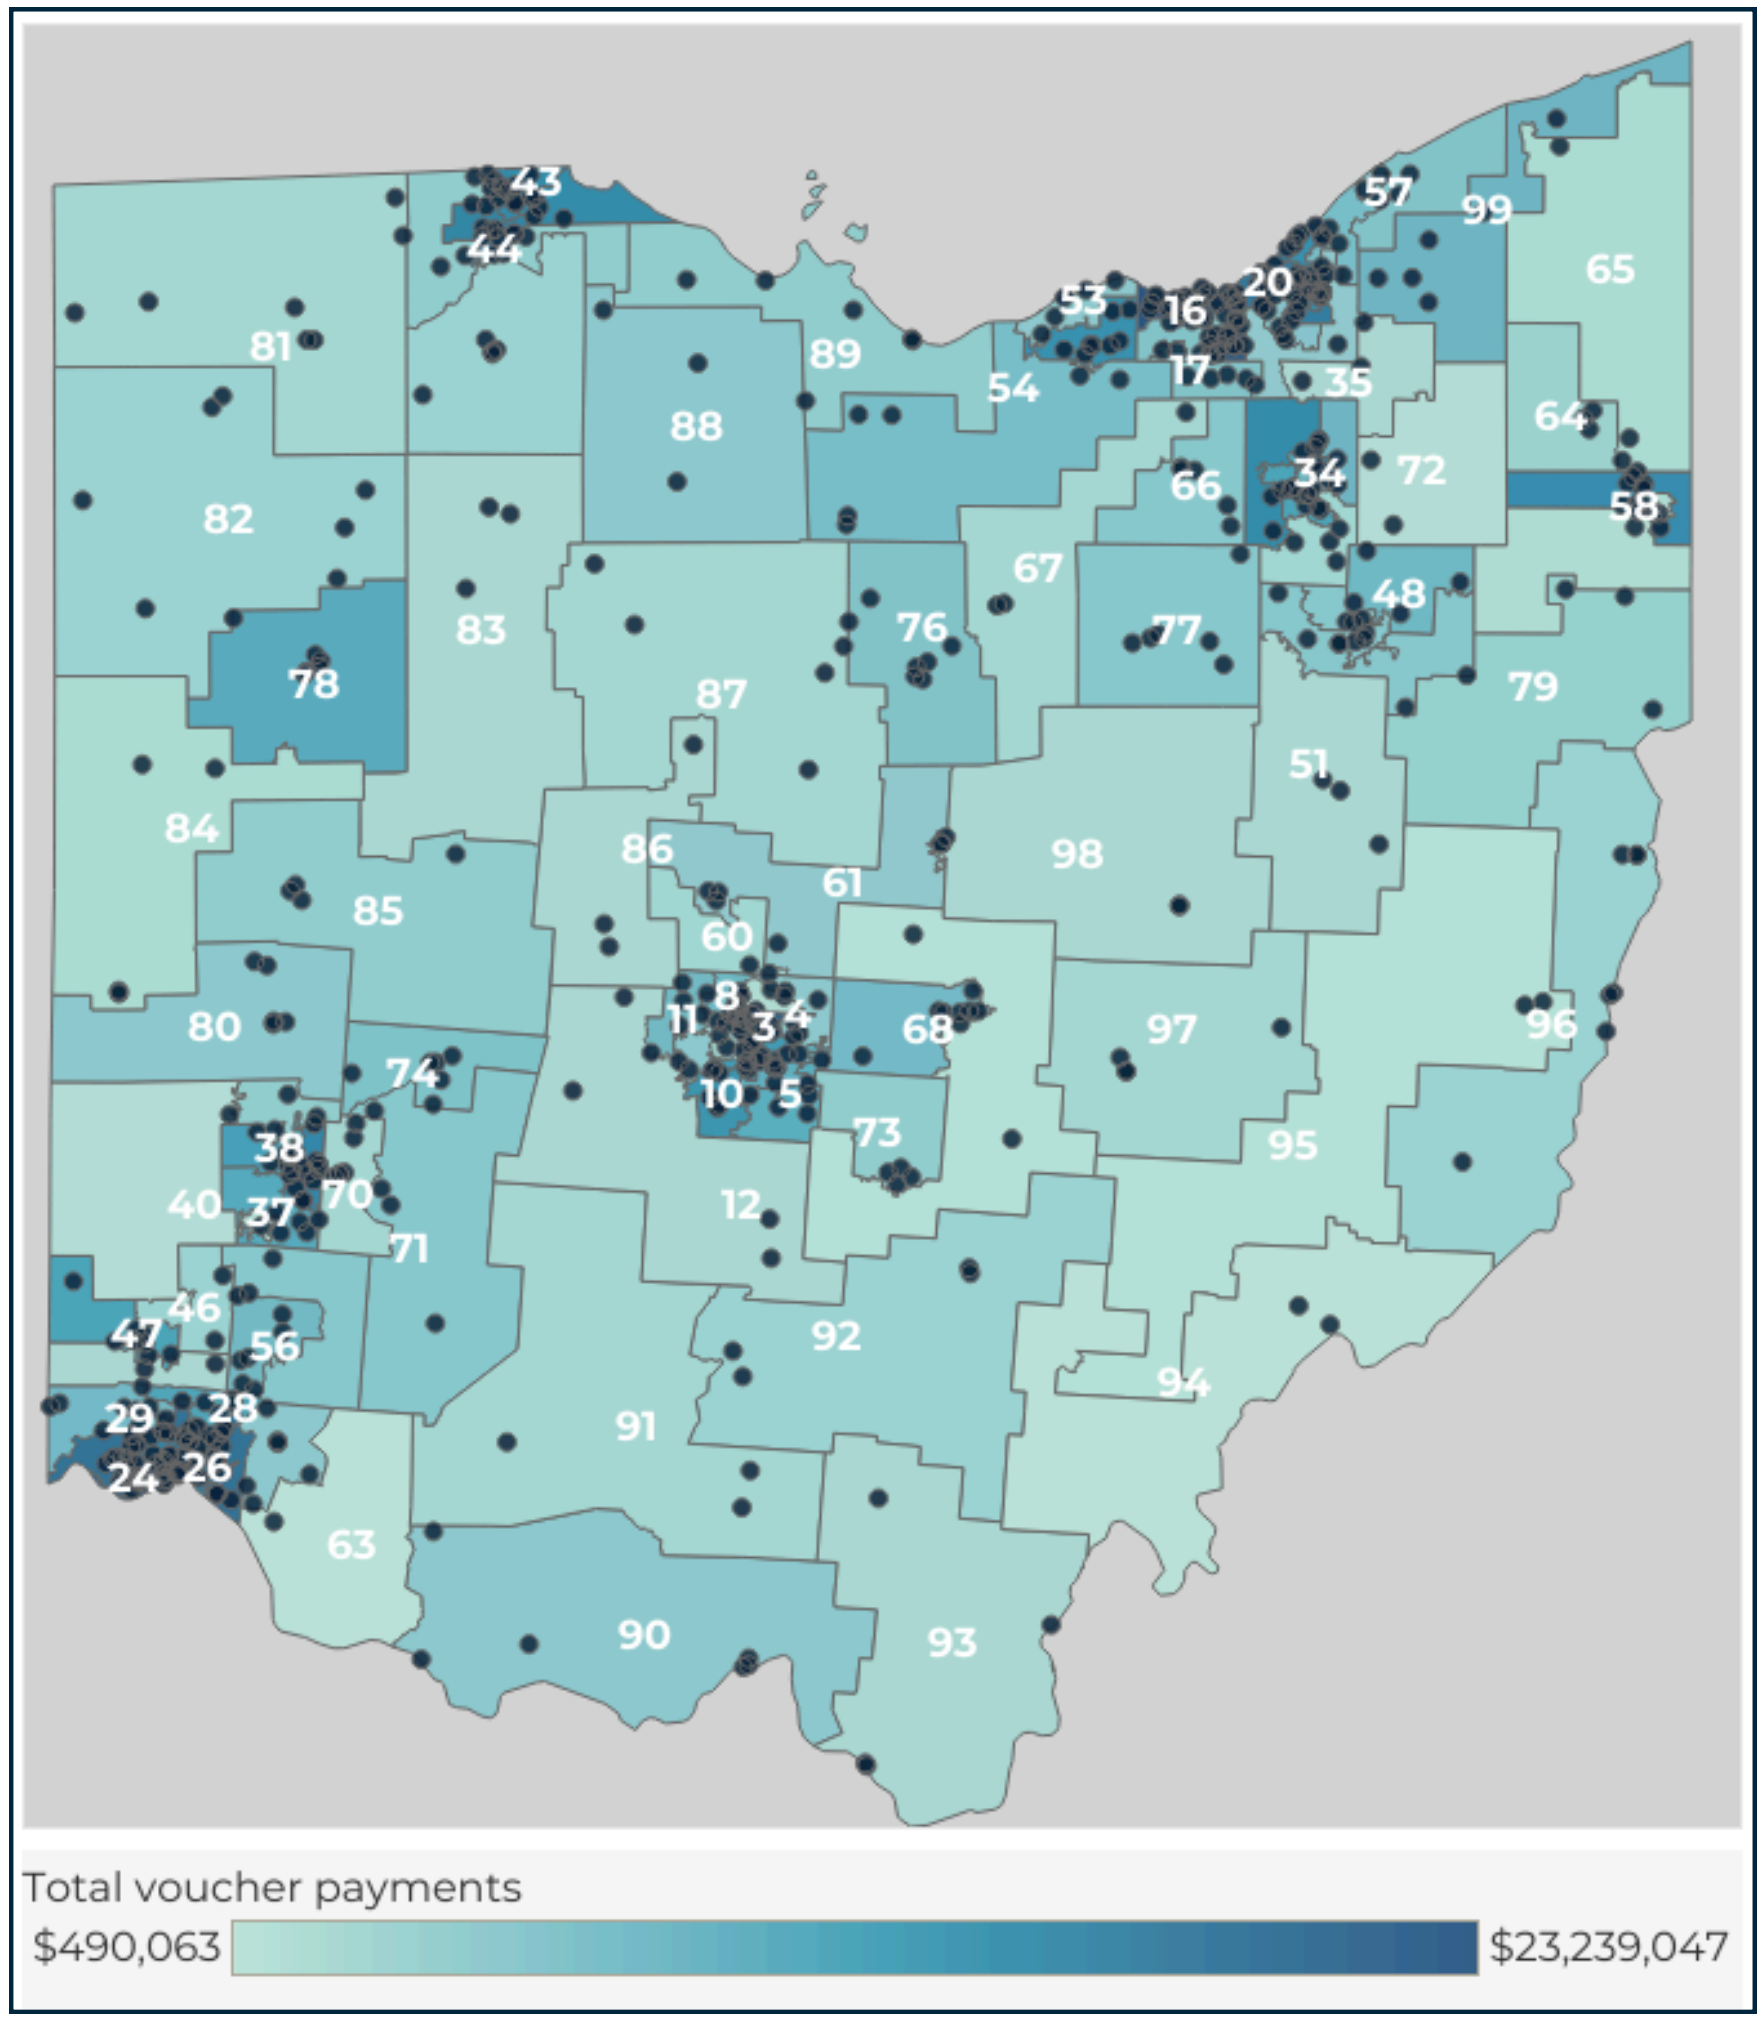
Email them at rep58@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9435

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 59

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 59 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 356

voucher students.

In District 59 there are 34

public schools attended by 13,711

students.

Contact Representative Fischer and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

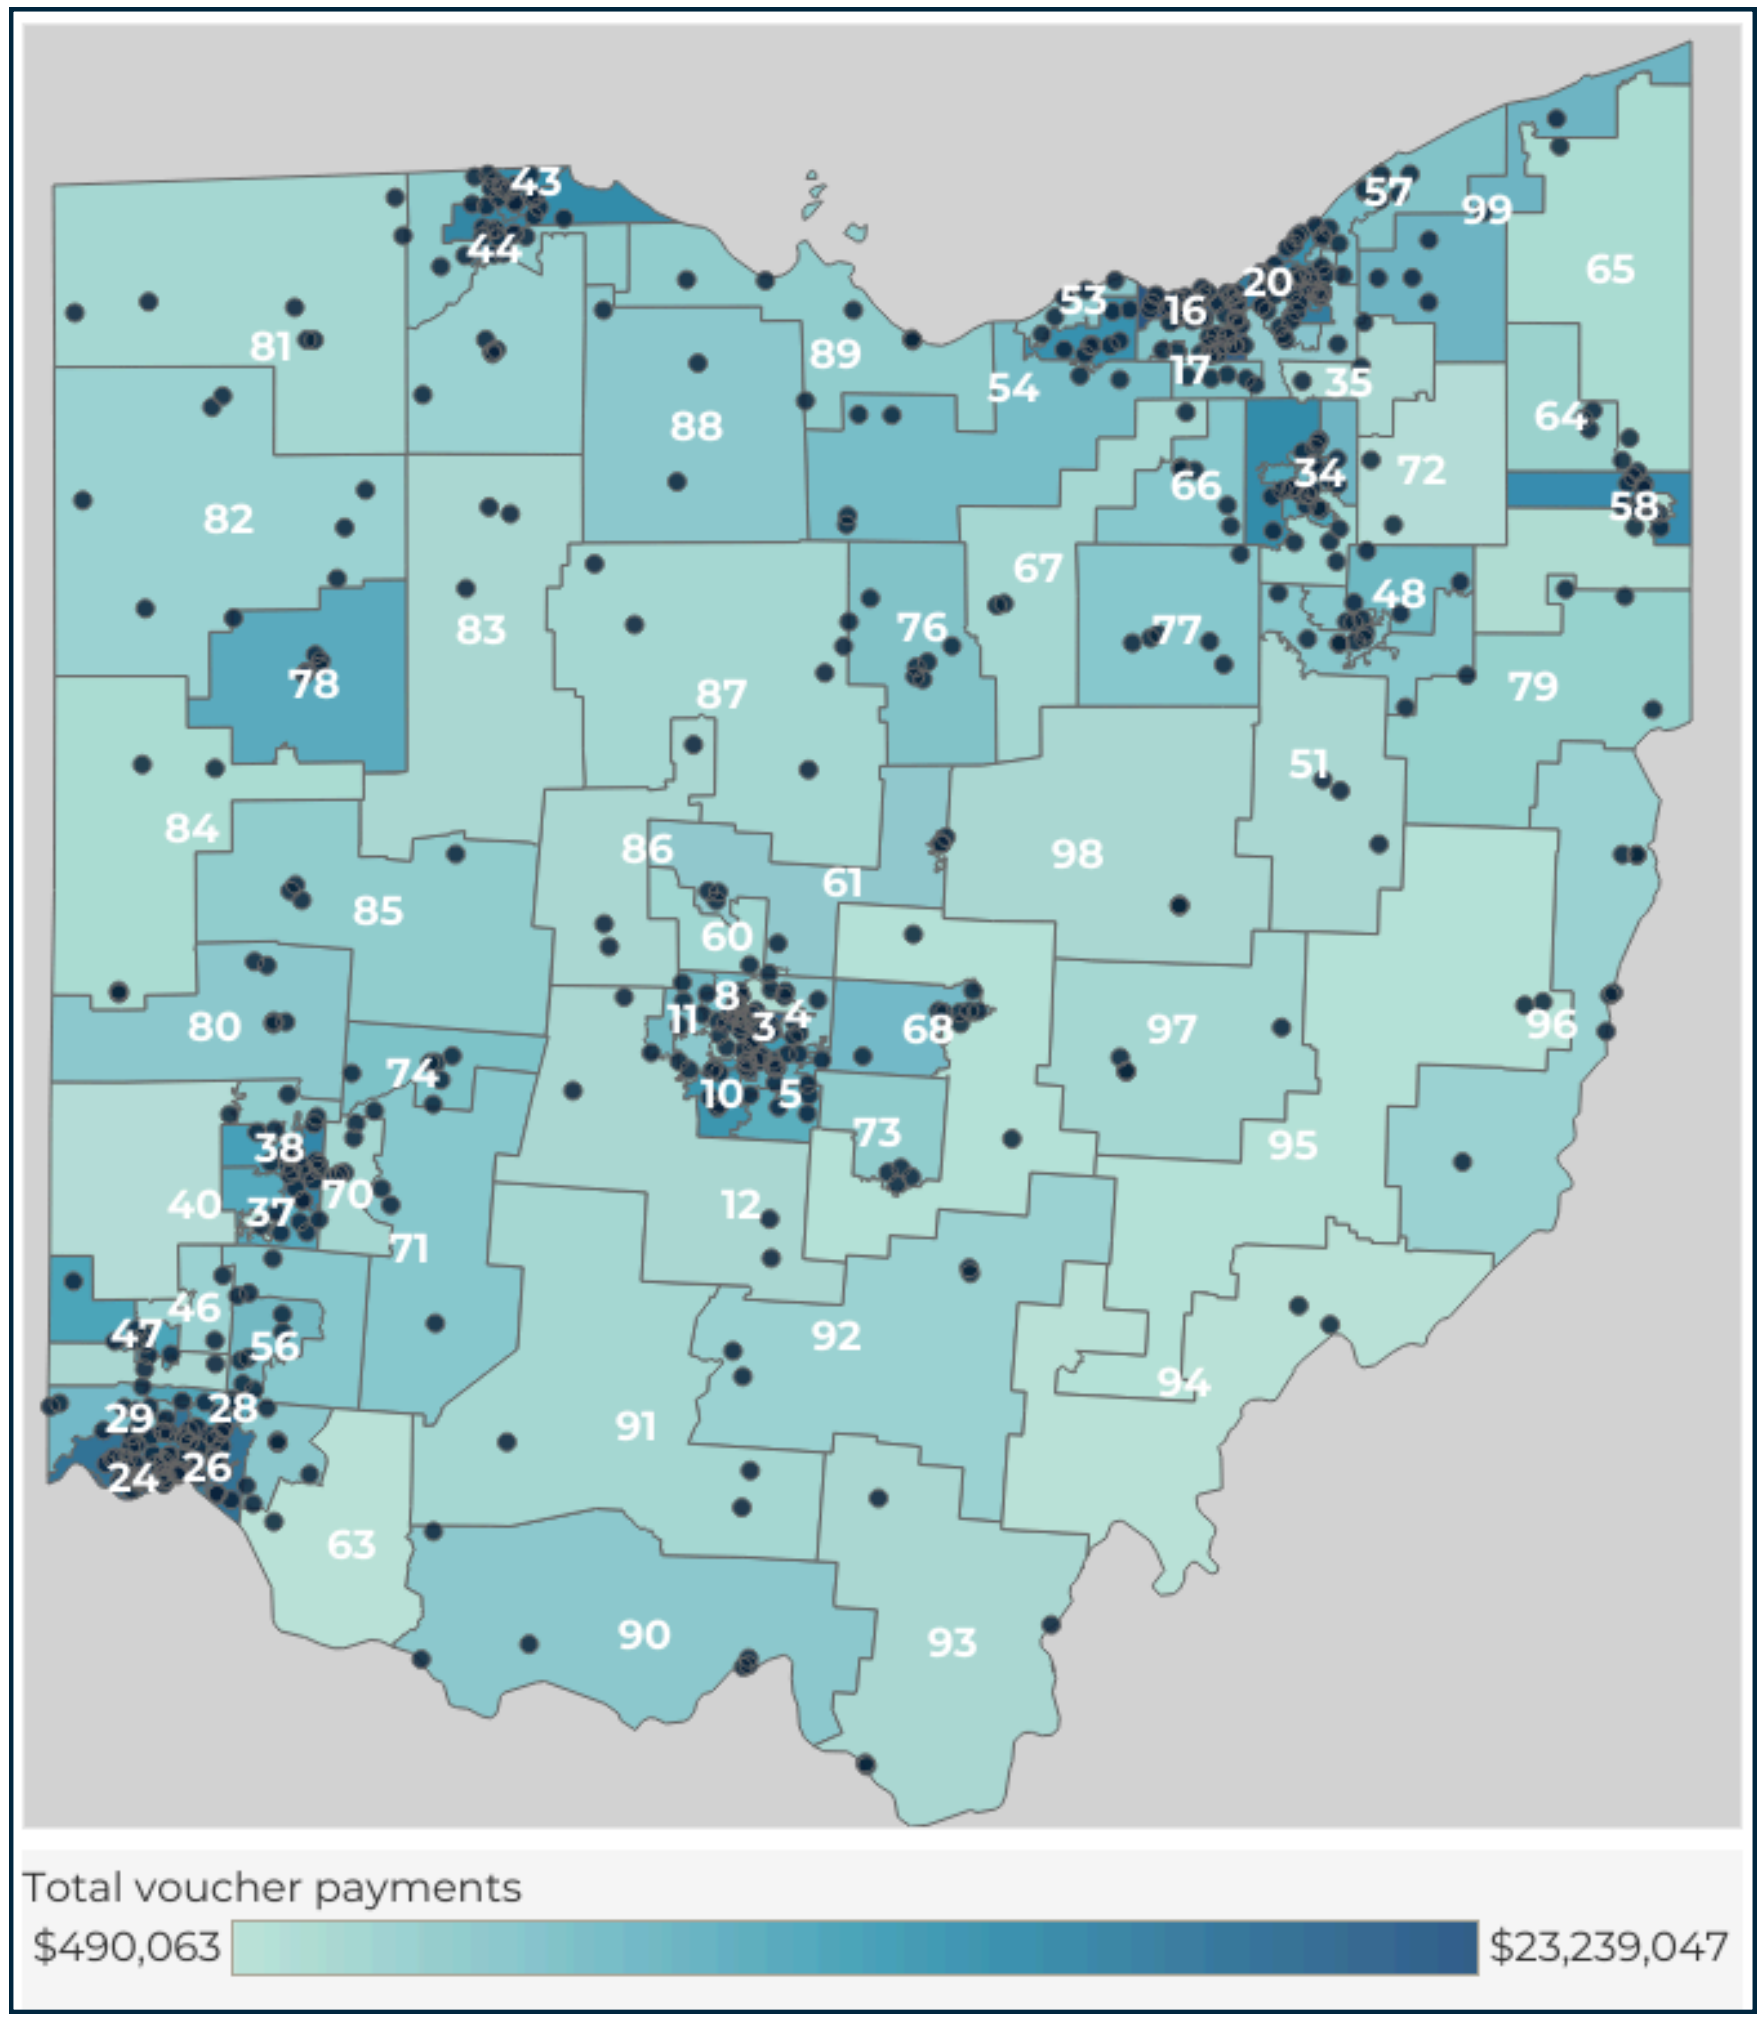
Email them at rep59@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-6107

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 6

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 6 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 842

voucher students.

In District 6 there are 17

public schools attended by 9,125

students.

Contact Representative Cockley and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

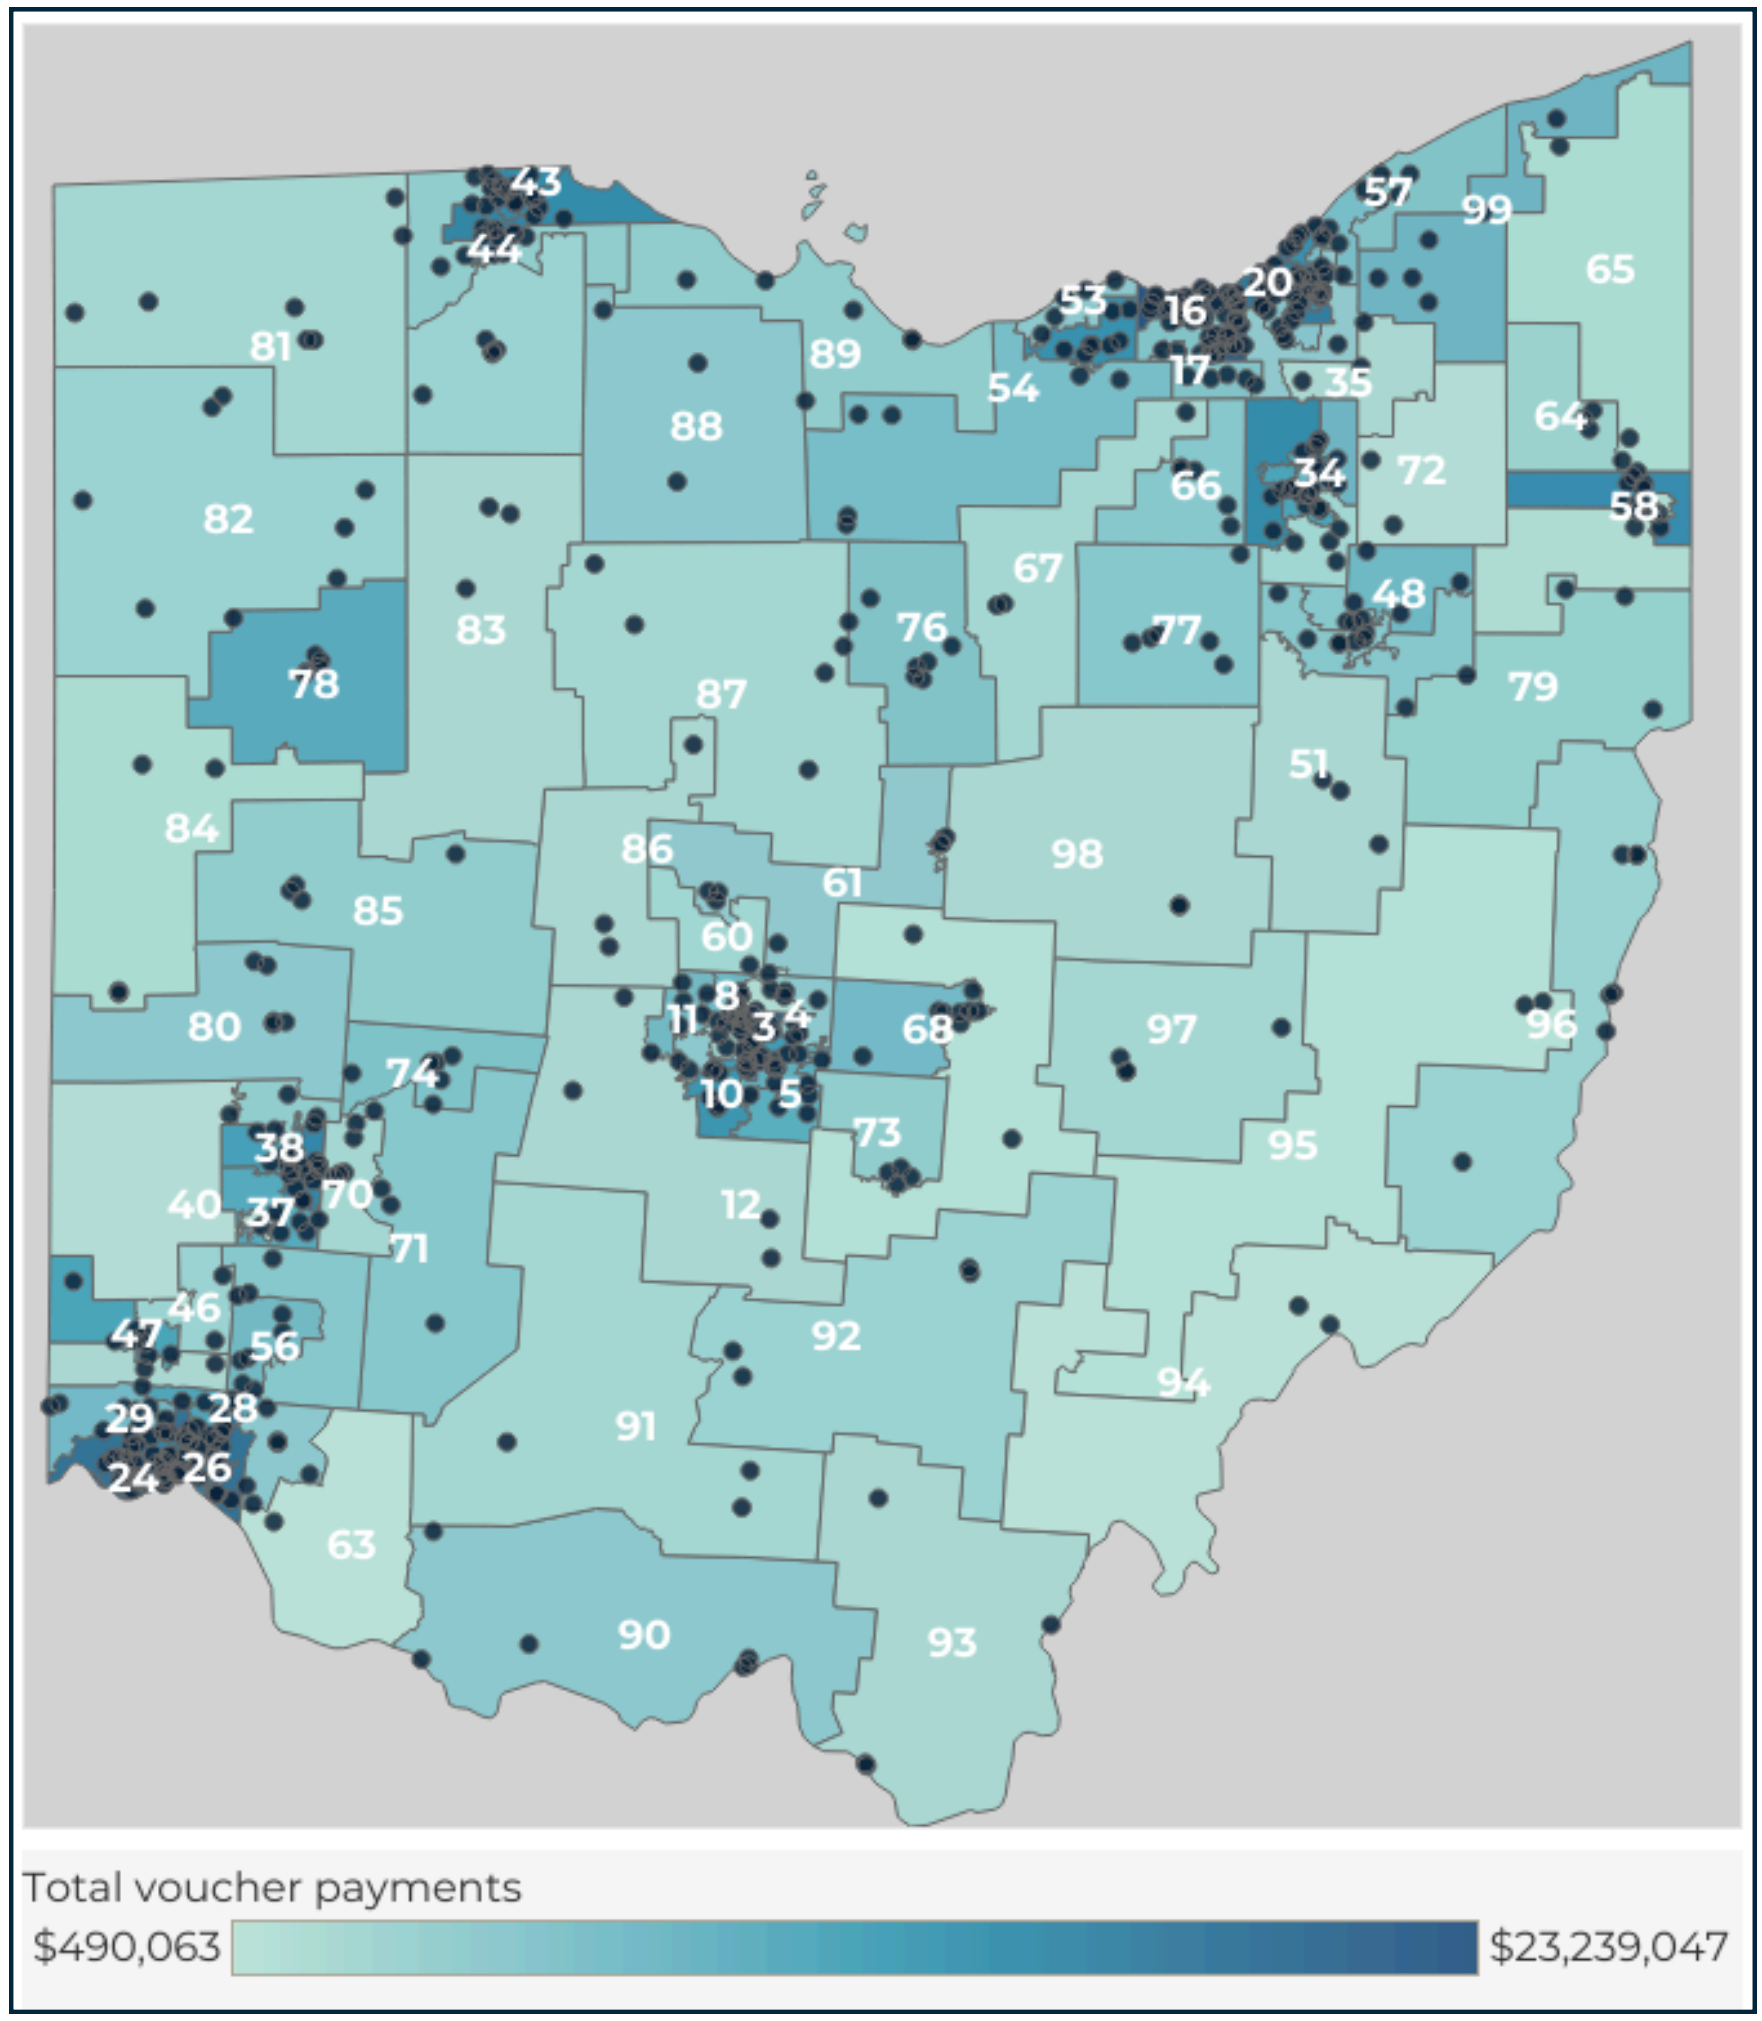
Email them at Rep06@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6005

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 60

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 60 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 798

voucher students.

In District 60 there are 30

public schools attended by 25,909

students.

Contact Representative Lorenz and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

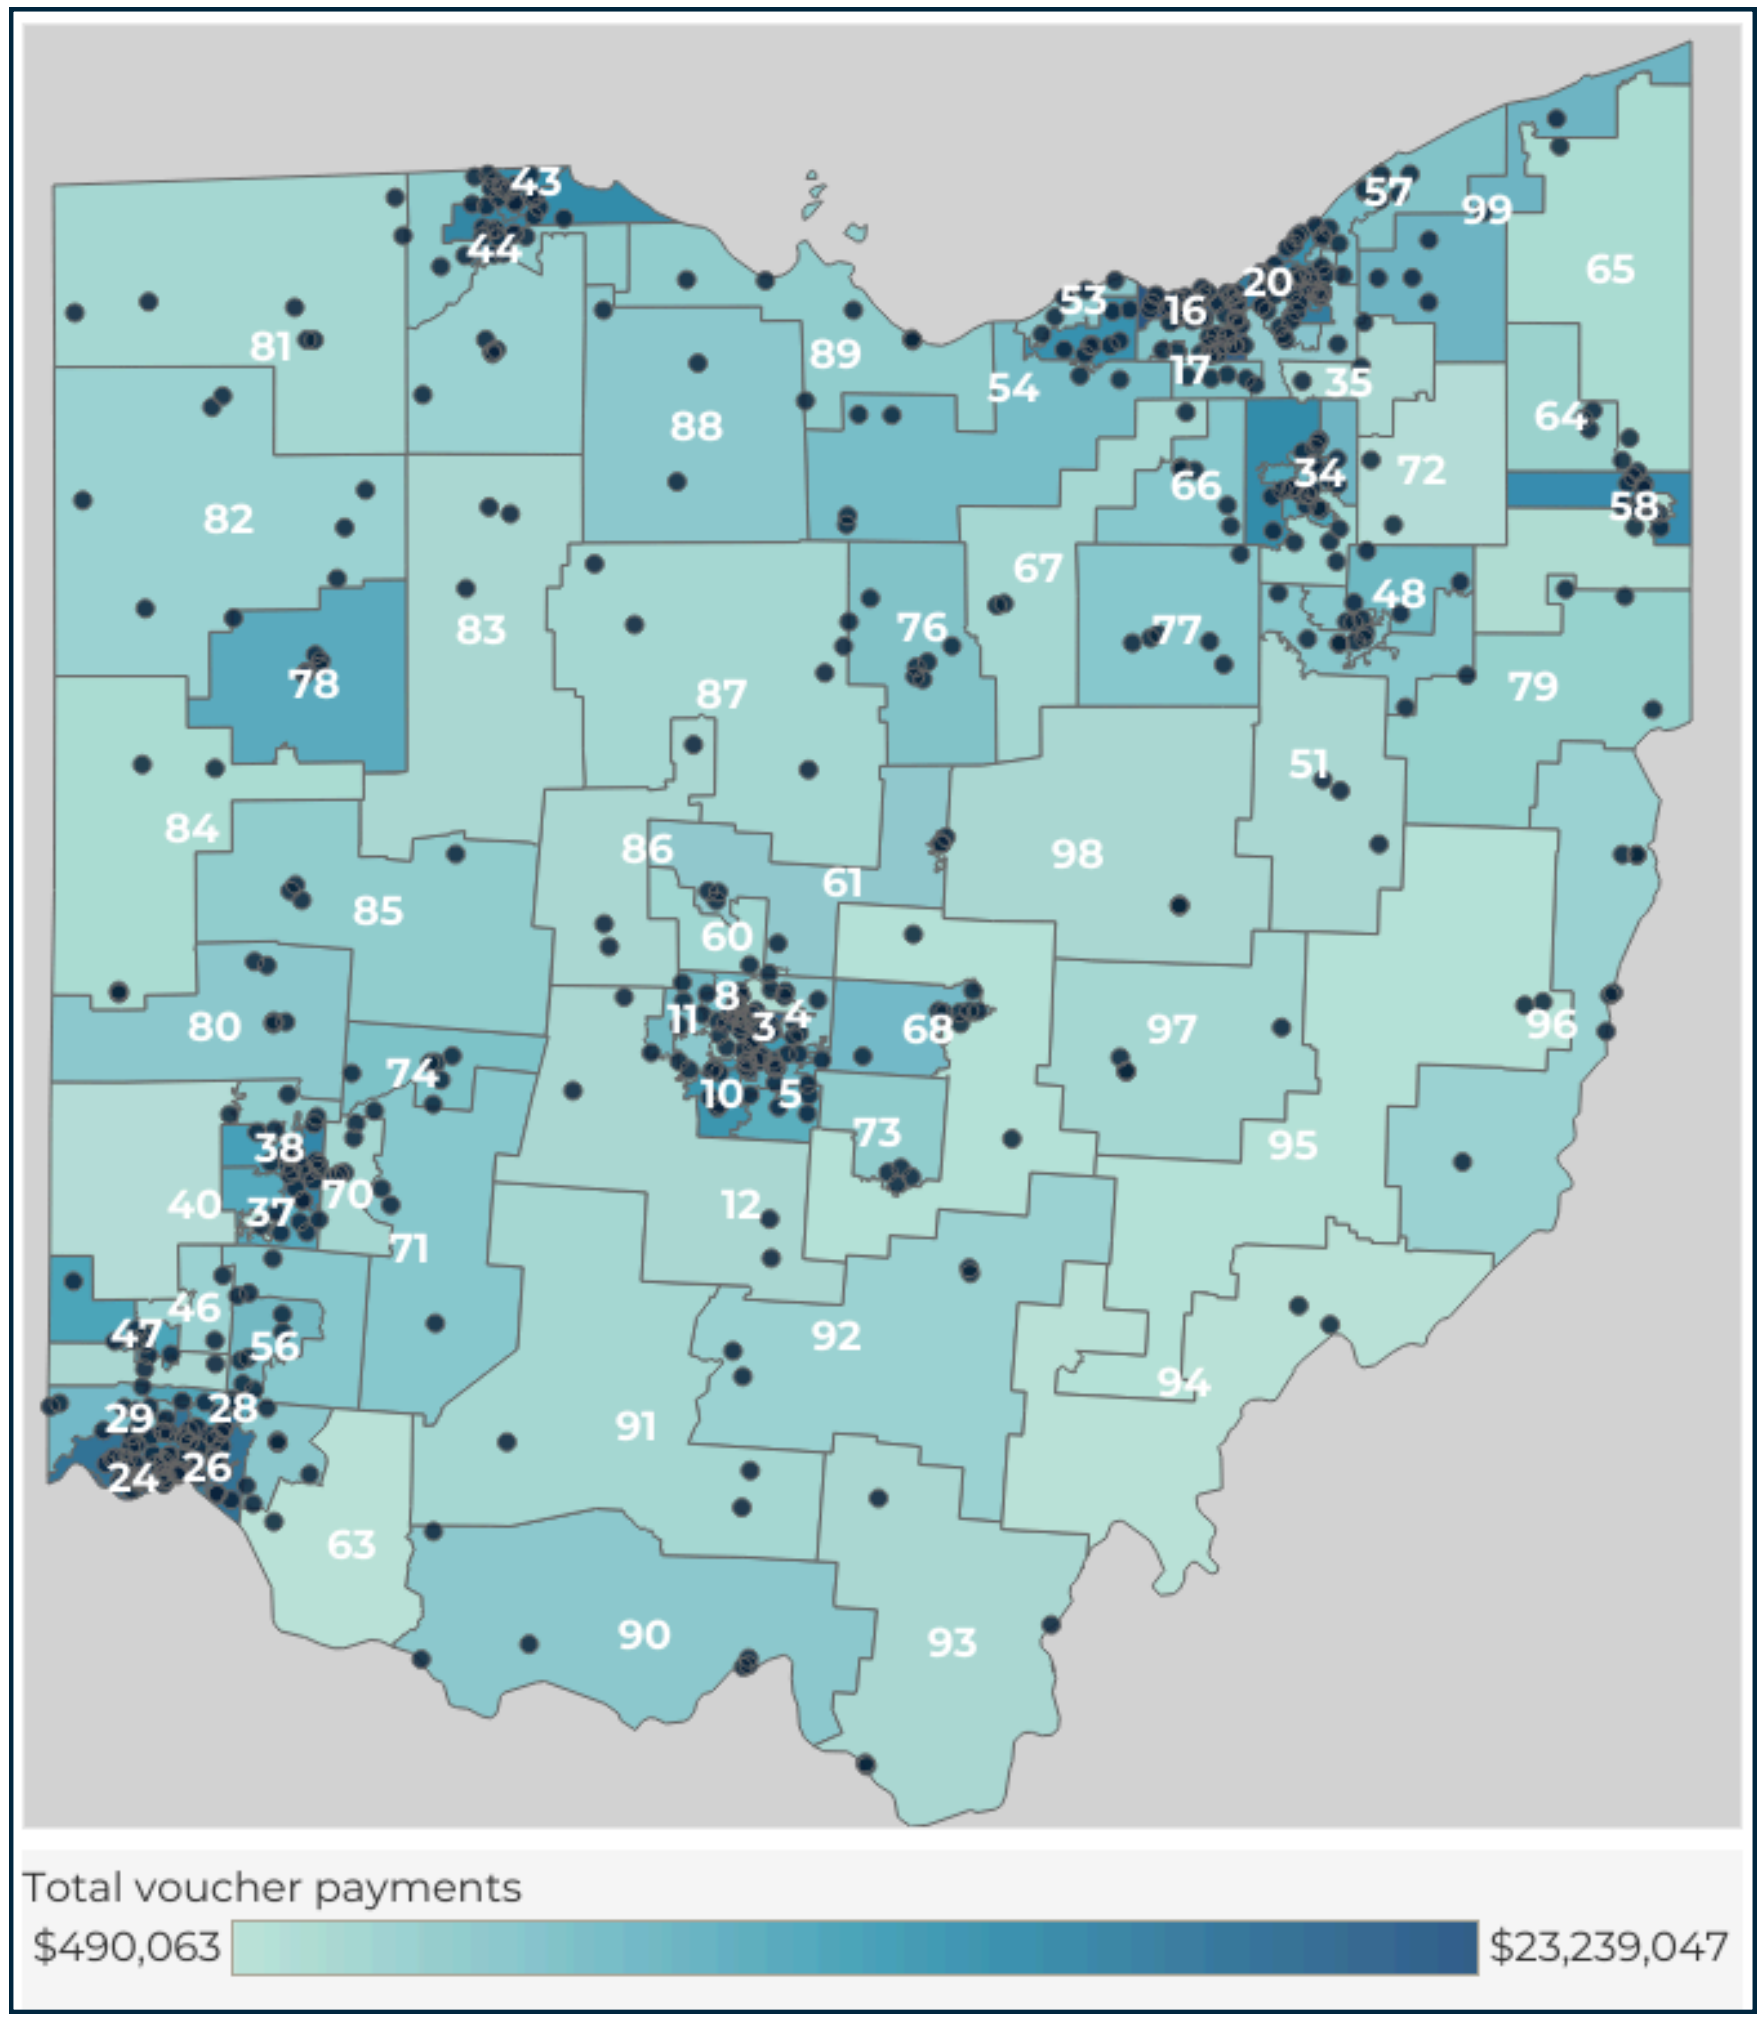
Email them at rep60@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6711

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 61

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 61 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 932

voucher students.

In District 61 there are 31 public schools attended by 18,913

students.

Contact Representative Lear and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

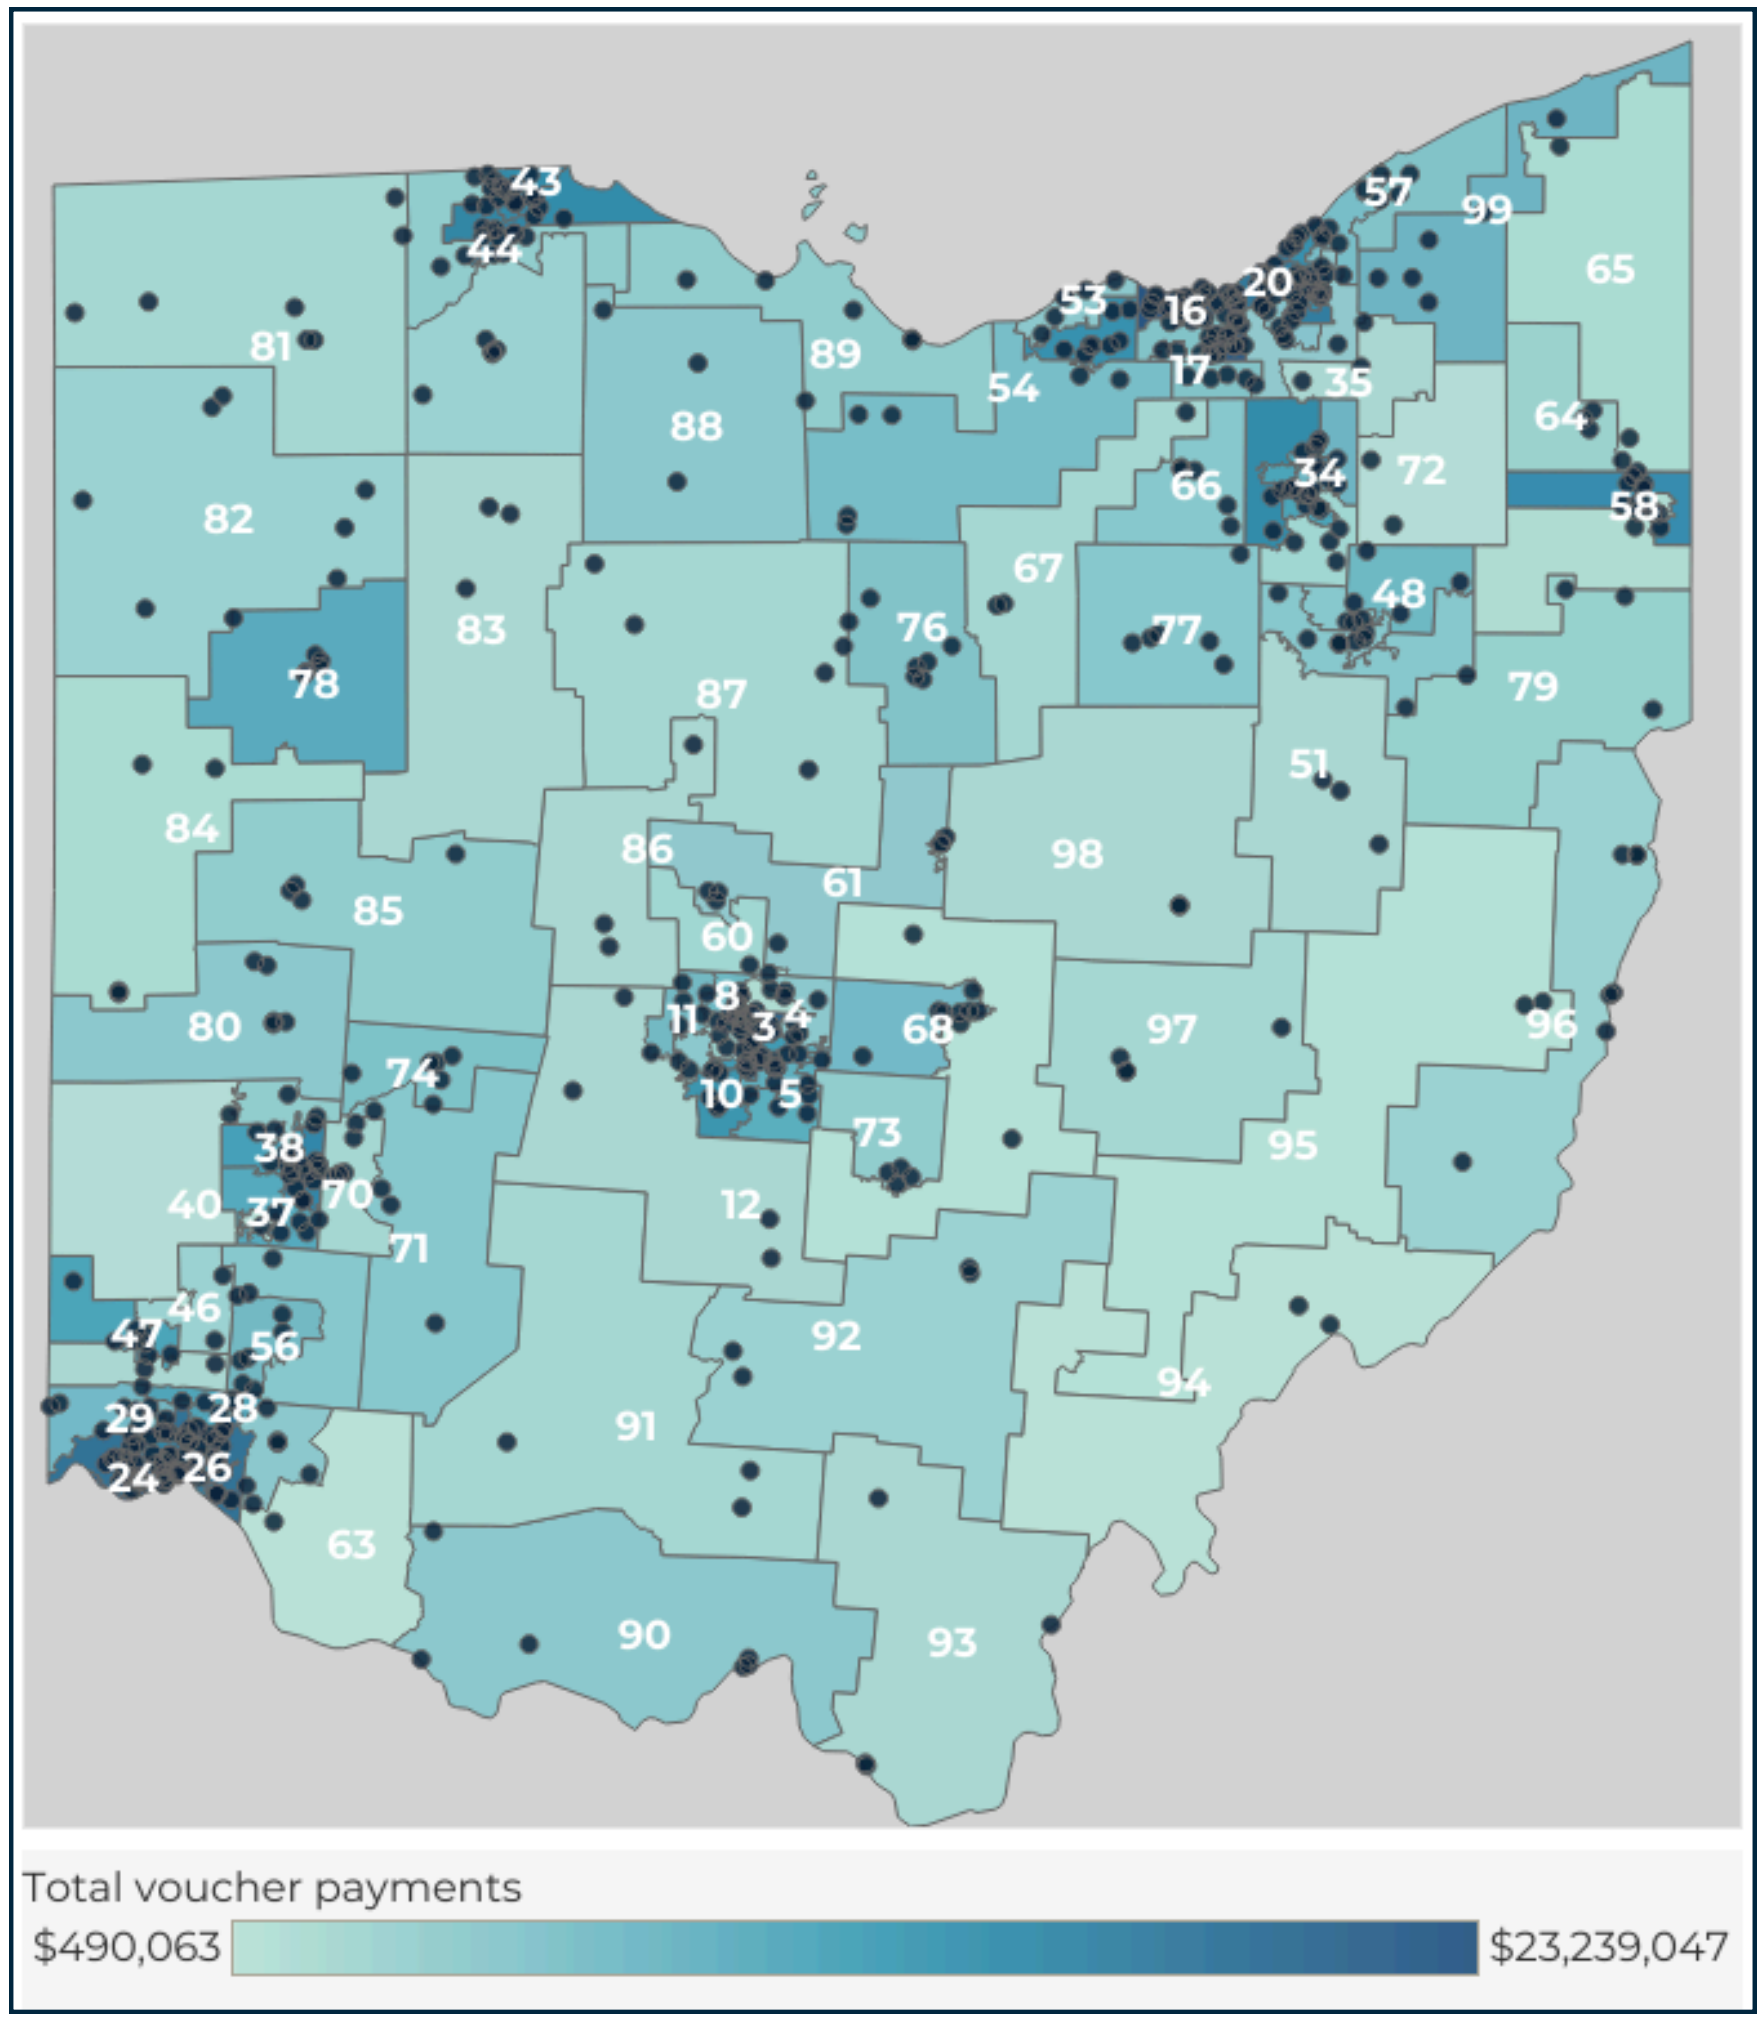
Email them at rep61@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1431

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 62

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 62 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,258

voucher students.

In District 62 there are 22

public schools attended by 14,452

students.

Contact Representative Schmidt and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

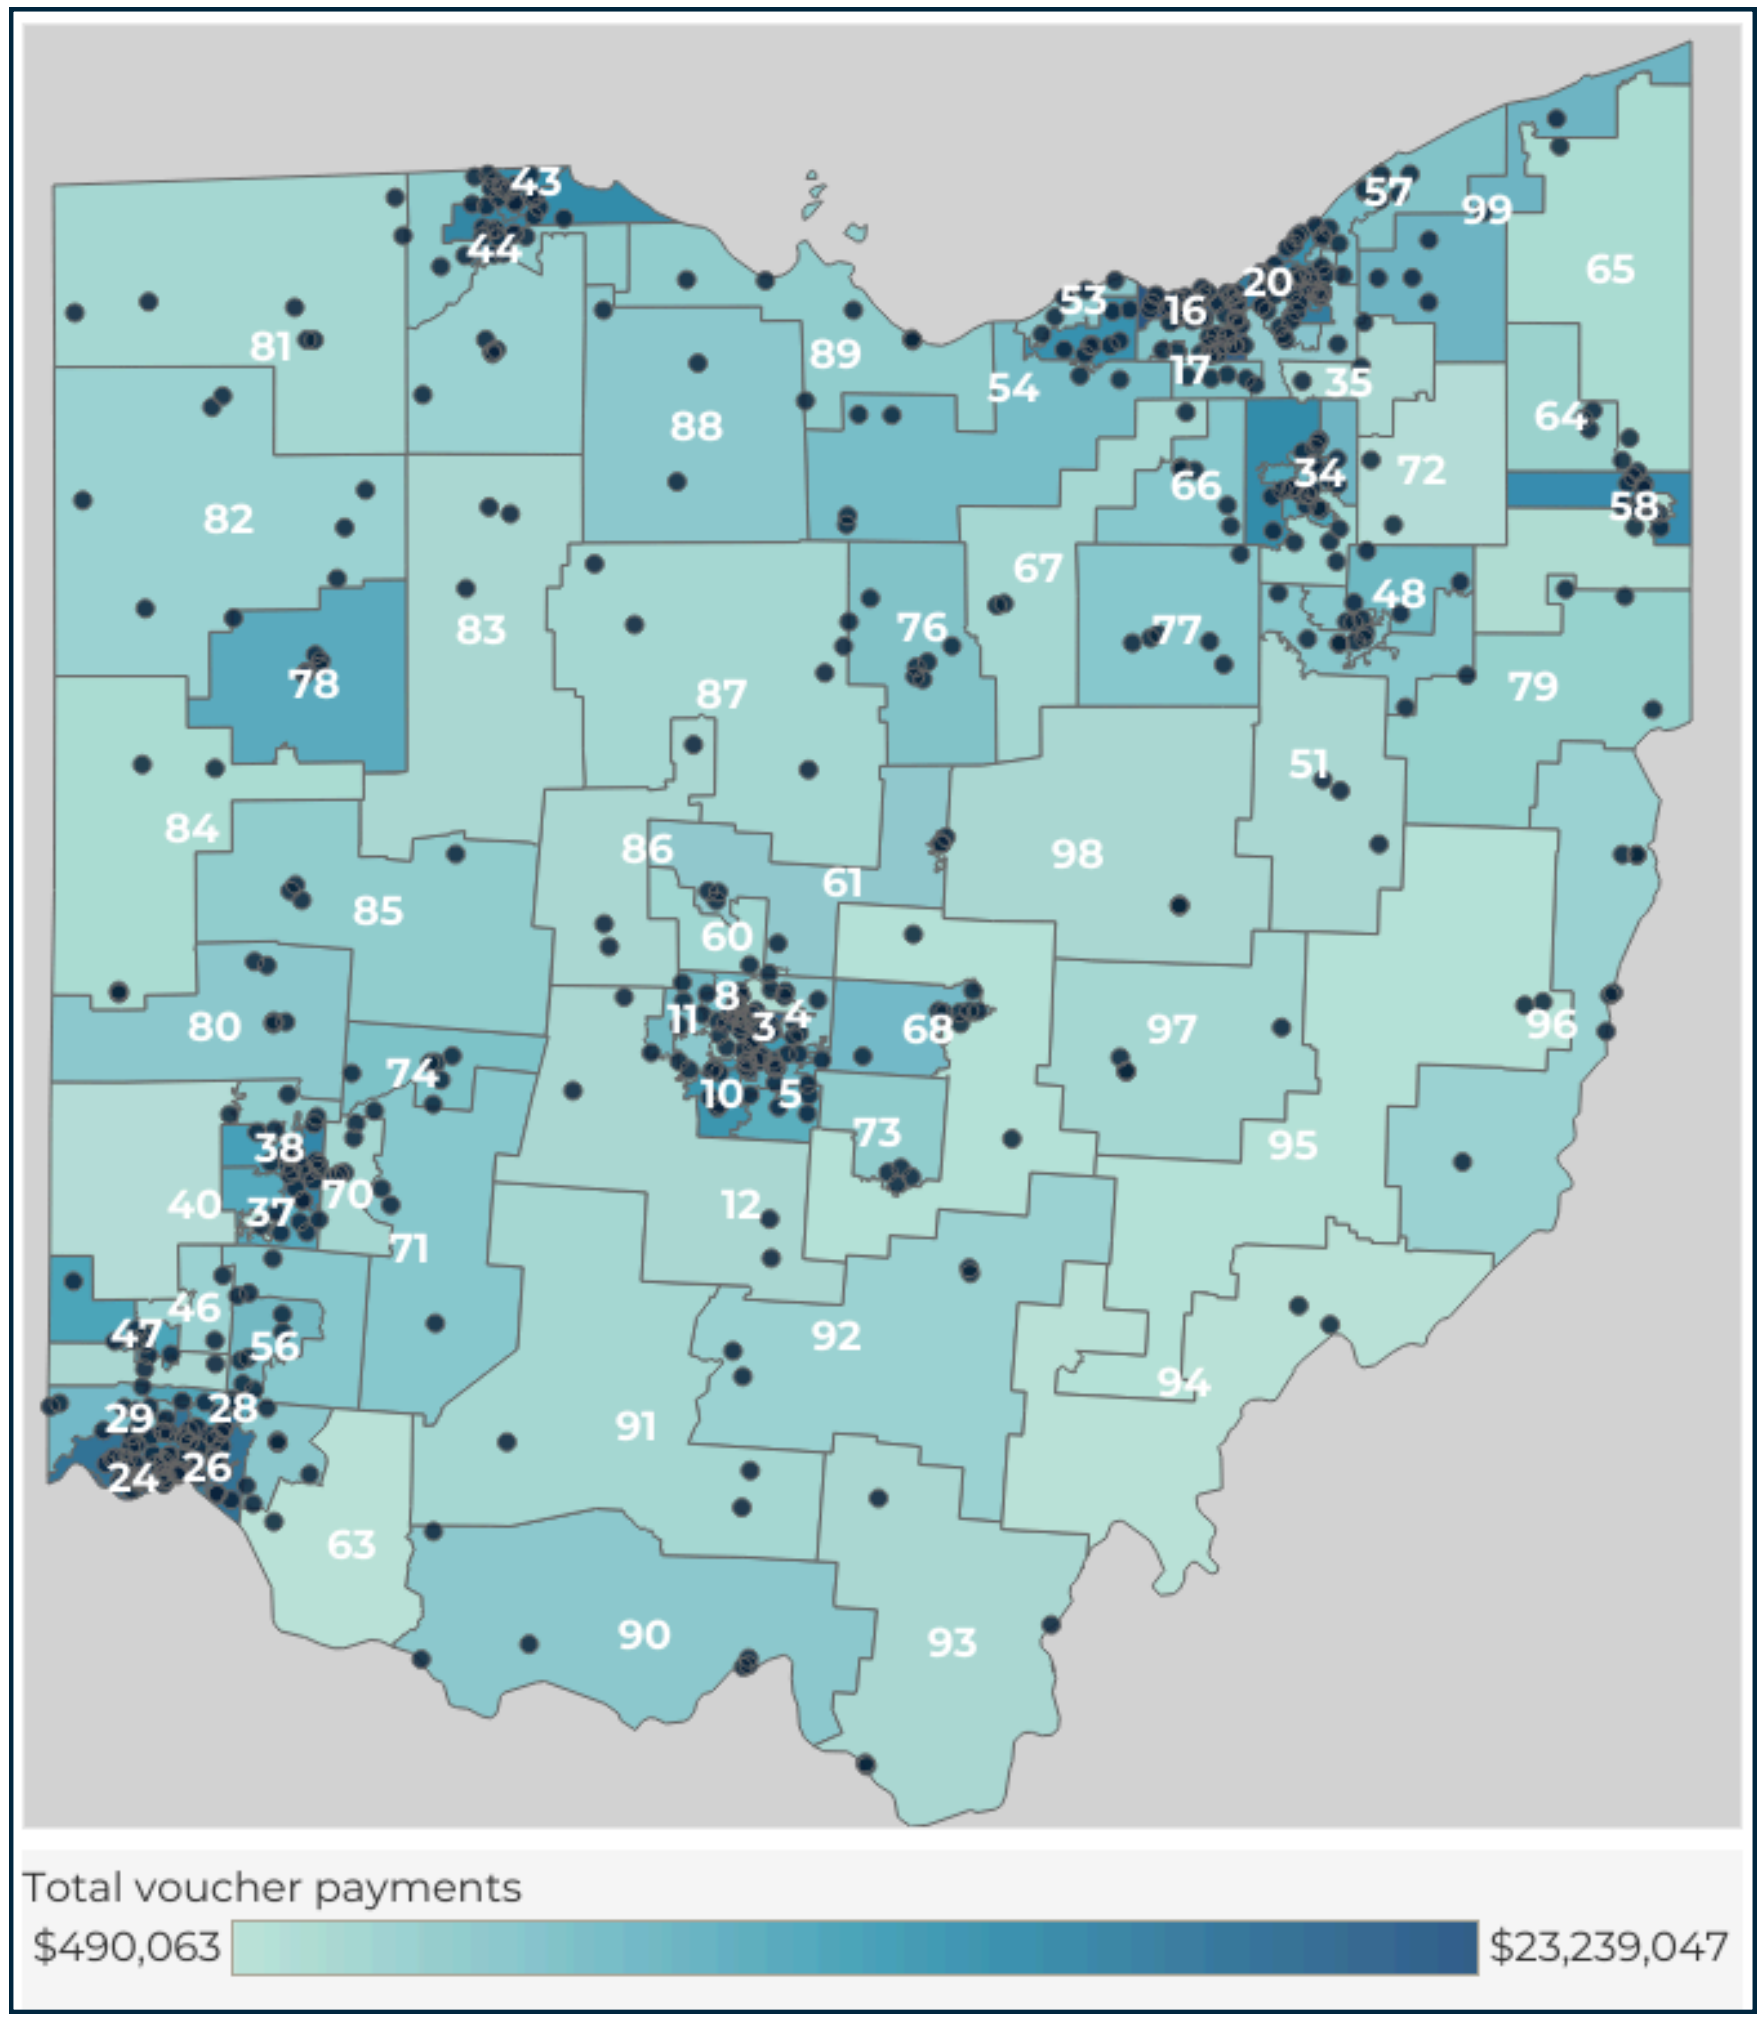
Email them at rep62@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8134

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 63

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 63 there are

1

private voucher schools attended by 191

voucher students.

In District 63 there are 29

public schools attended by 14,875

students.

Contact Representative Bird and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

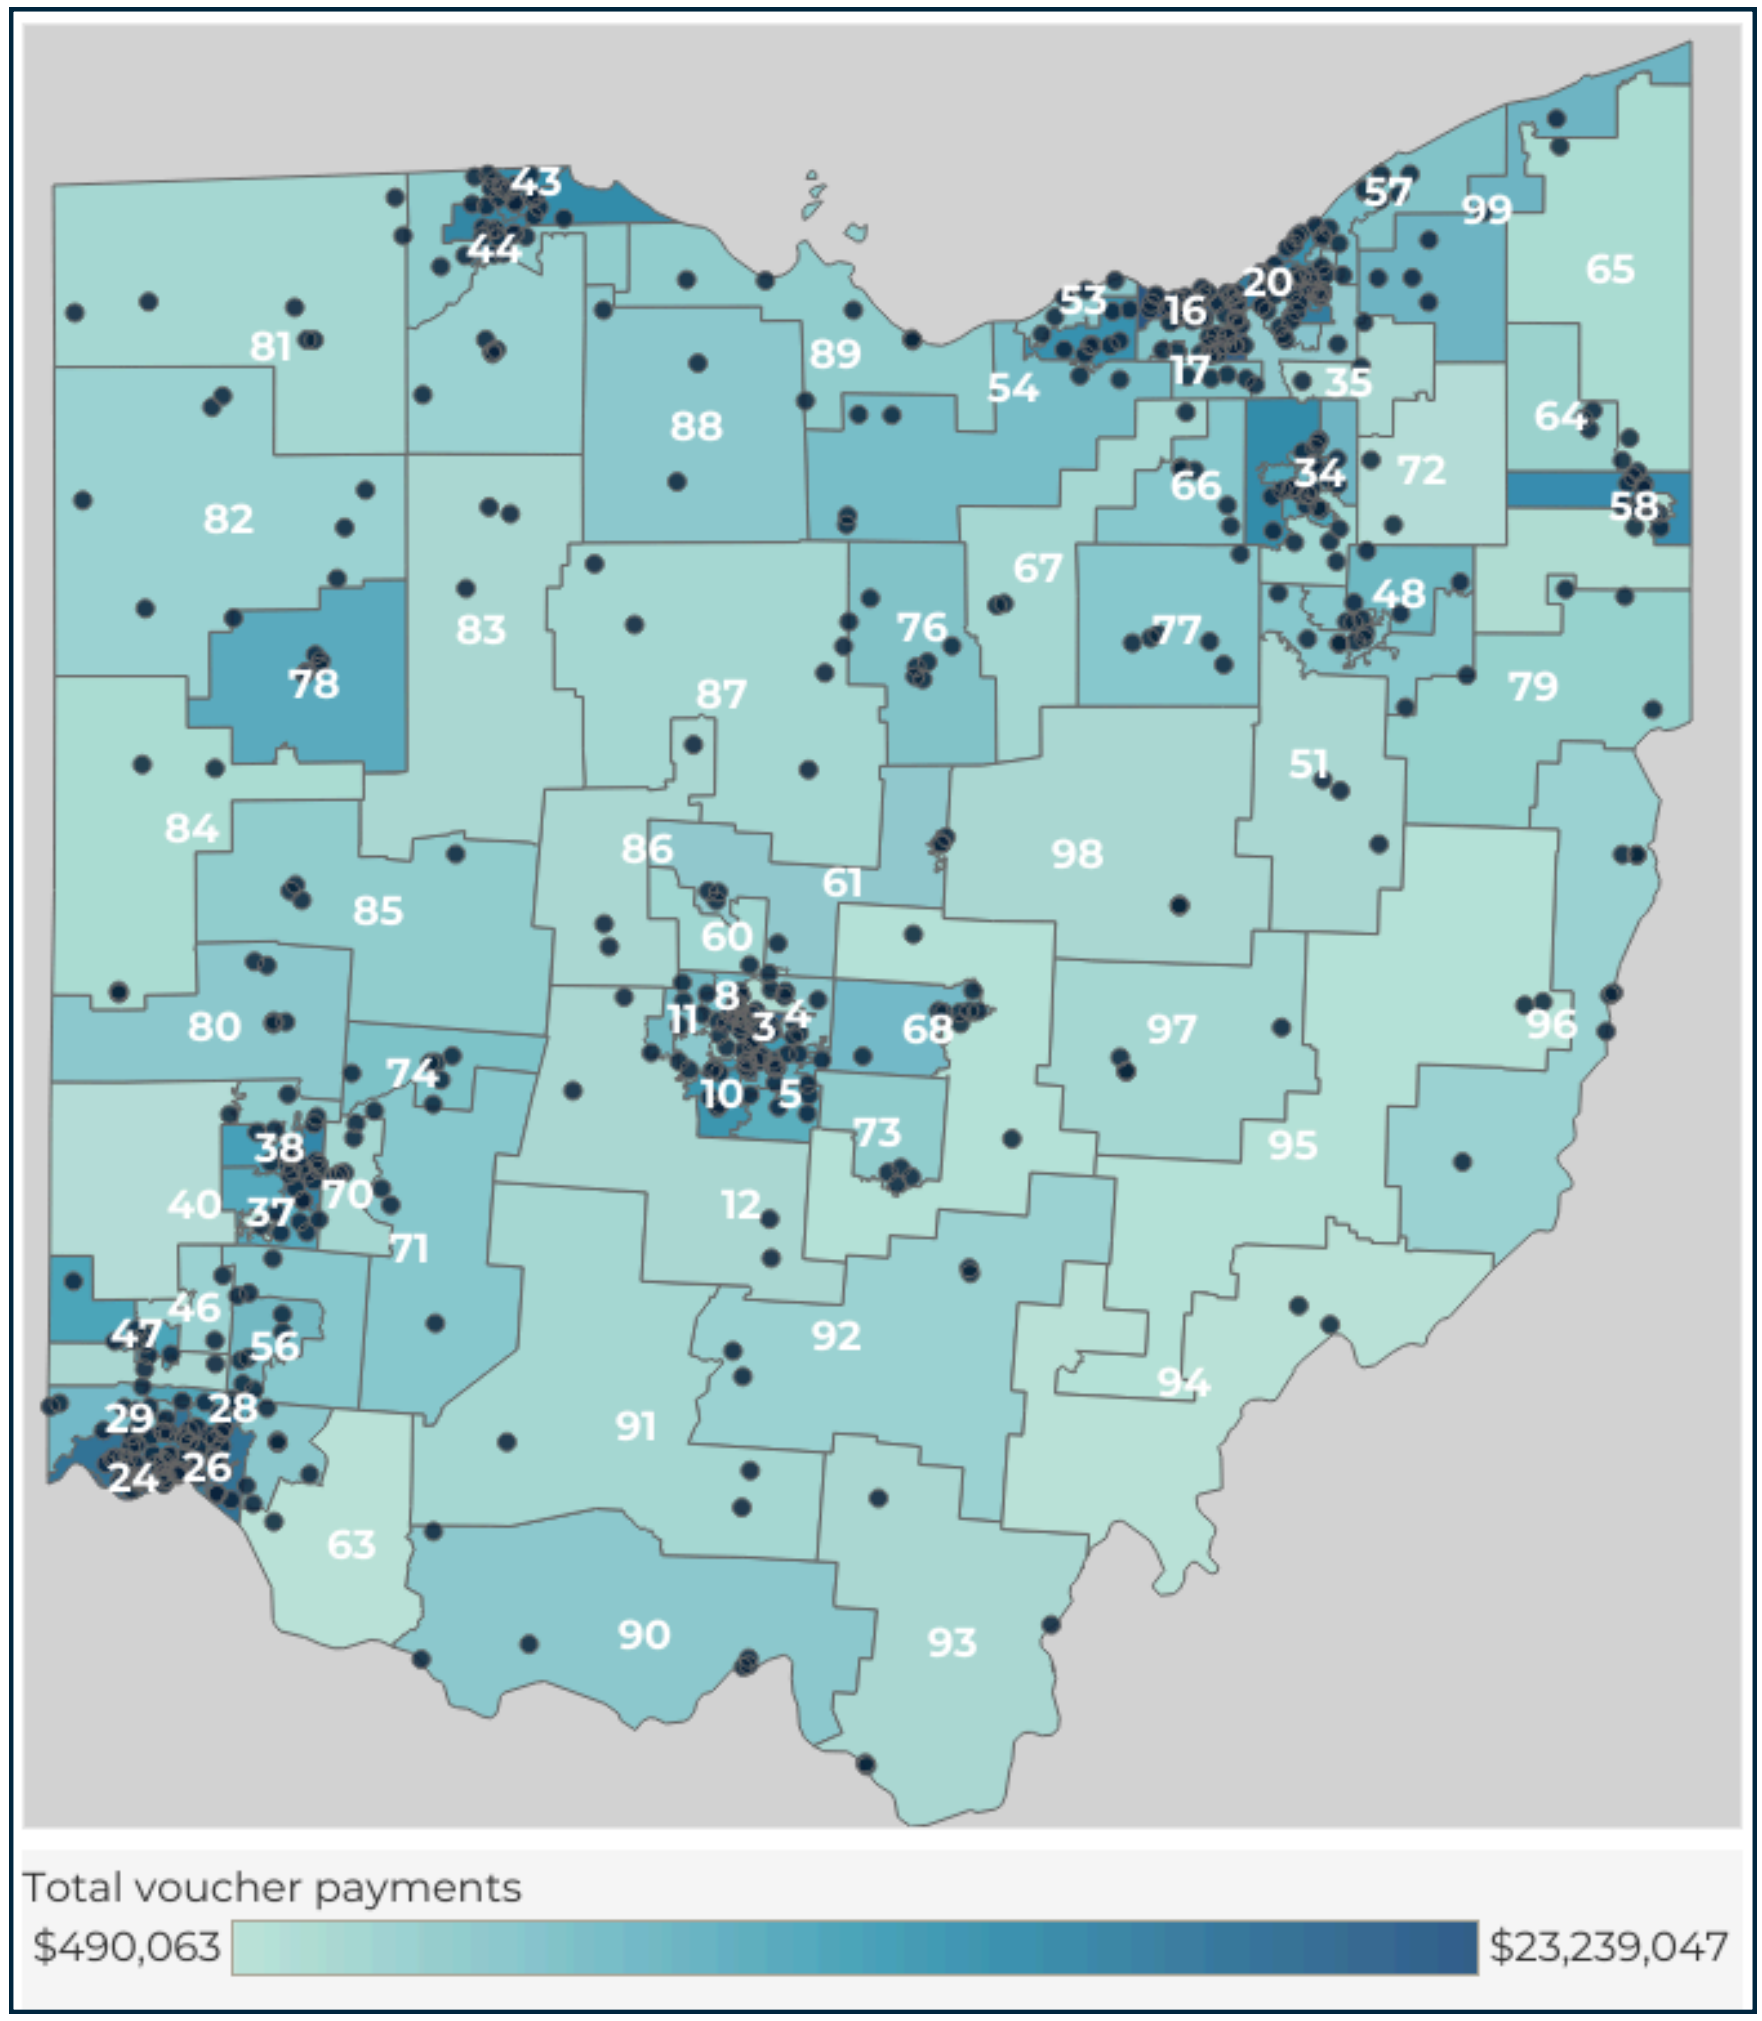
Email them at rep63@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6034

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 64

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 64 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 630

voucher students.

In District 64 there are 36

public schools attended by 14,475

students.

Contact Representative Santucci and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

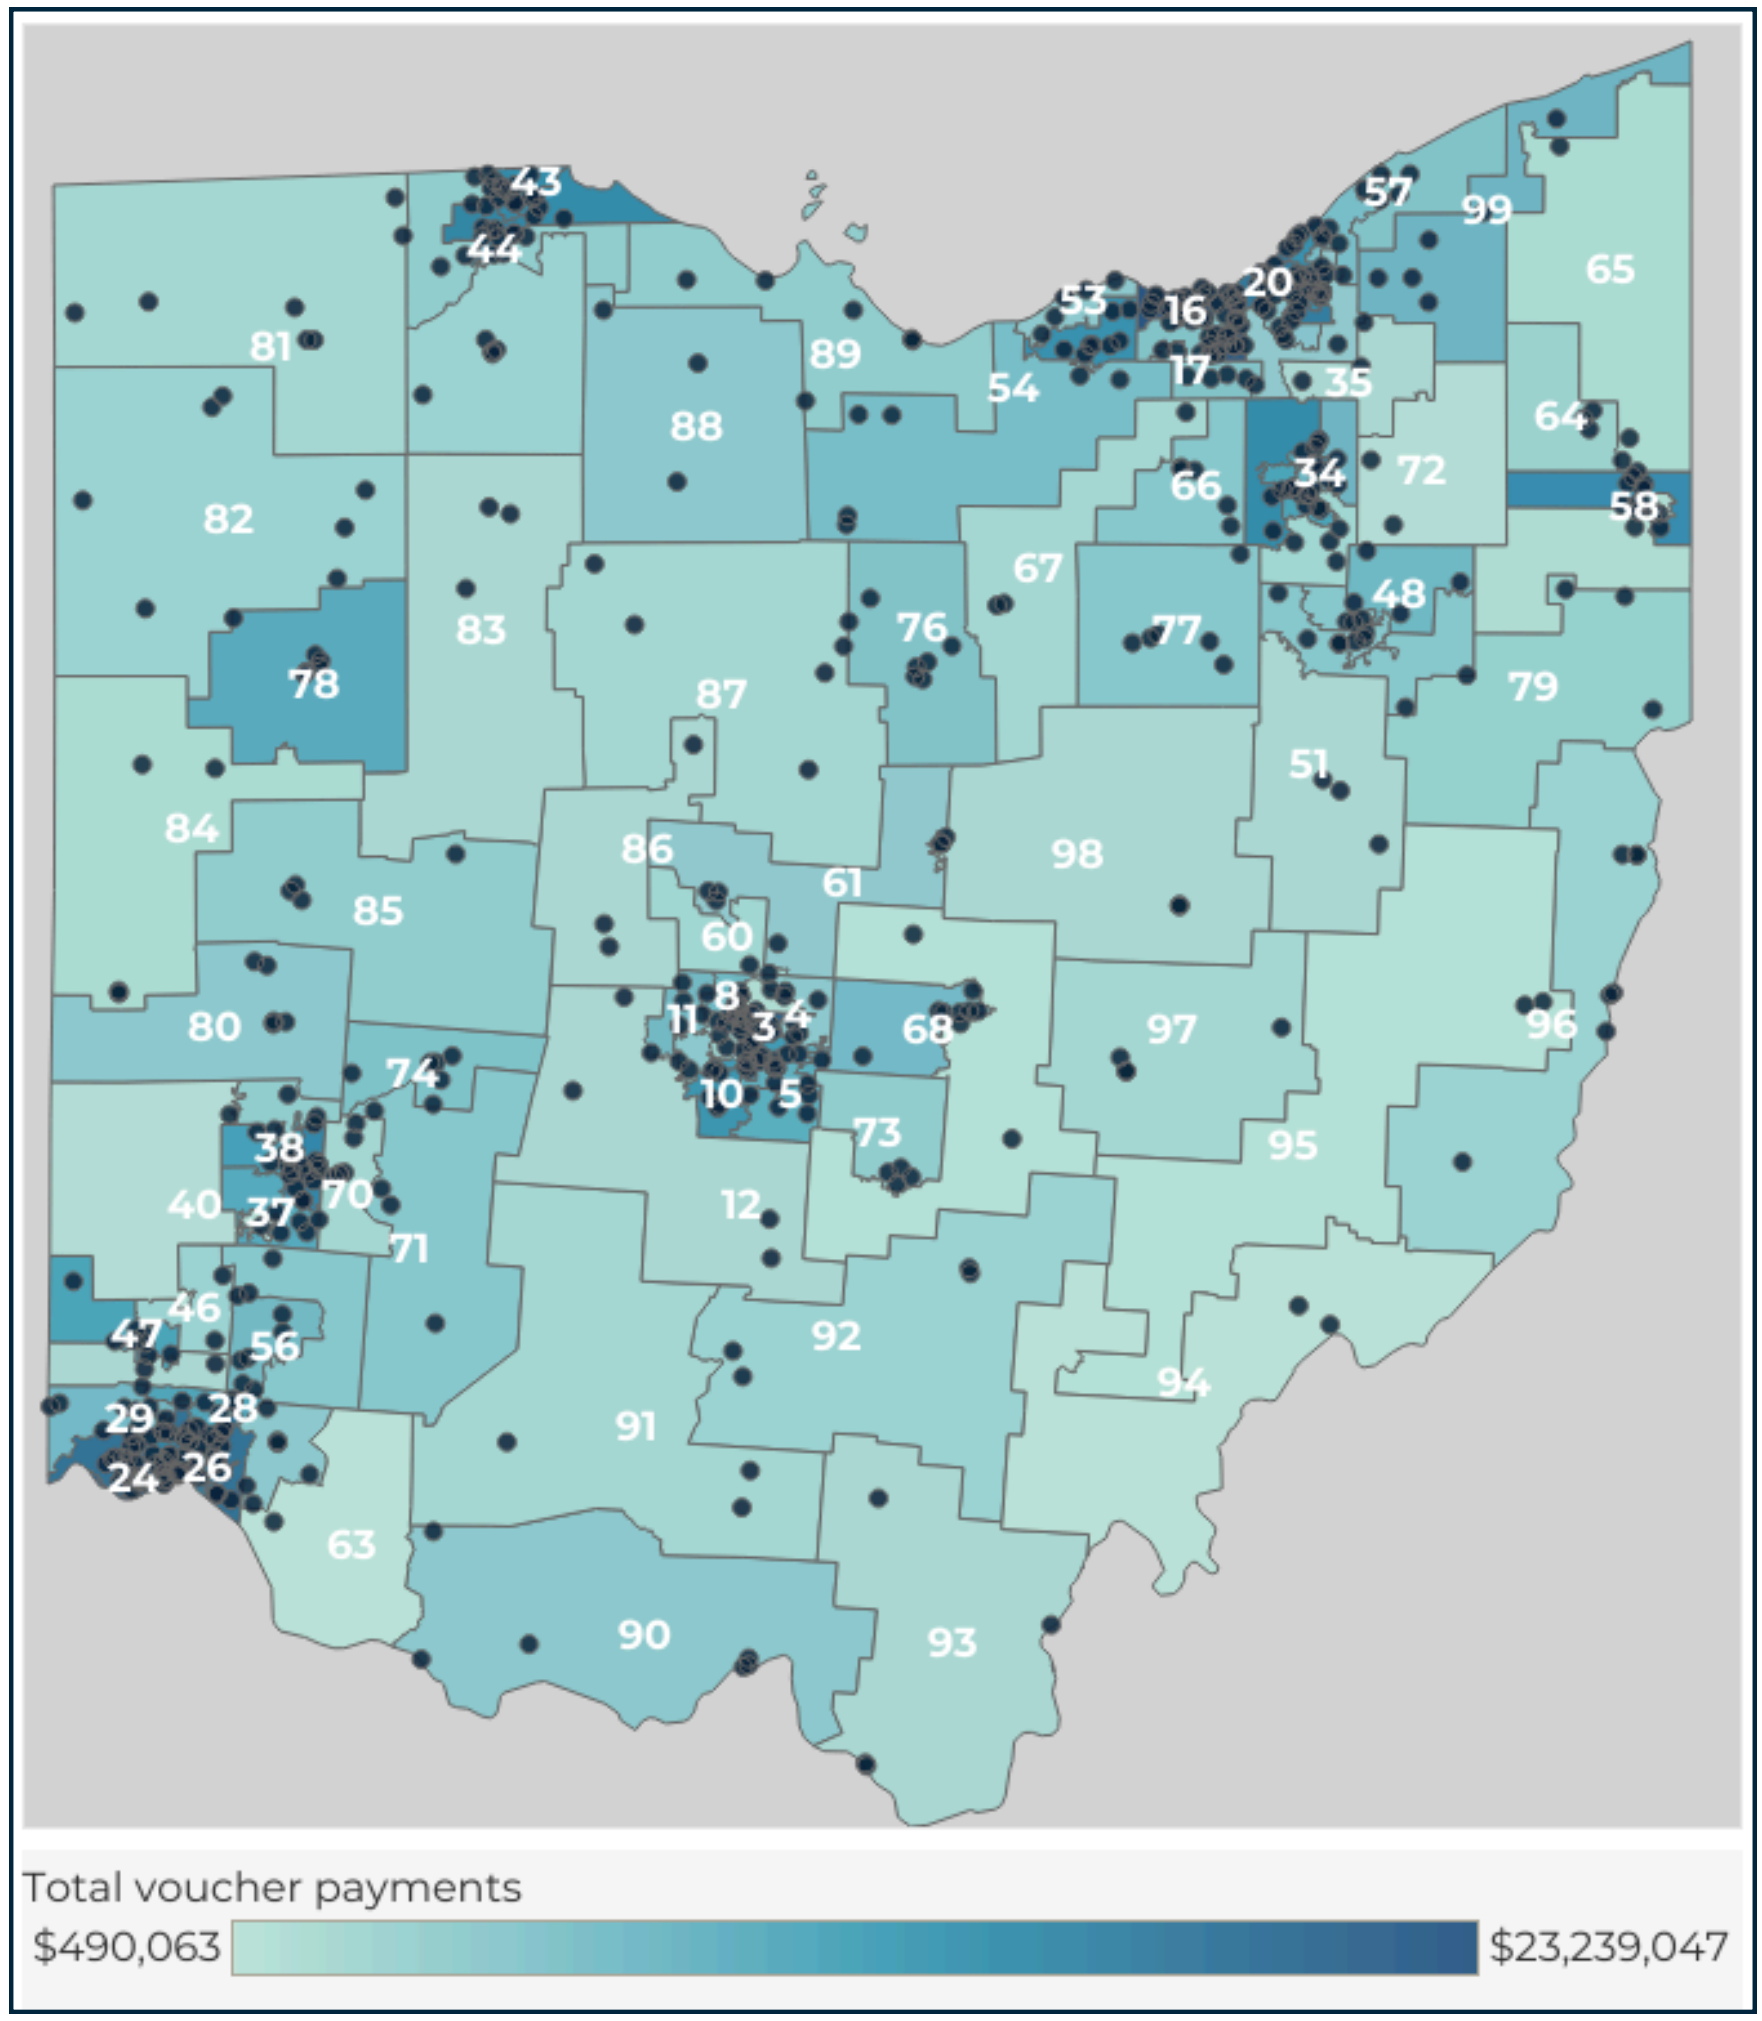
Email them at rep64@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5441

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 65

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 65 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 382

voucher students.

In District 65 there are 44

public schools attended by 14,422

students.

Contact Representative Thomas and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

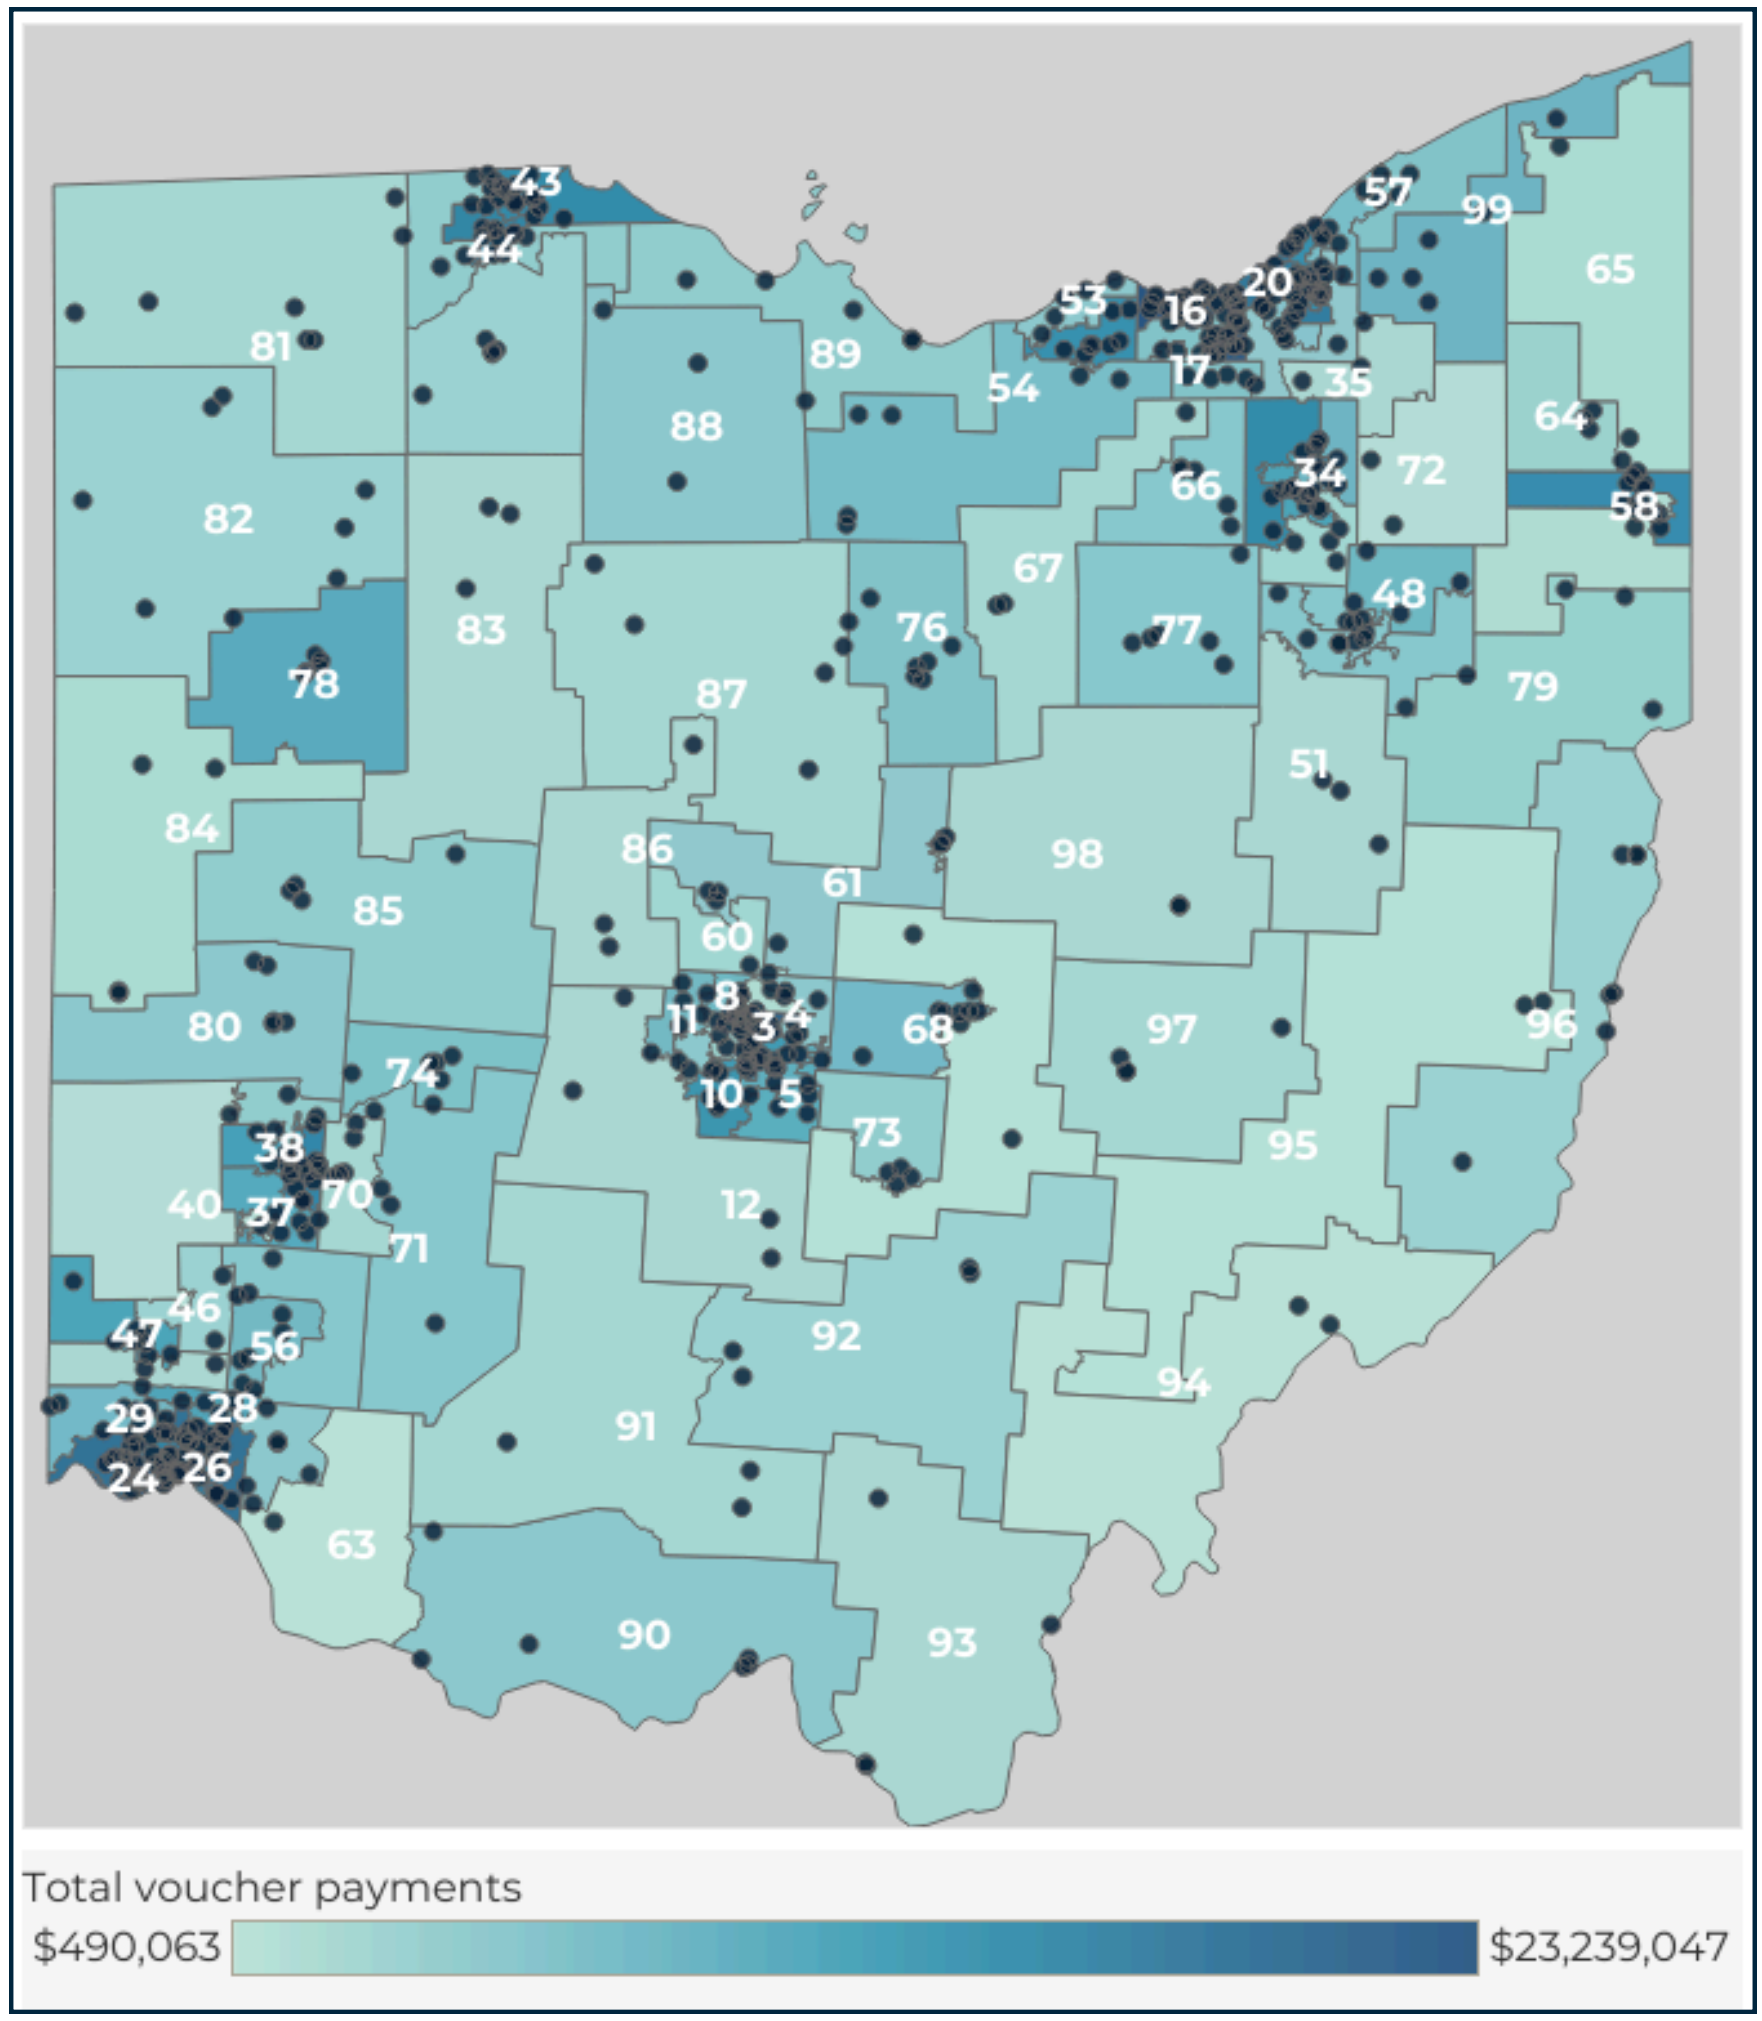
Email them at Rep65@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3488

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 66

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 66 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 1,102

voucher students.

In District 66 there are 30

public schools attended by 15,749

students.

Contact Representative Ray and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

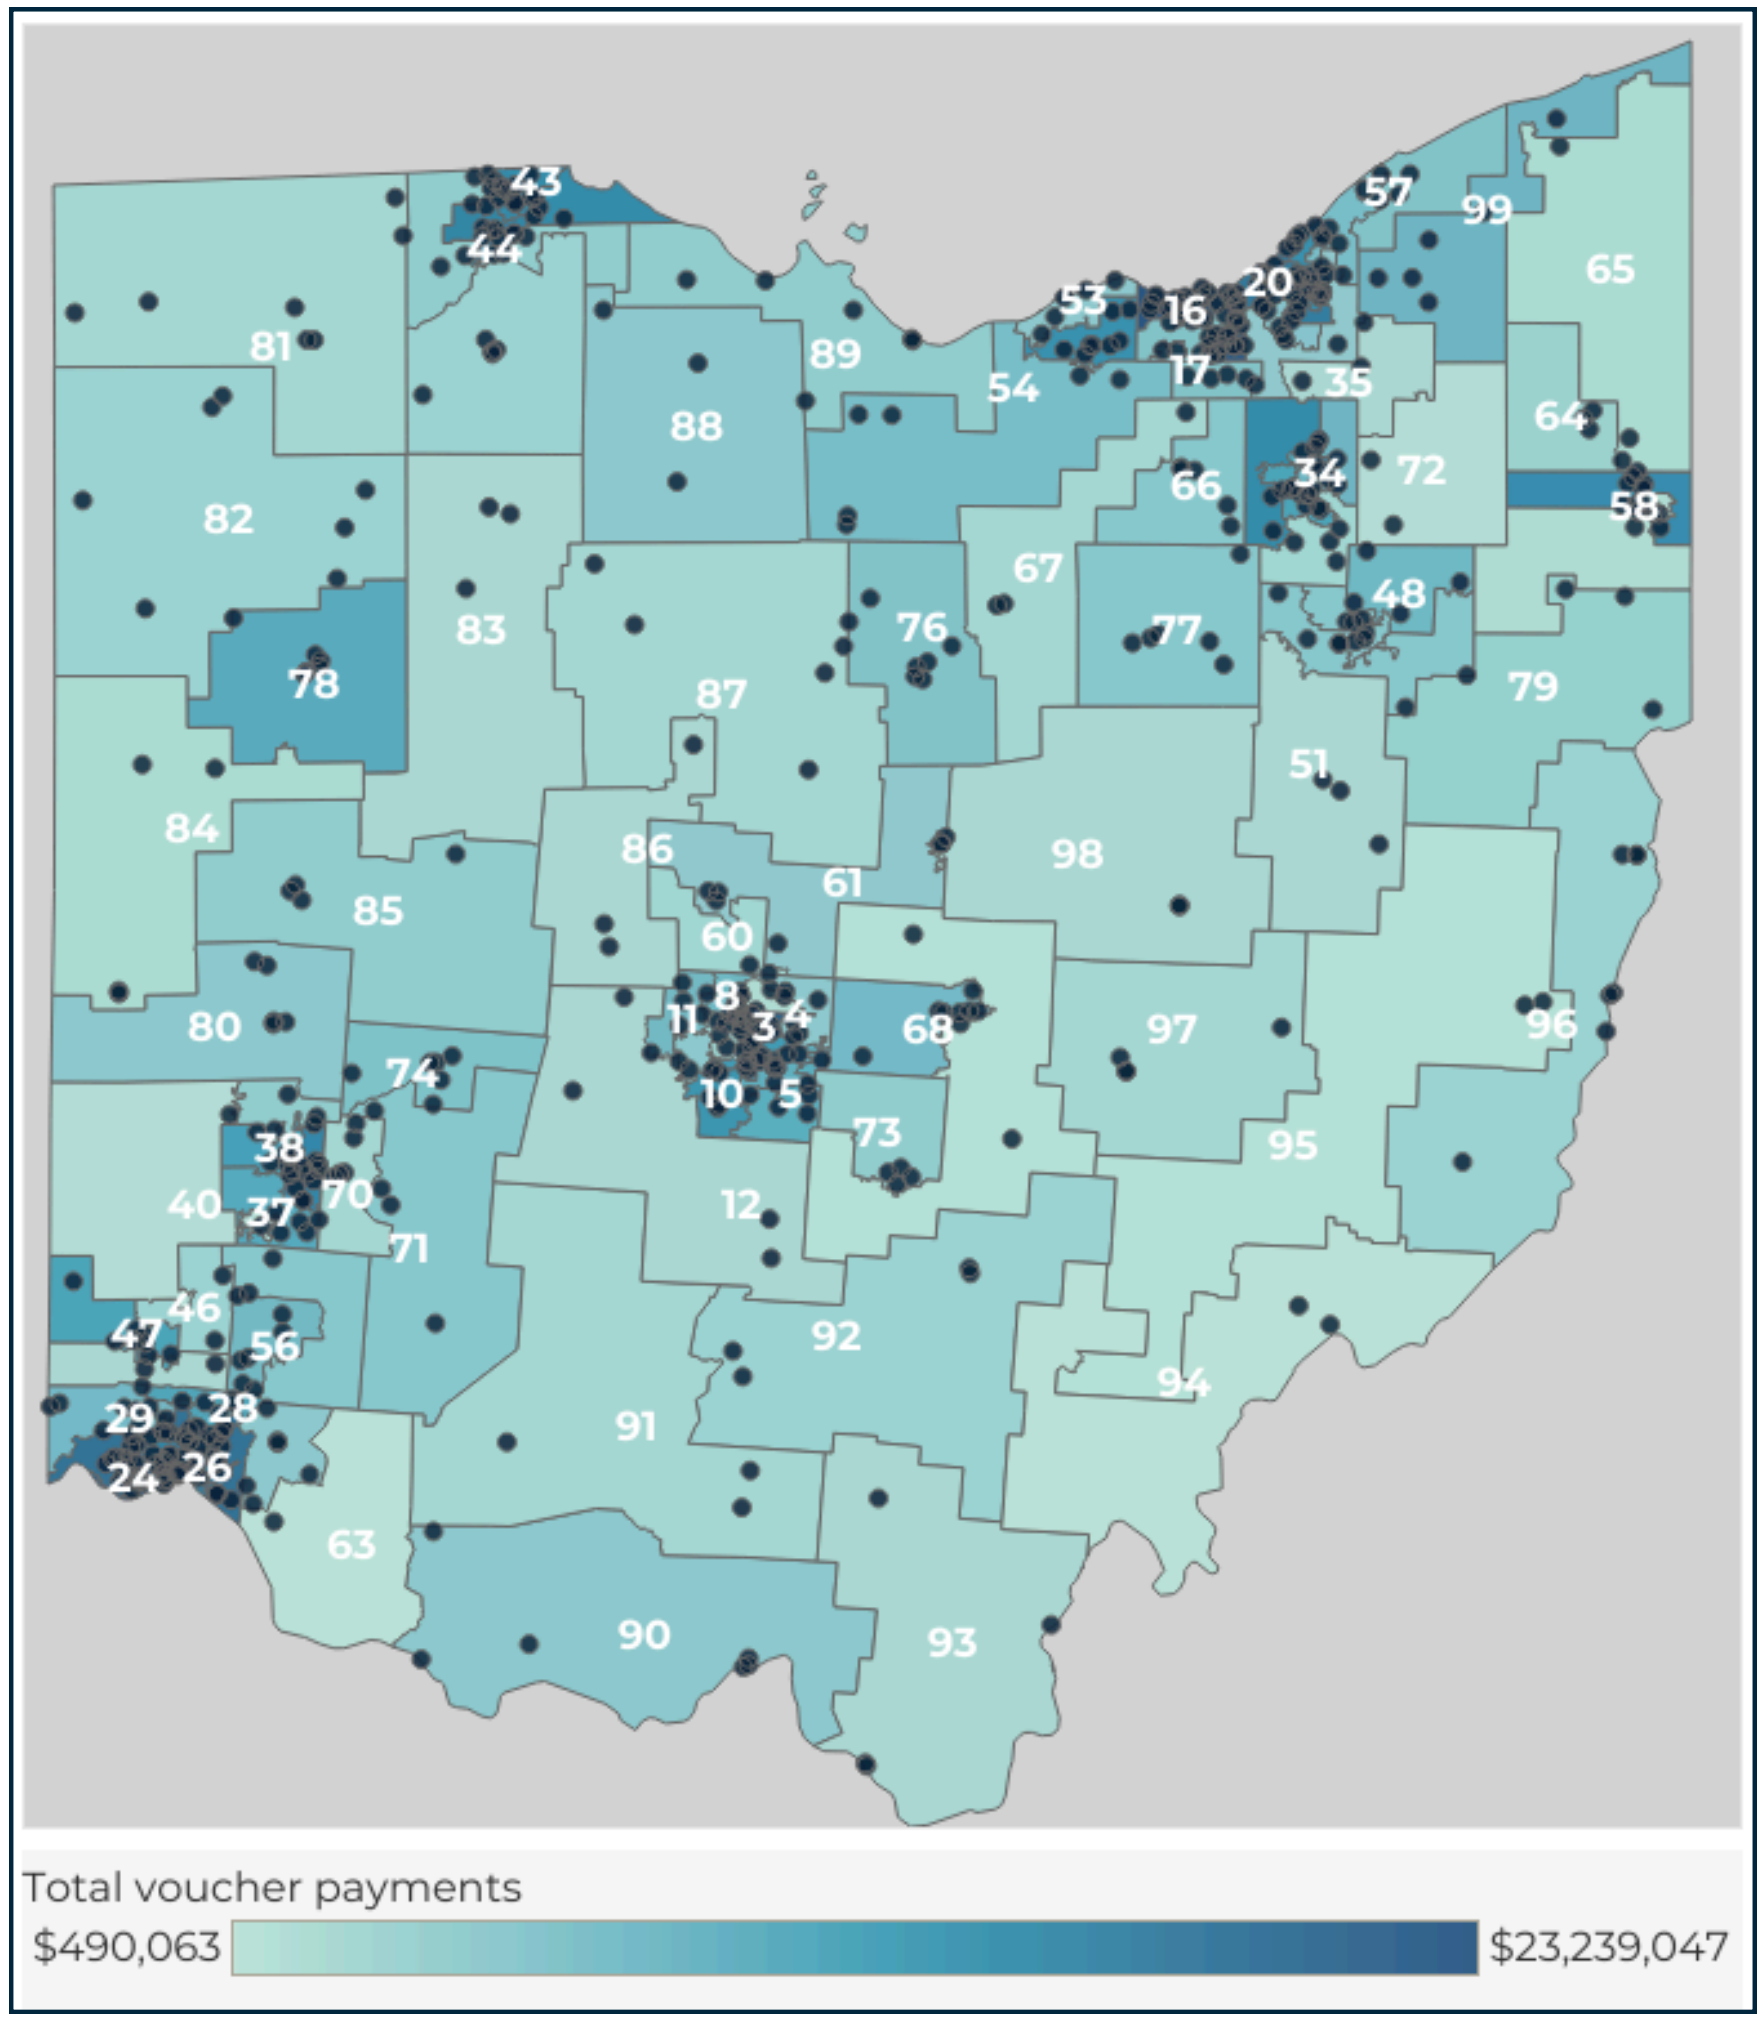
Email them at rep66@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8140

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 67

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 67 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 637

voucher students.

In District 67 there are 31 public schools attended by 14,383

students.

Contact Representative Miller and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

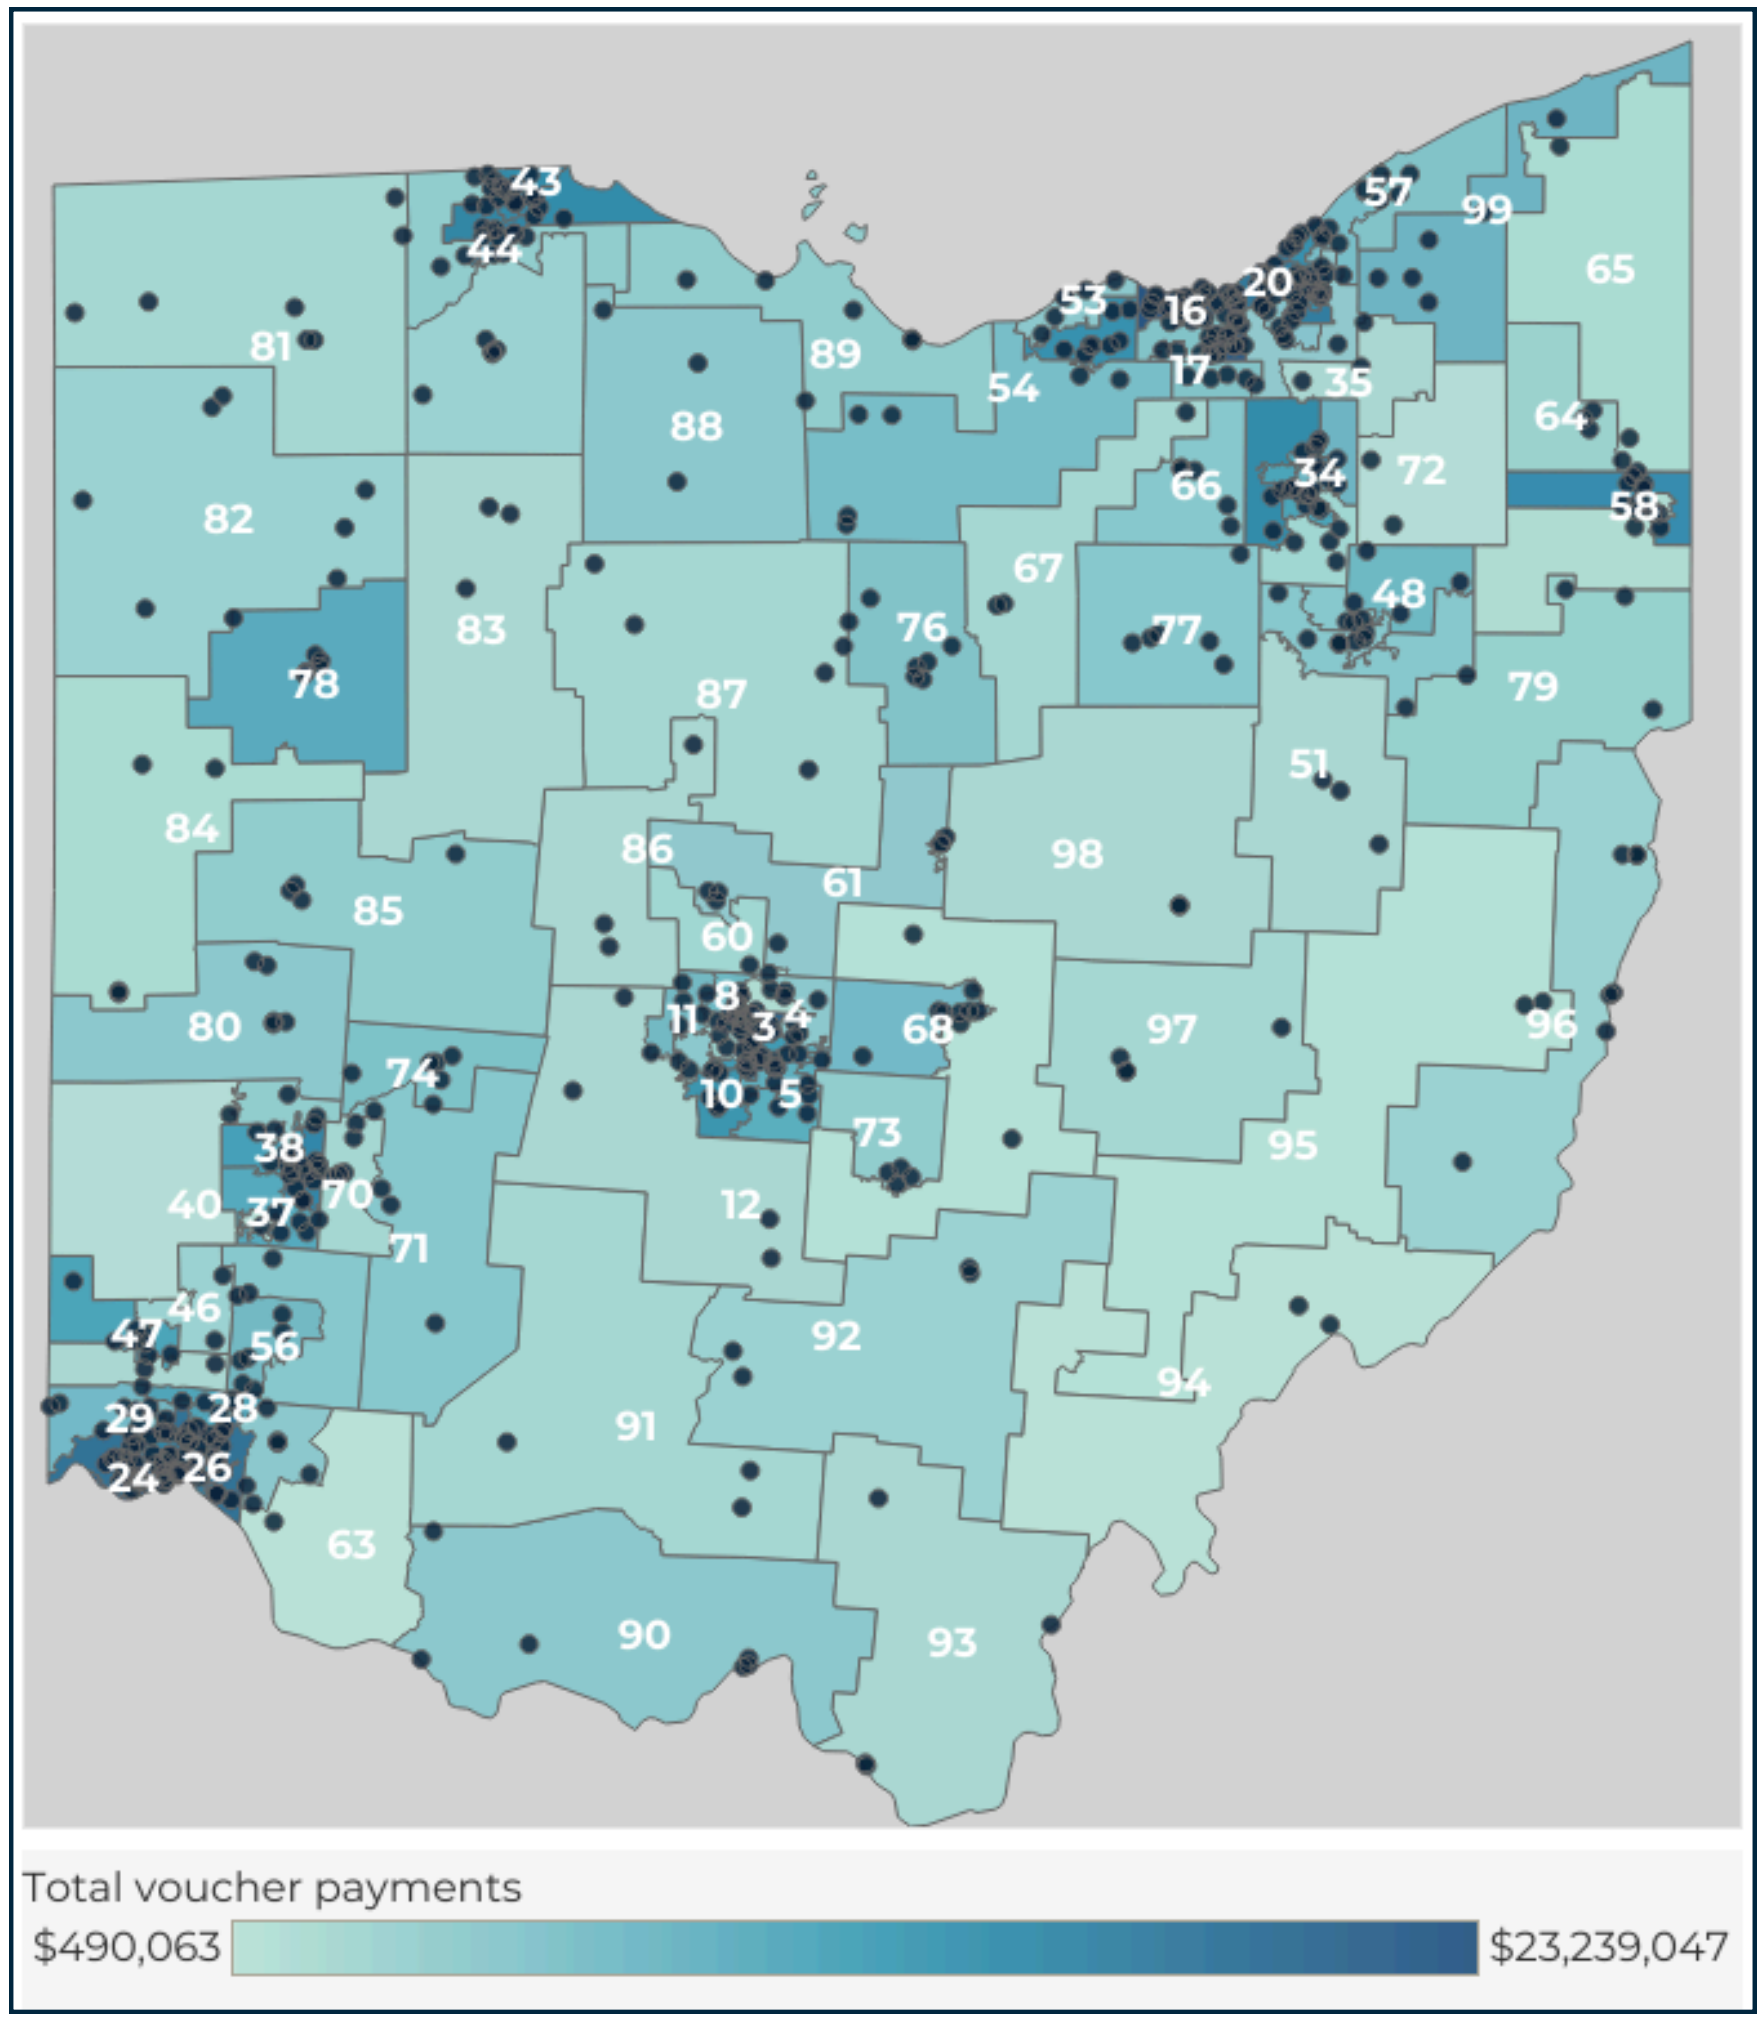
Email them at Rep67@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-0961

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 68

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 68 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 1,414

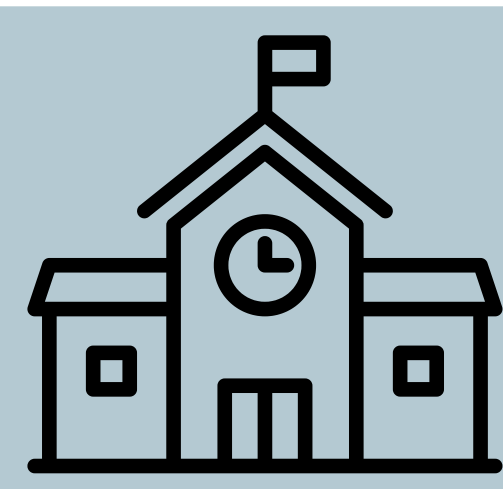
voucher students.



In District 68 there are

32

public schools attended by 18,826

students.

Contact Representative Claggett and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

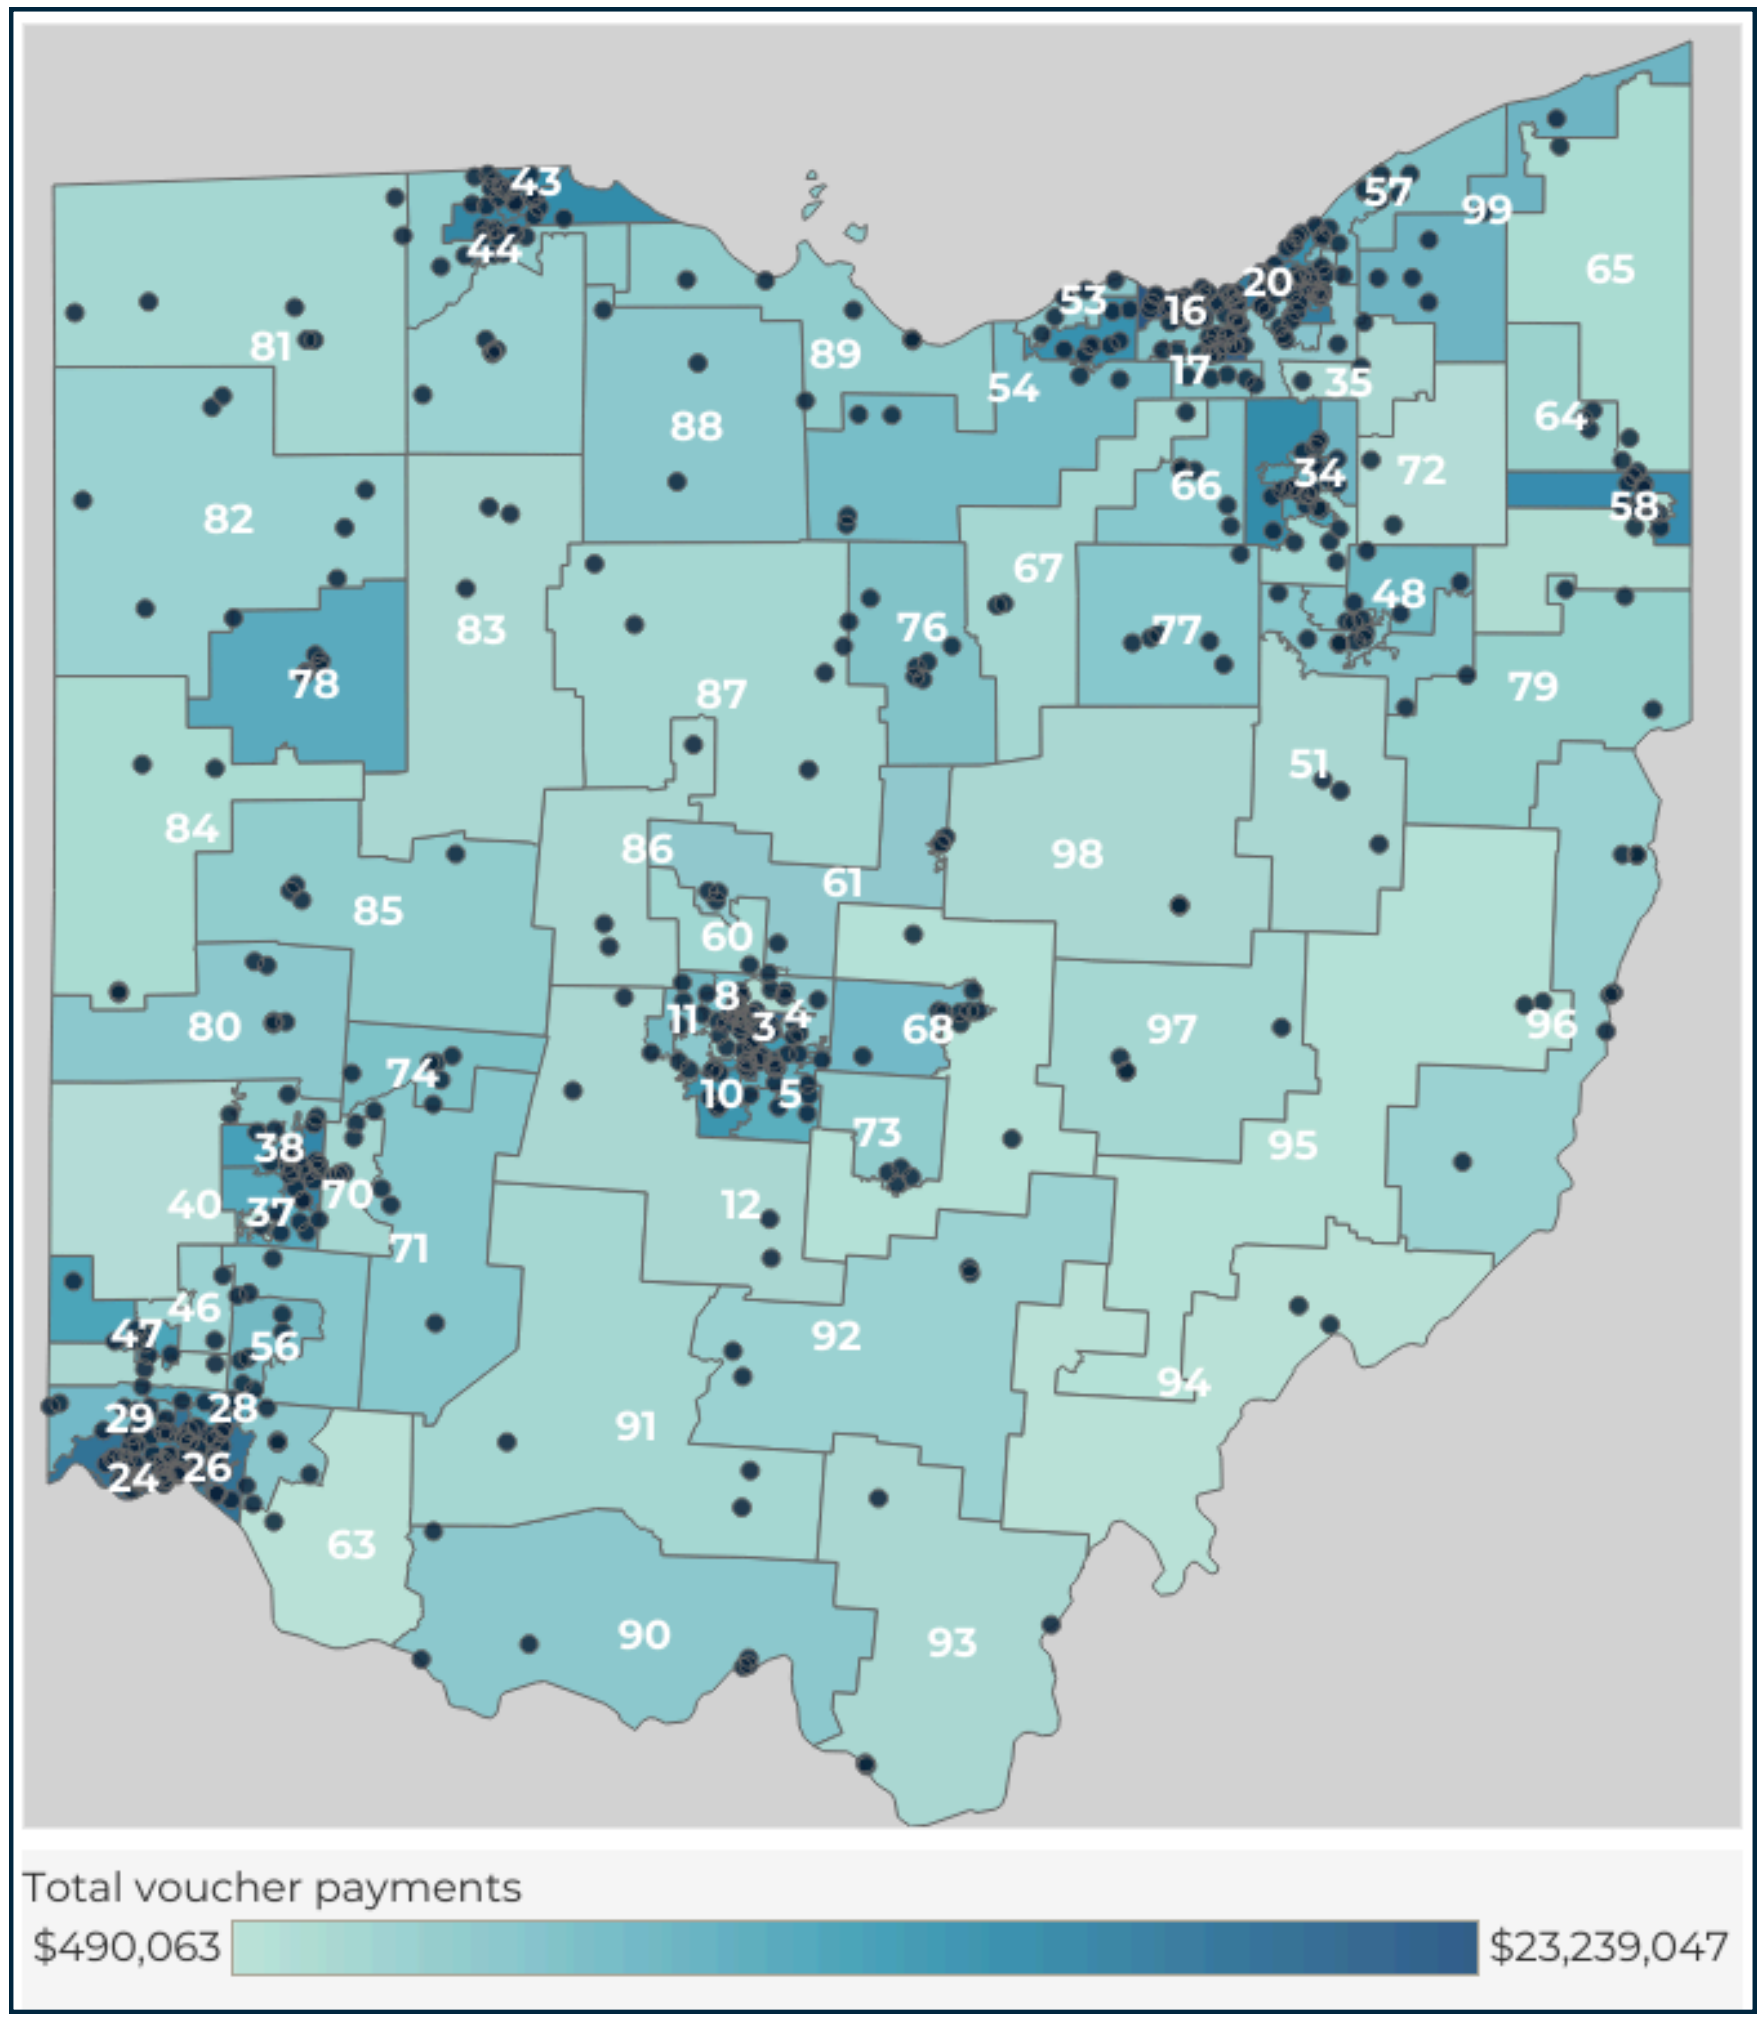
Email them at rep68@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1482

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 69

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 69 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 195

voucher students.

In District 69 there are 42

public schools attended by 16,788

students.

Contact Representative Miller and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

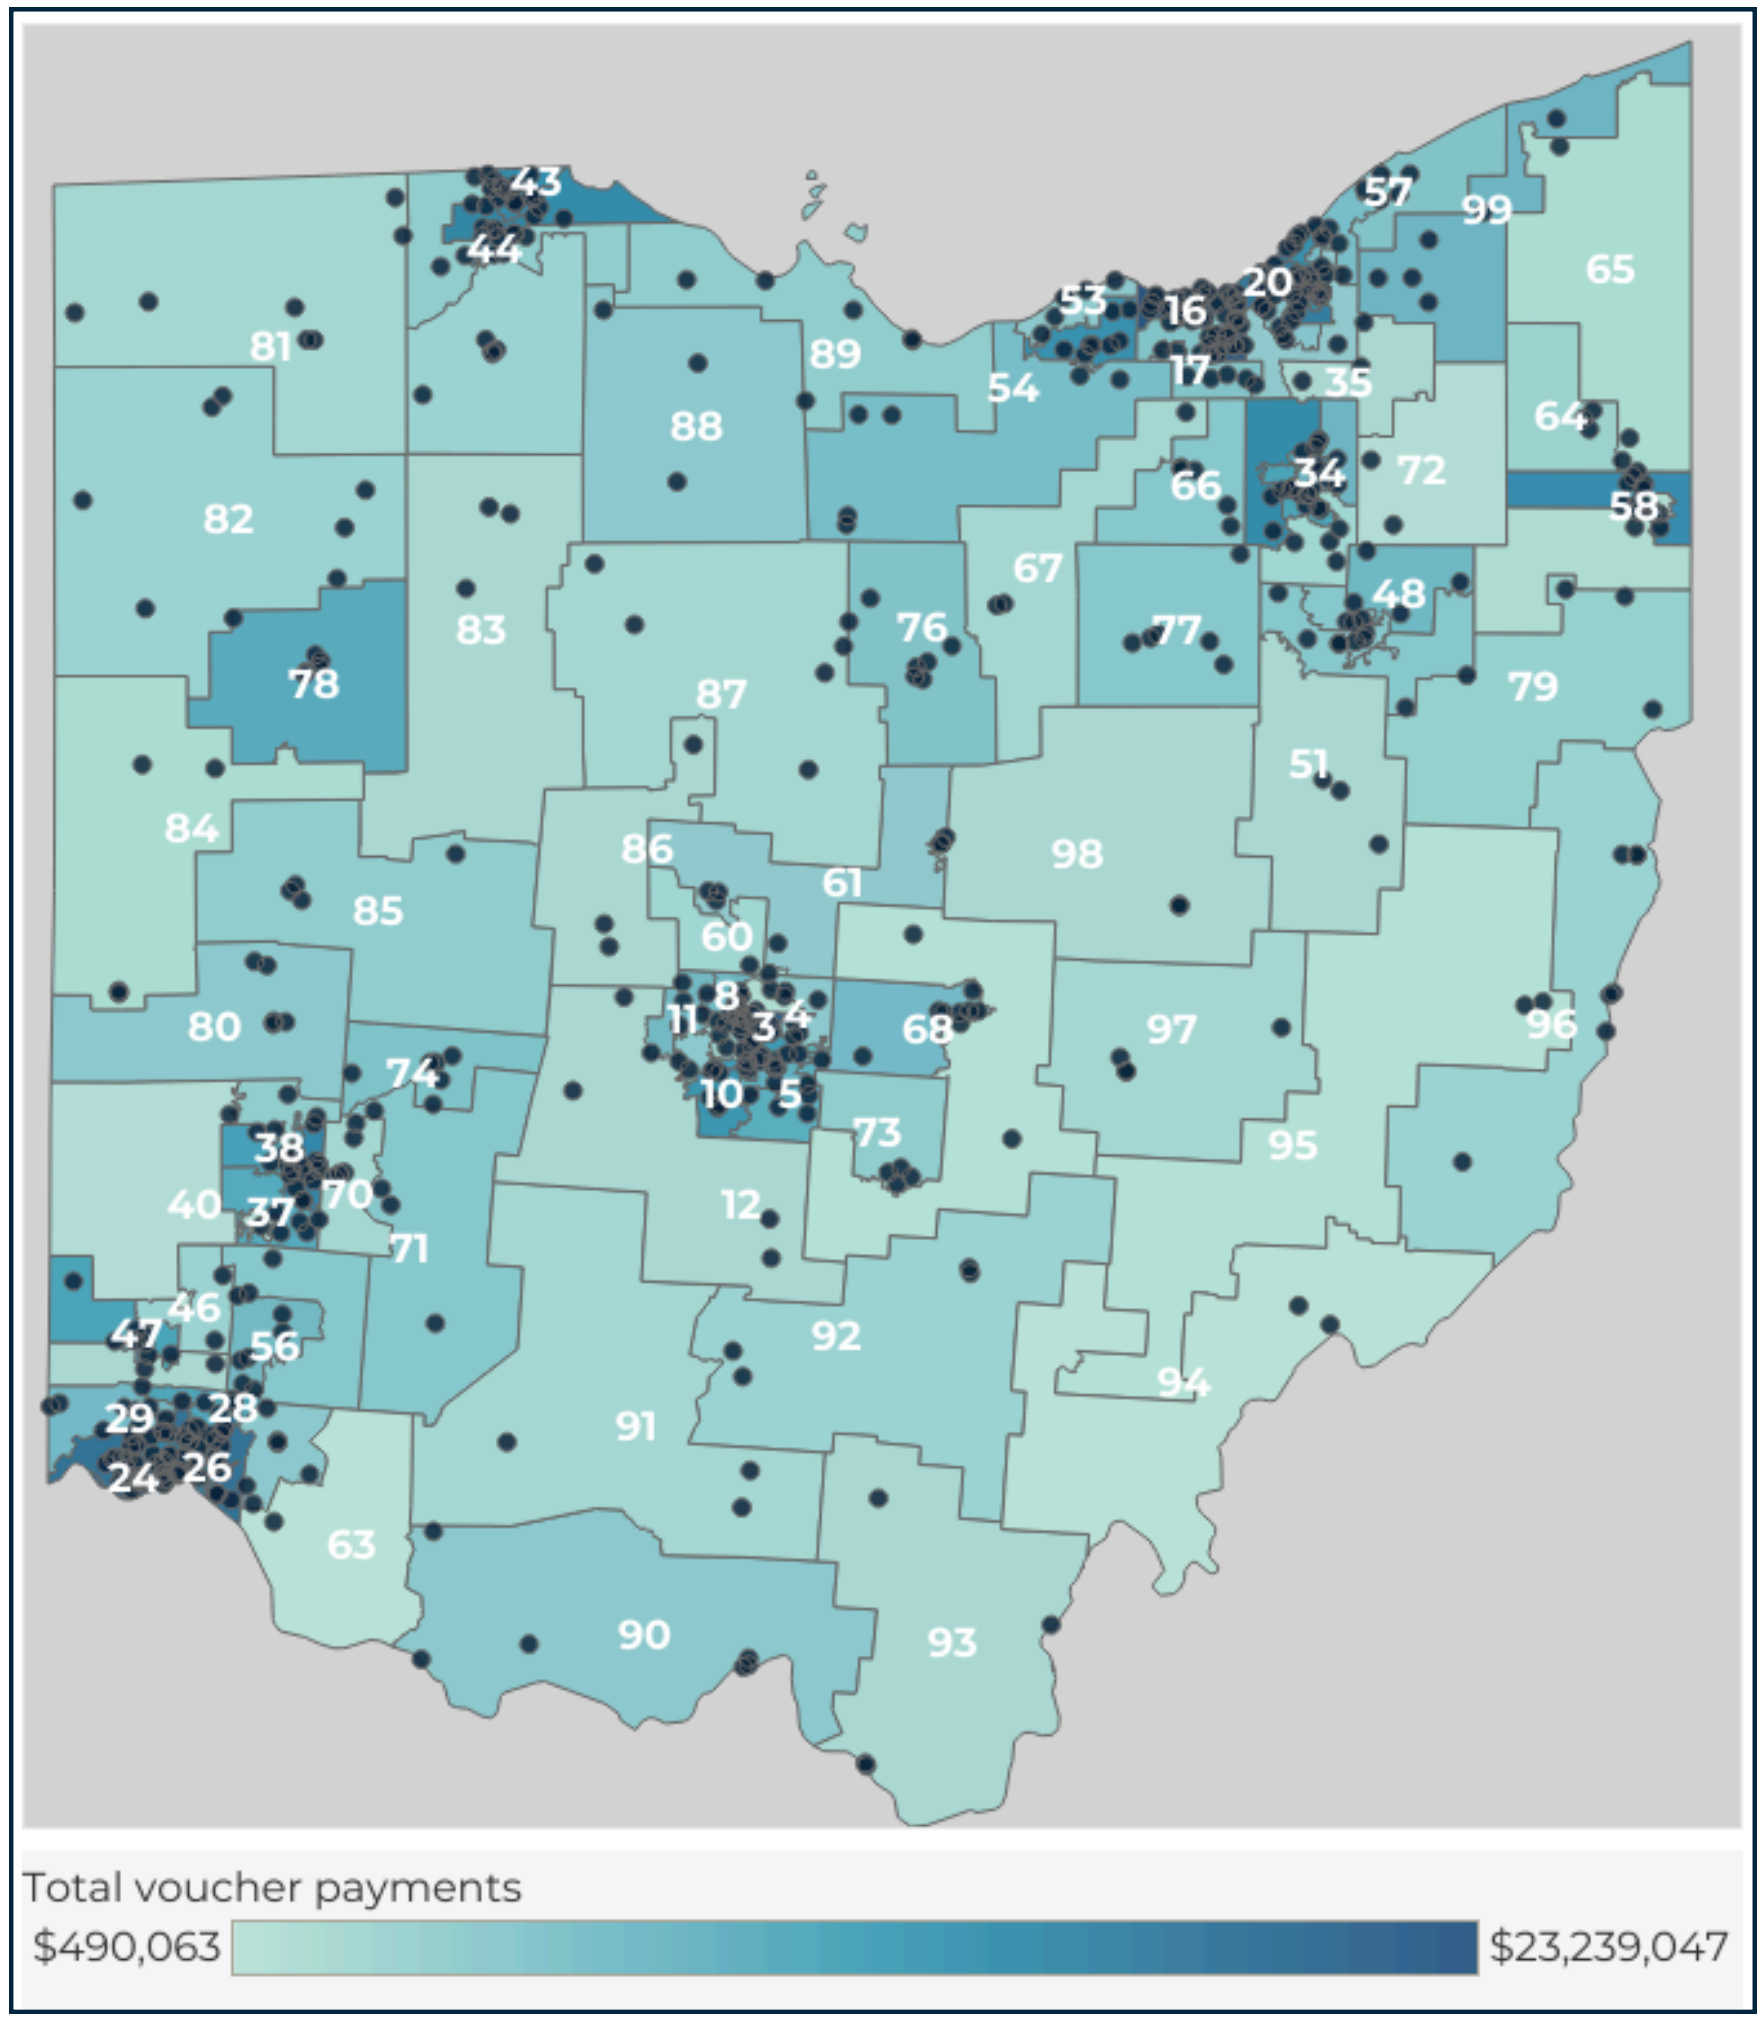
Email them at Rep69@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2500

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 7

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 7 there are

4

private voucher schools attended by 835

voucher students.

In District 7 there are 18

public schools attended by 10,034

students.

Contact Representative Russo and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

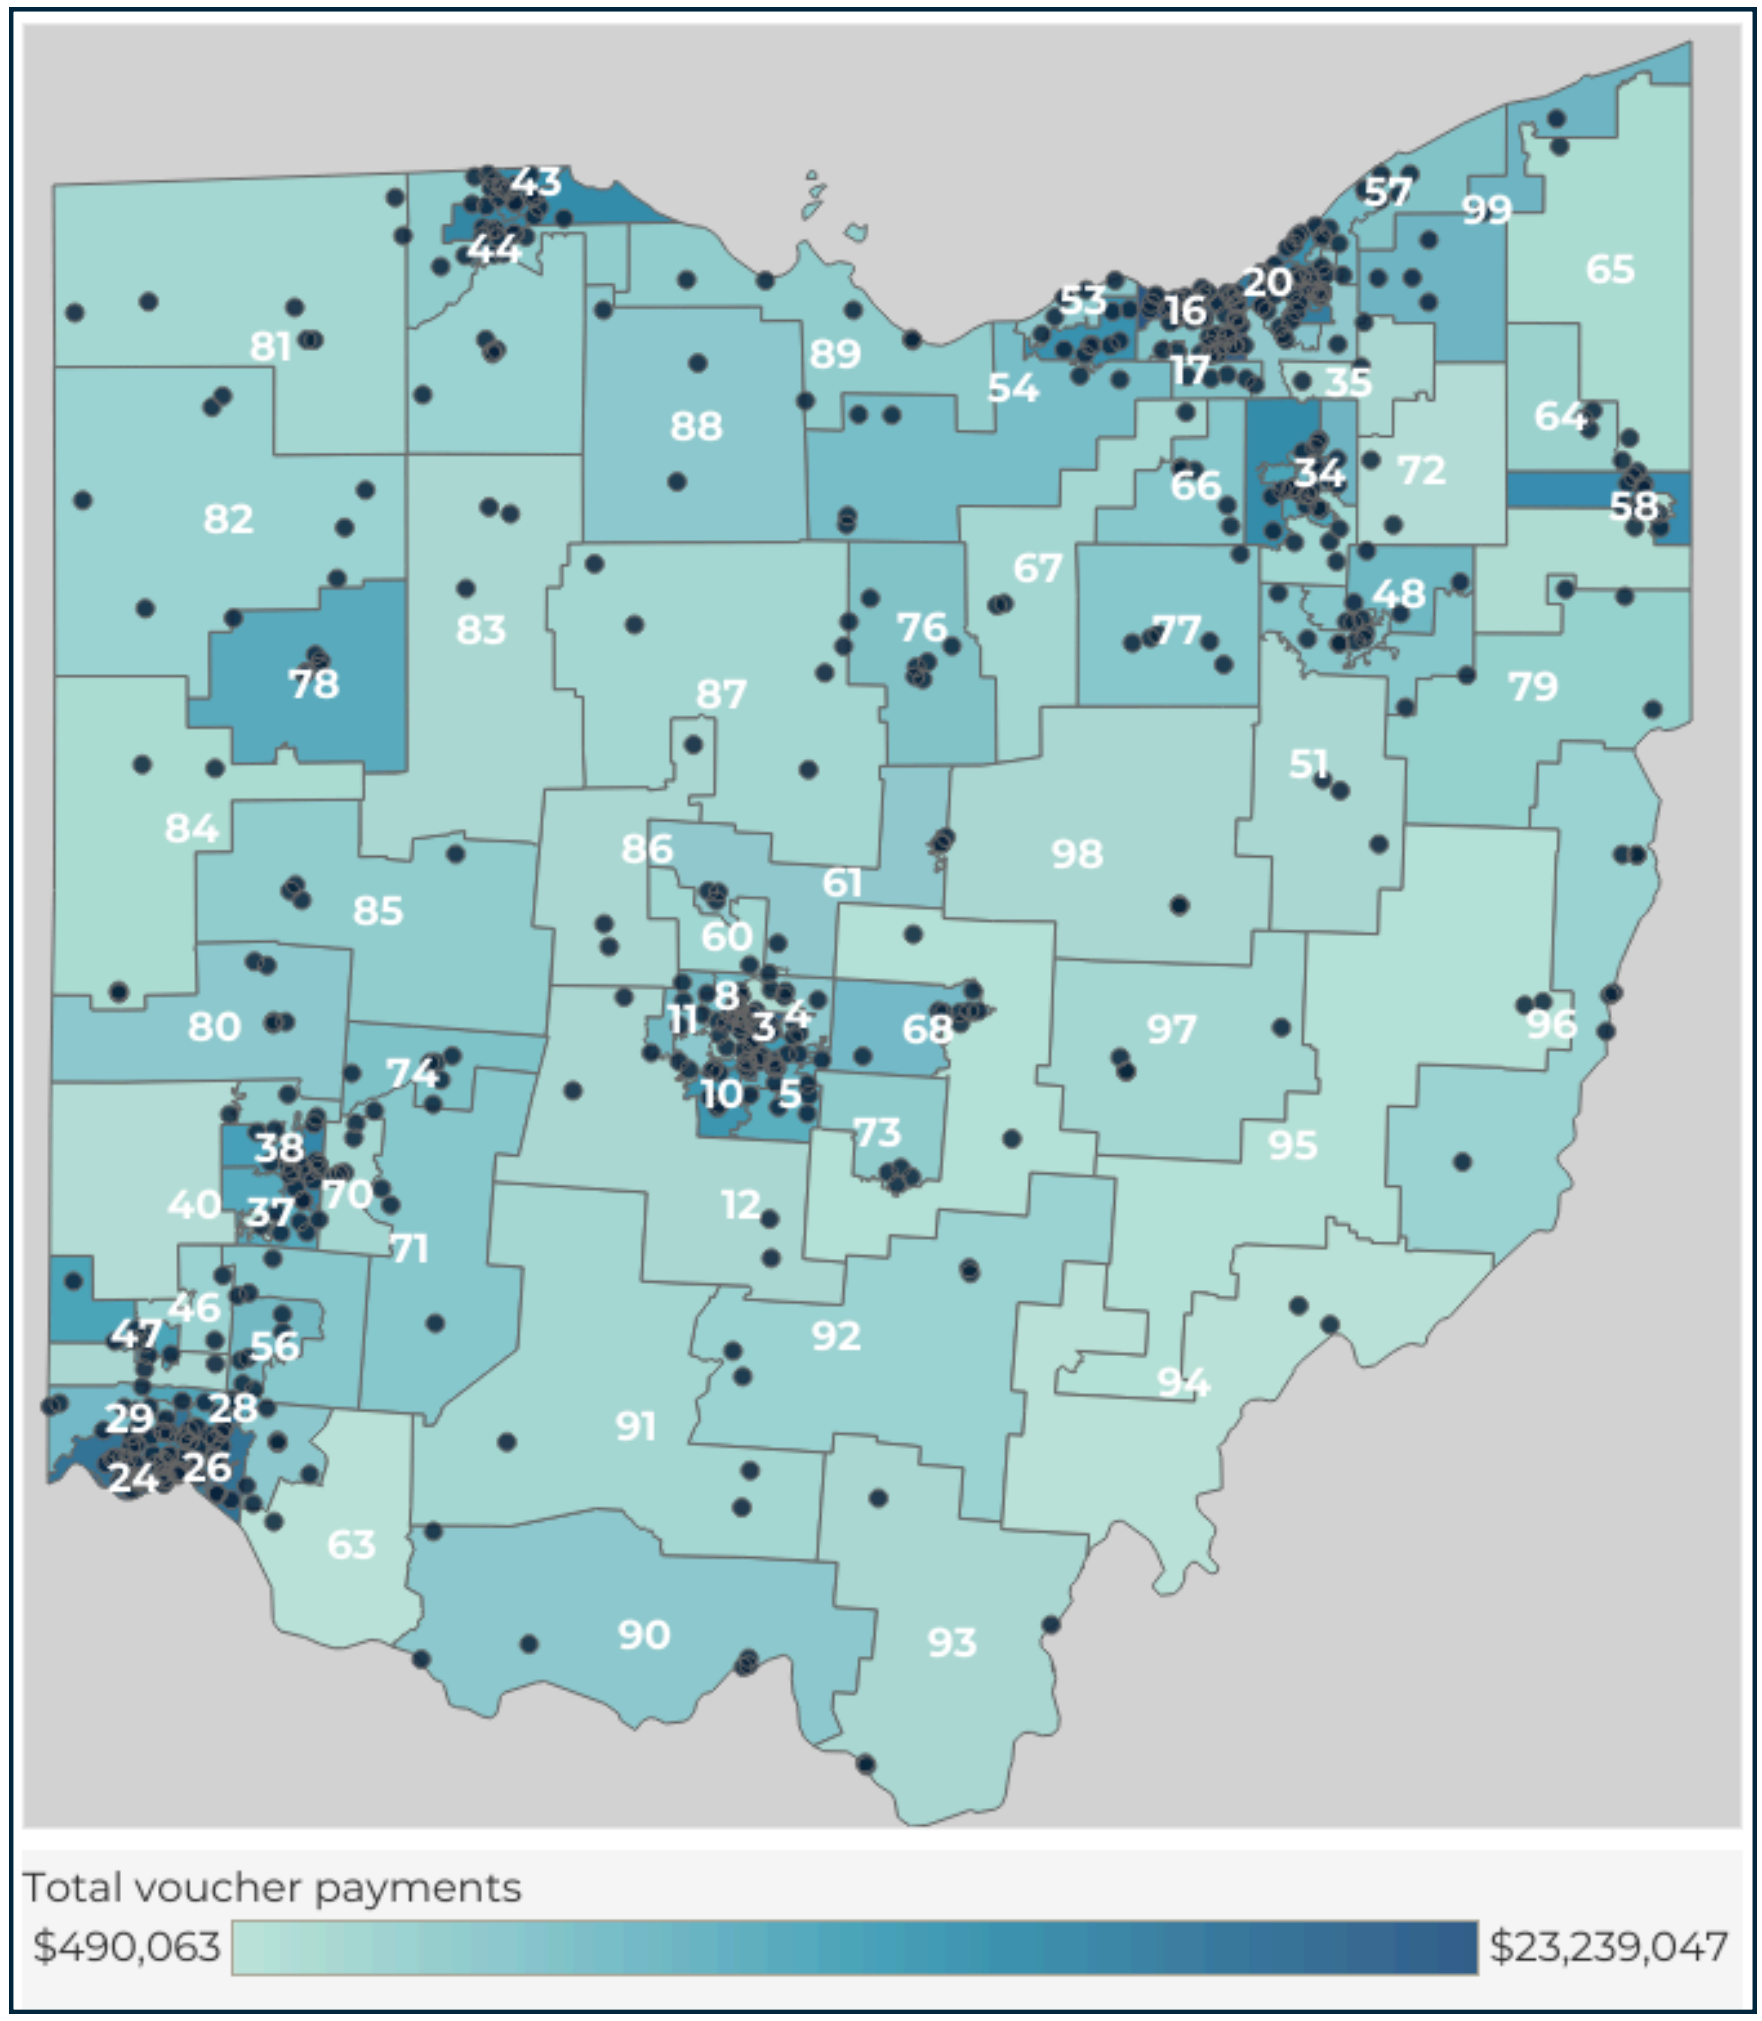
Email them at rep07@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8012

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 70

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 70 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 599

voucher students.

In District 70 there are 19 public schools attended by 14,467

students.

Contact Representative Lampton and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

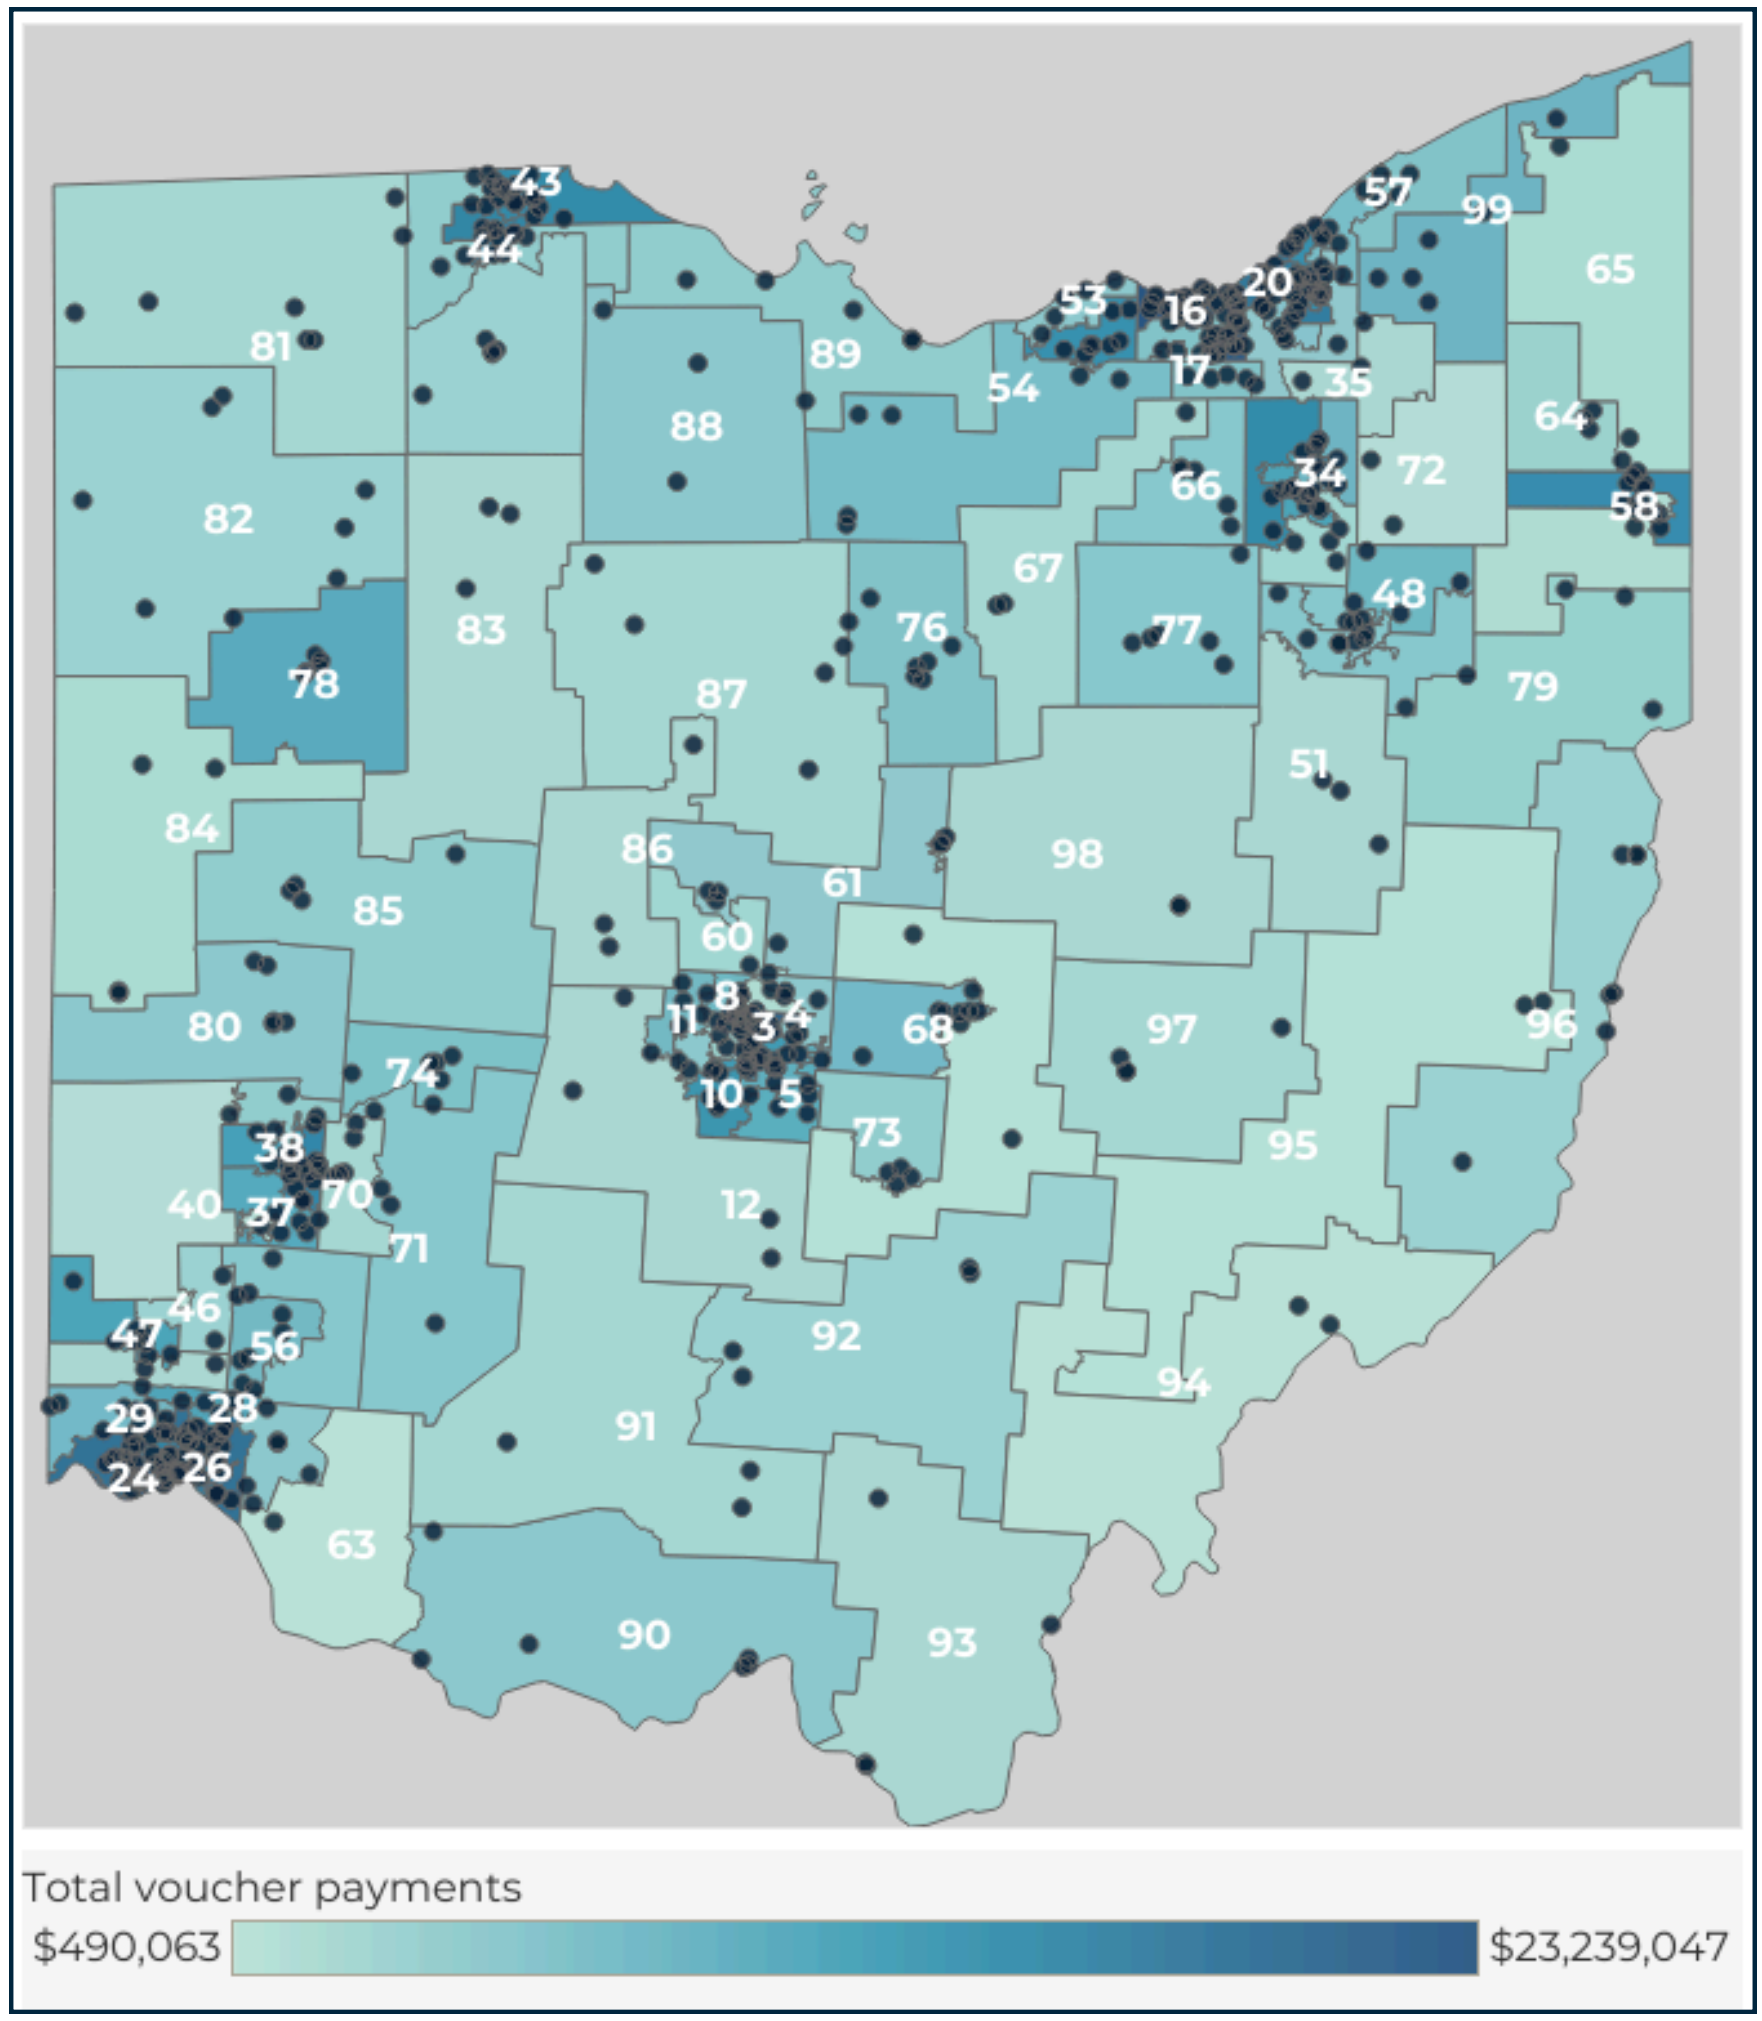
Email them at rep70@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6020

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 71

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 71 there are

4

private voucher schools attended by 1,000

voucher students.

In District 71 there are 36

public schools attended by 15,022

students.

Contact Representative Dean and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

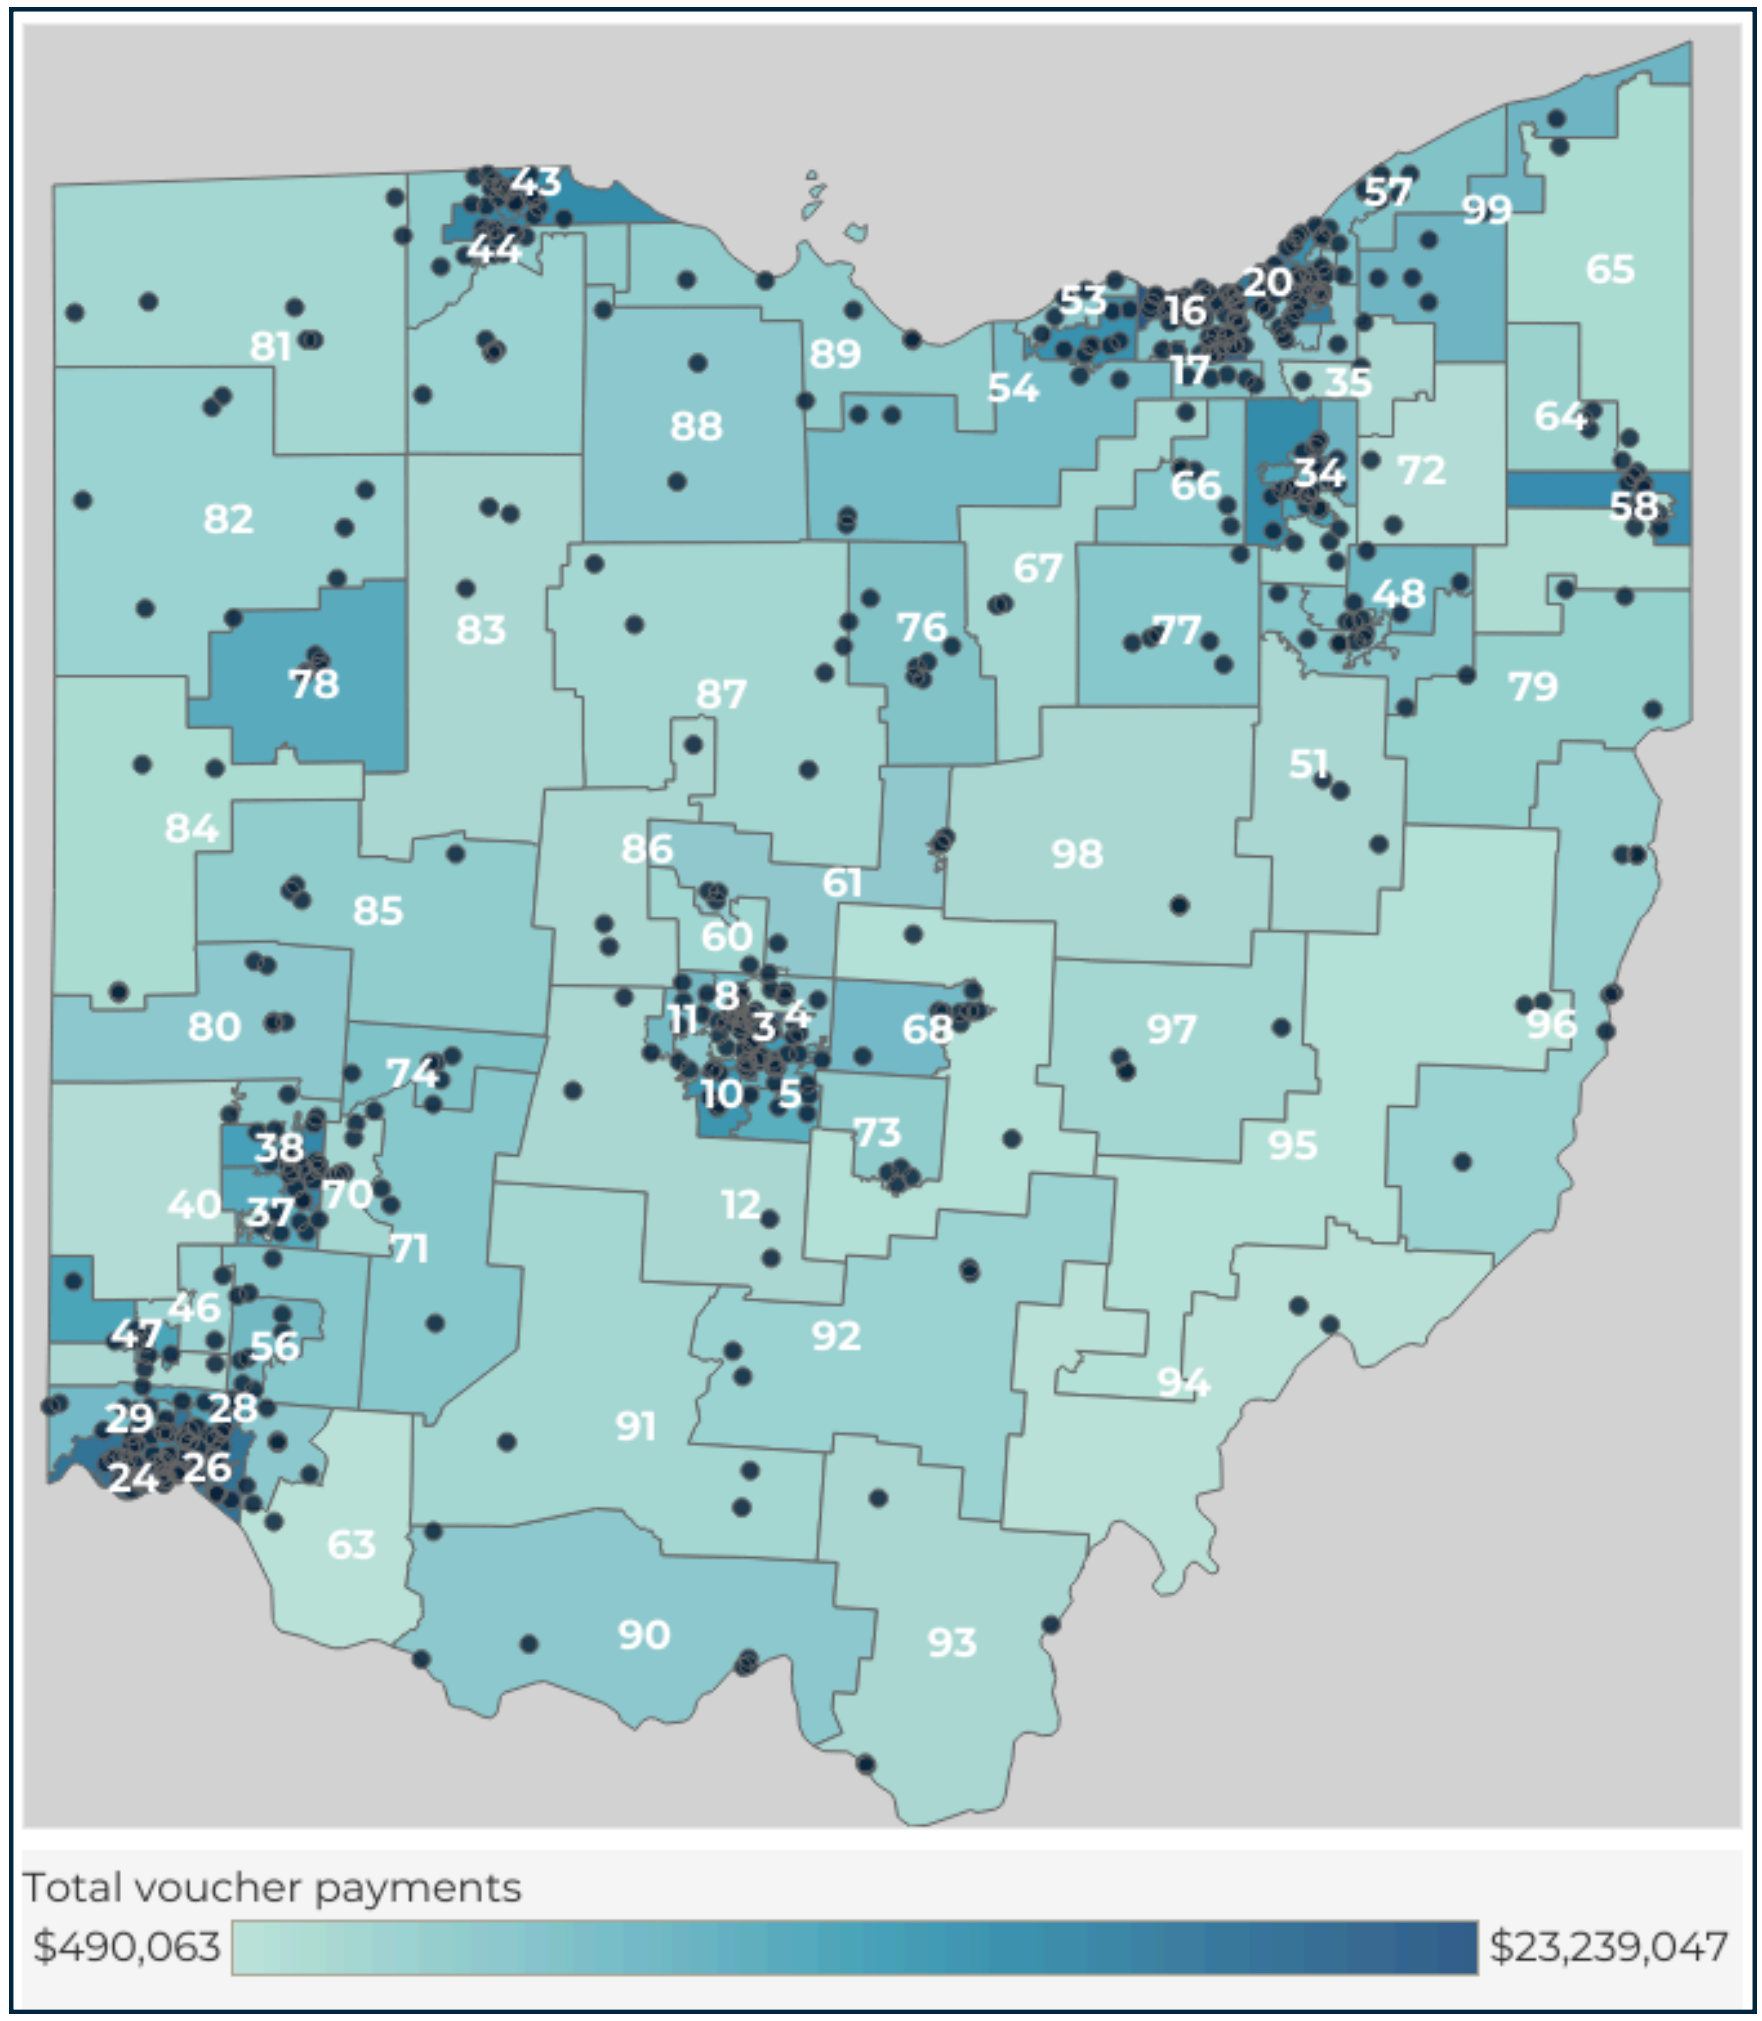
Email them at rep71@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1470

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 72

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 72 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 302

voucher students.

In District 72 there are 32

public schools attended by 12,158

students.

Contact Representative Workman and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

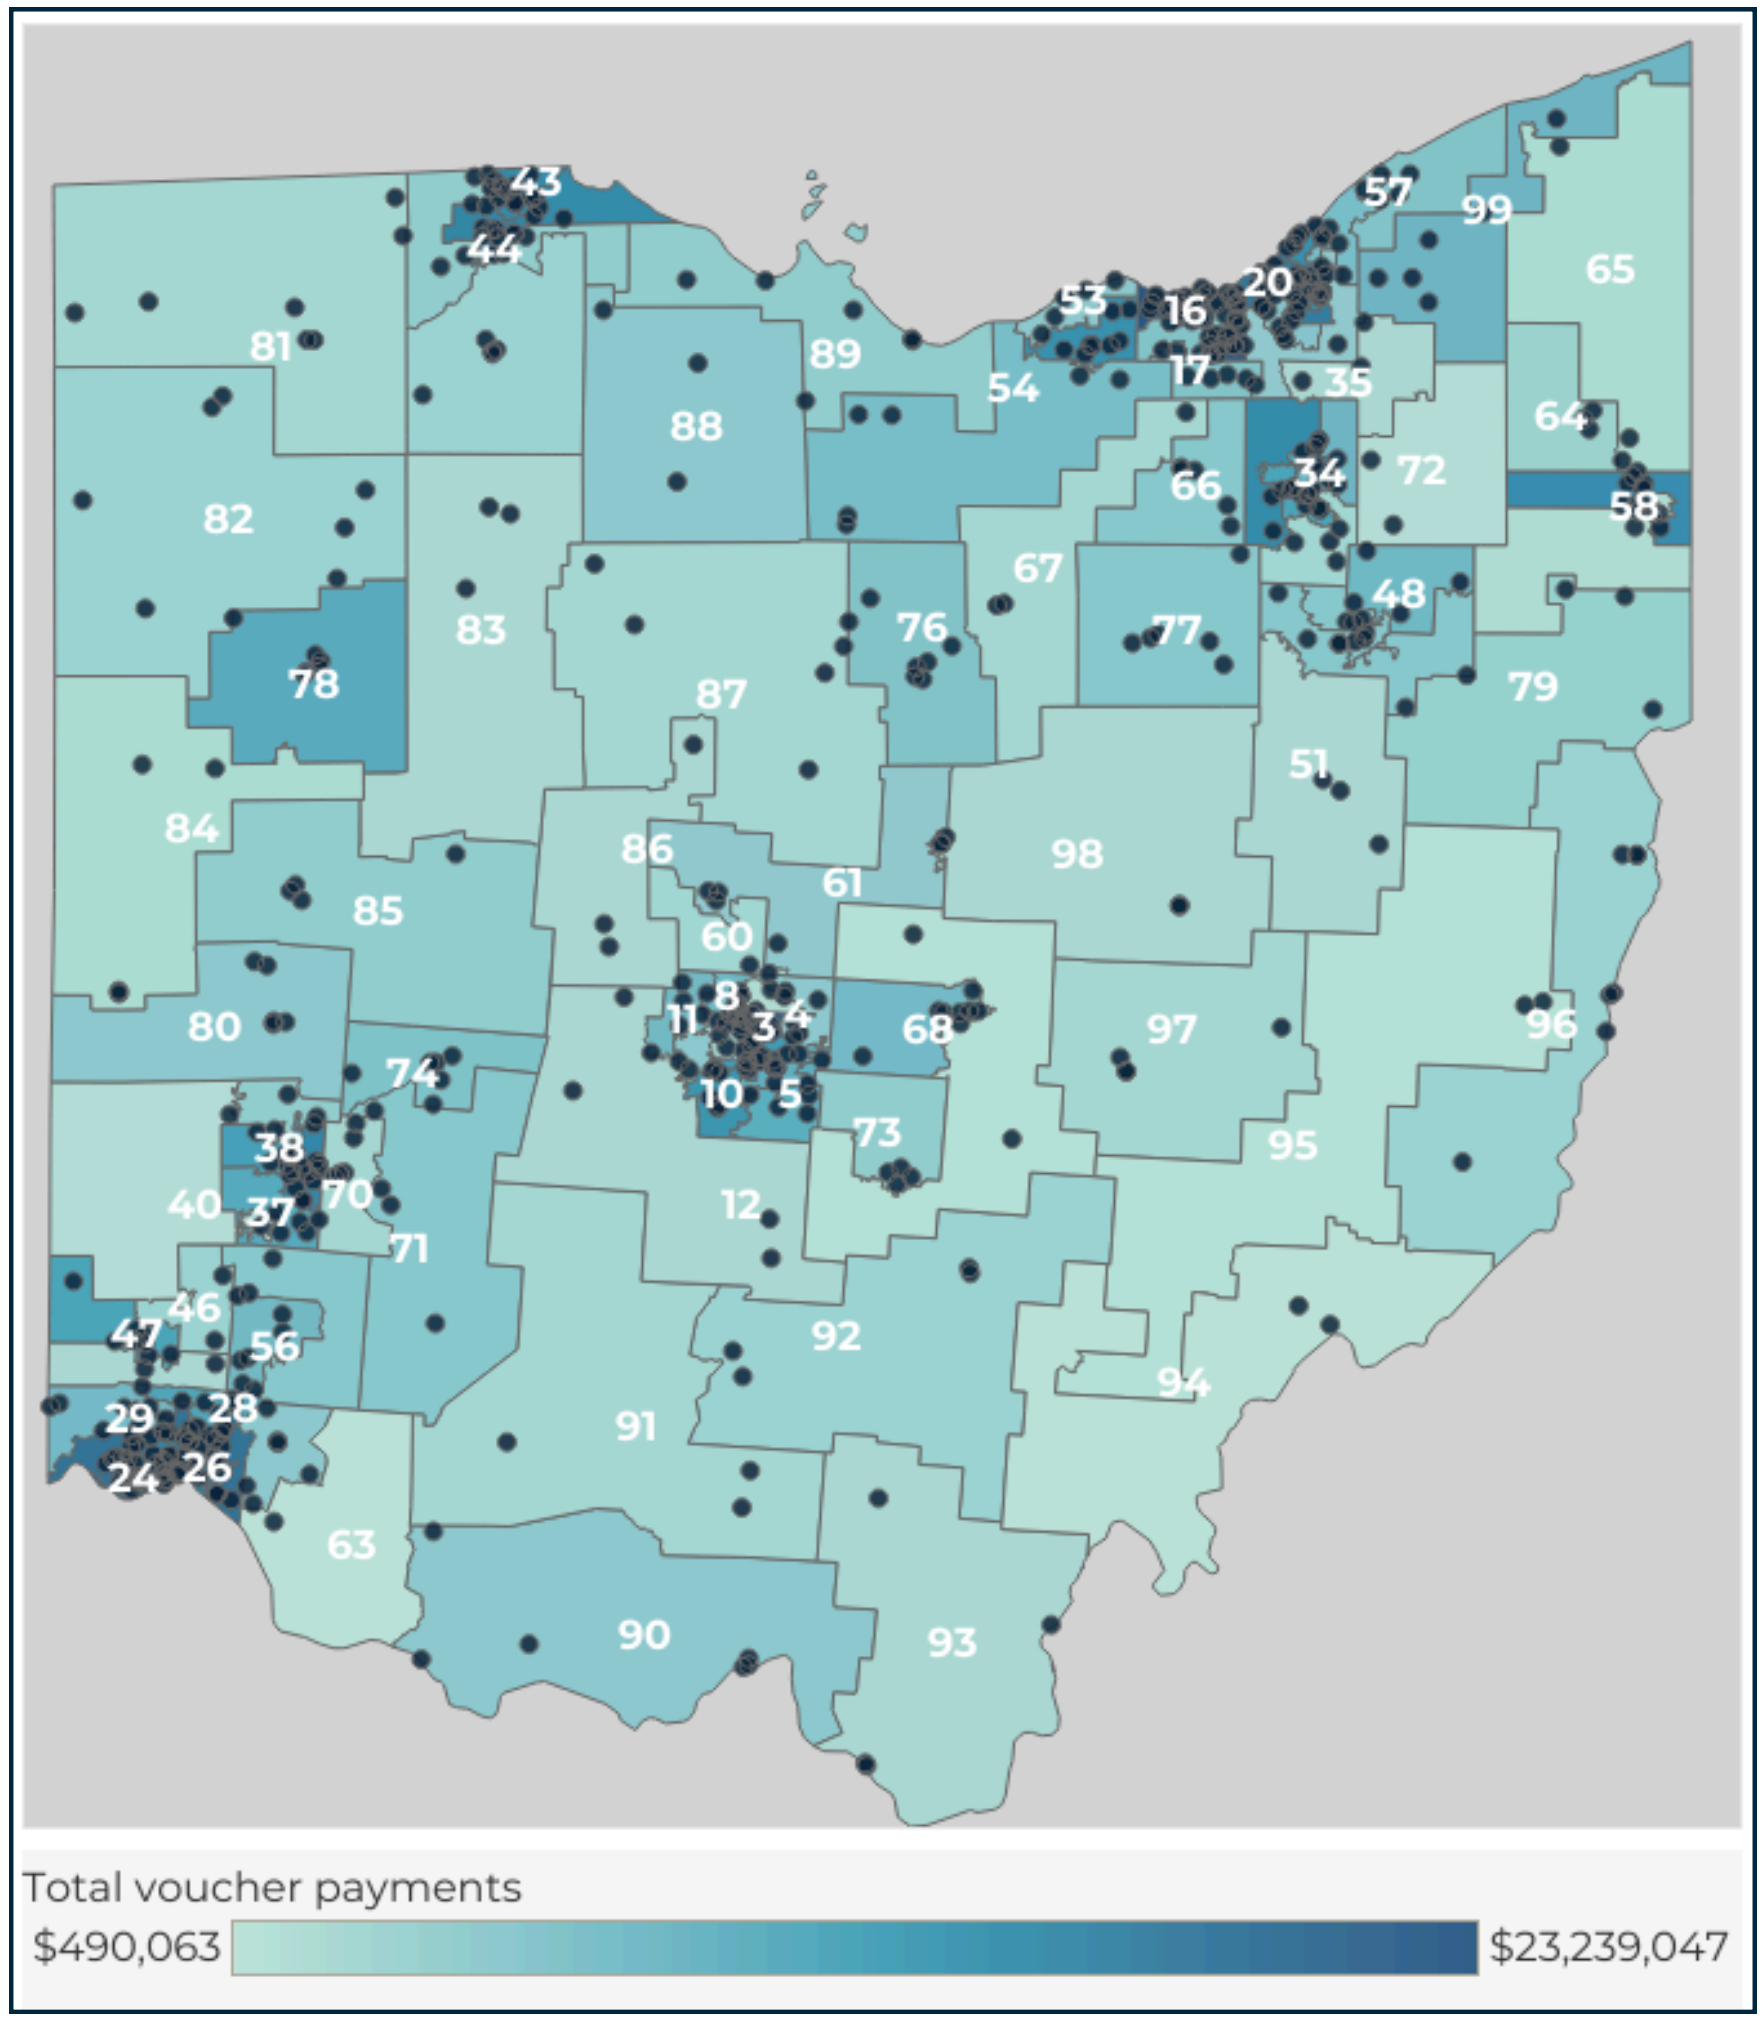
Email them at rep72@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2004

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 73

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 73 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 807

voucher students.

In District 73 there are 33

public schools attended by 21,639

students.

Contact Representative LaRe and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

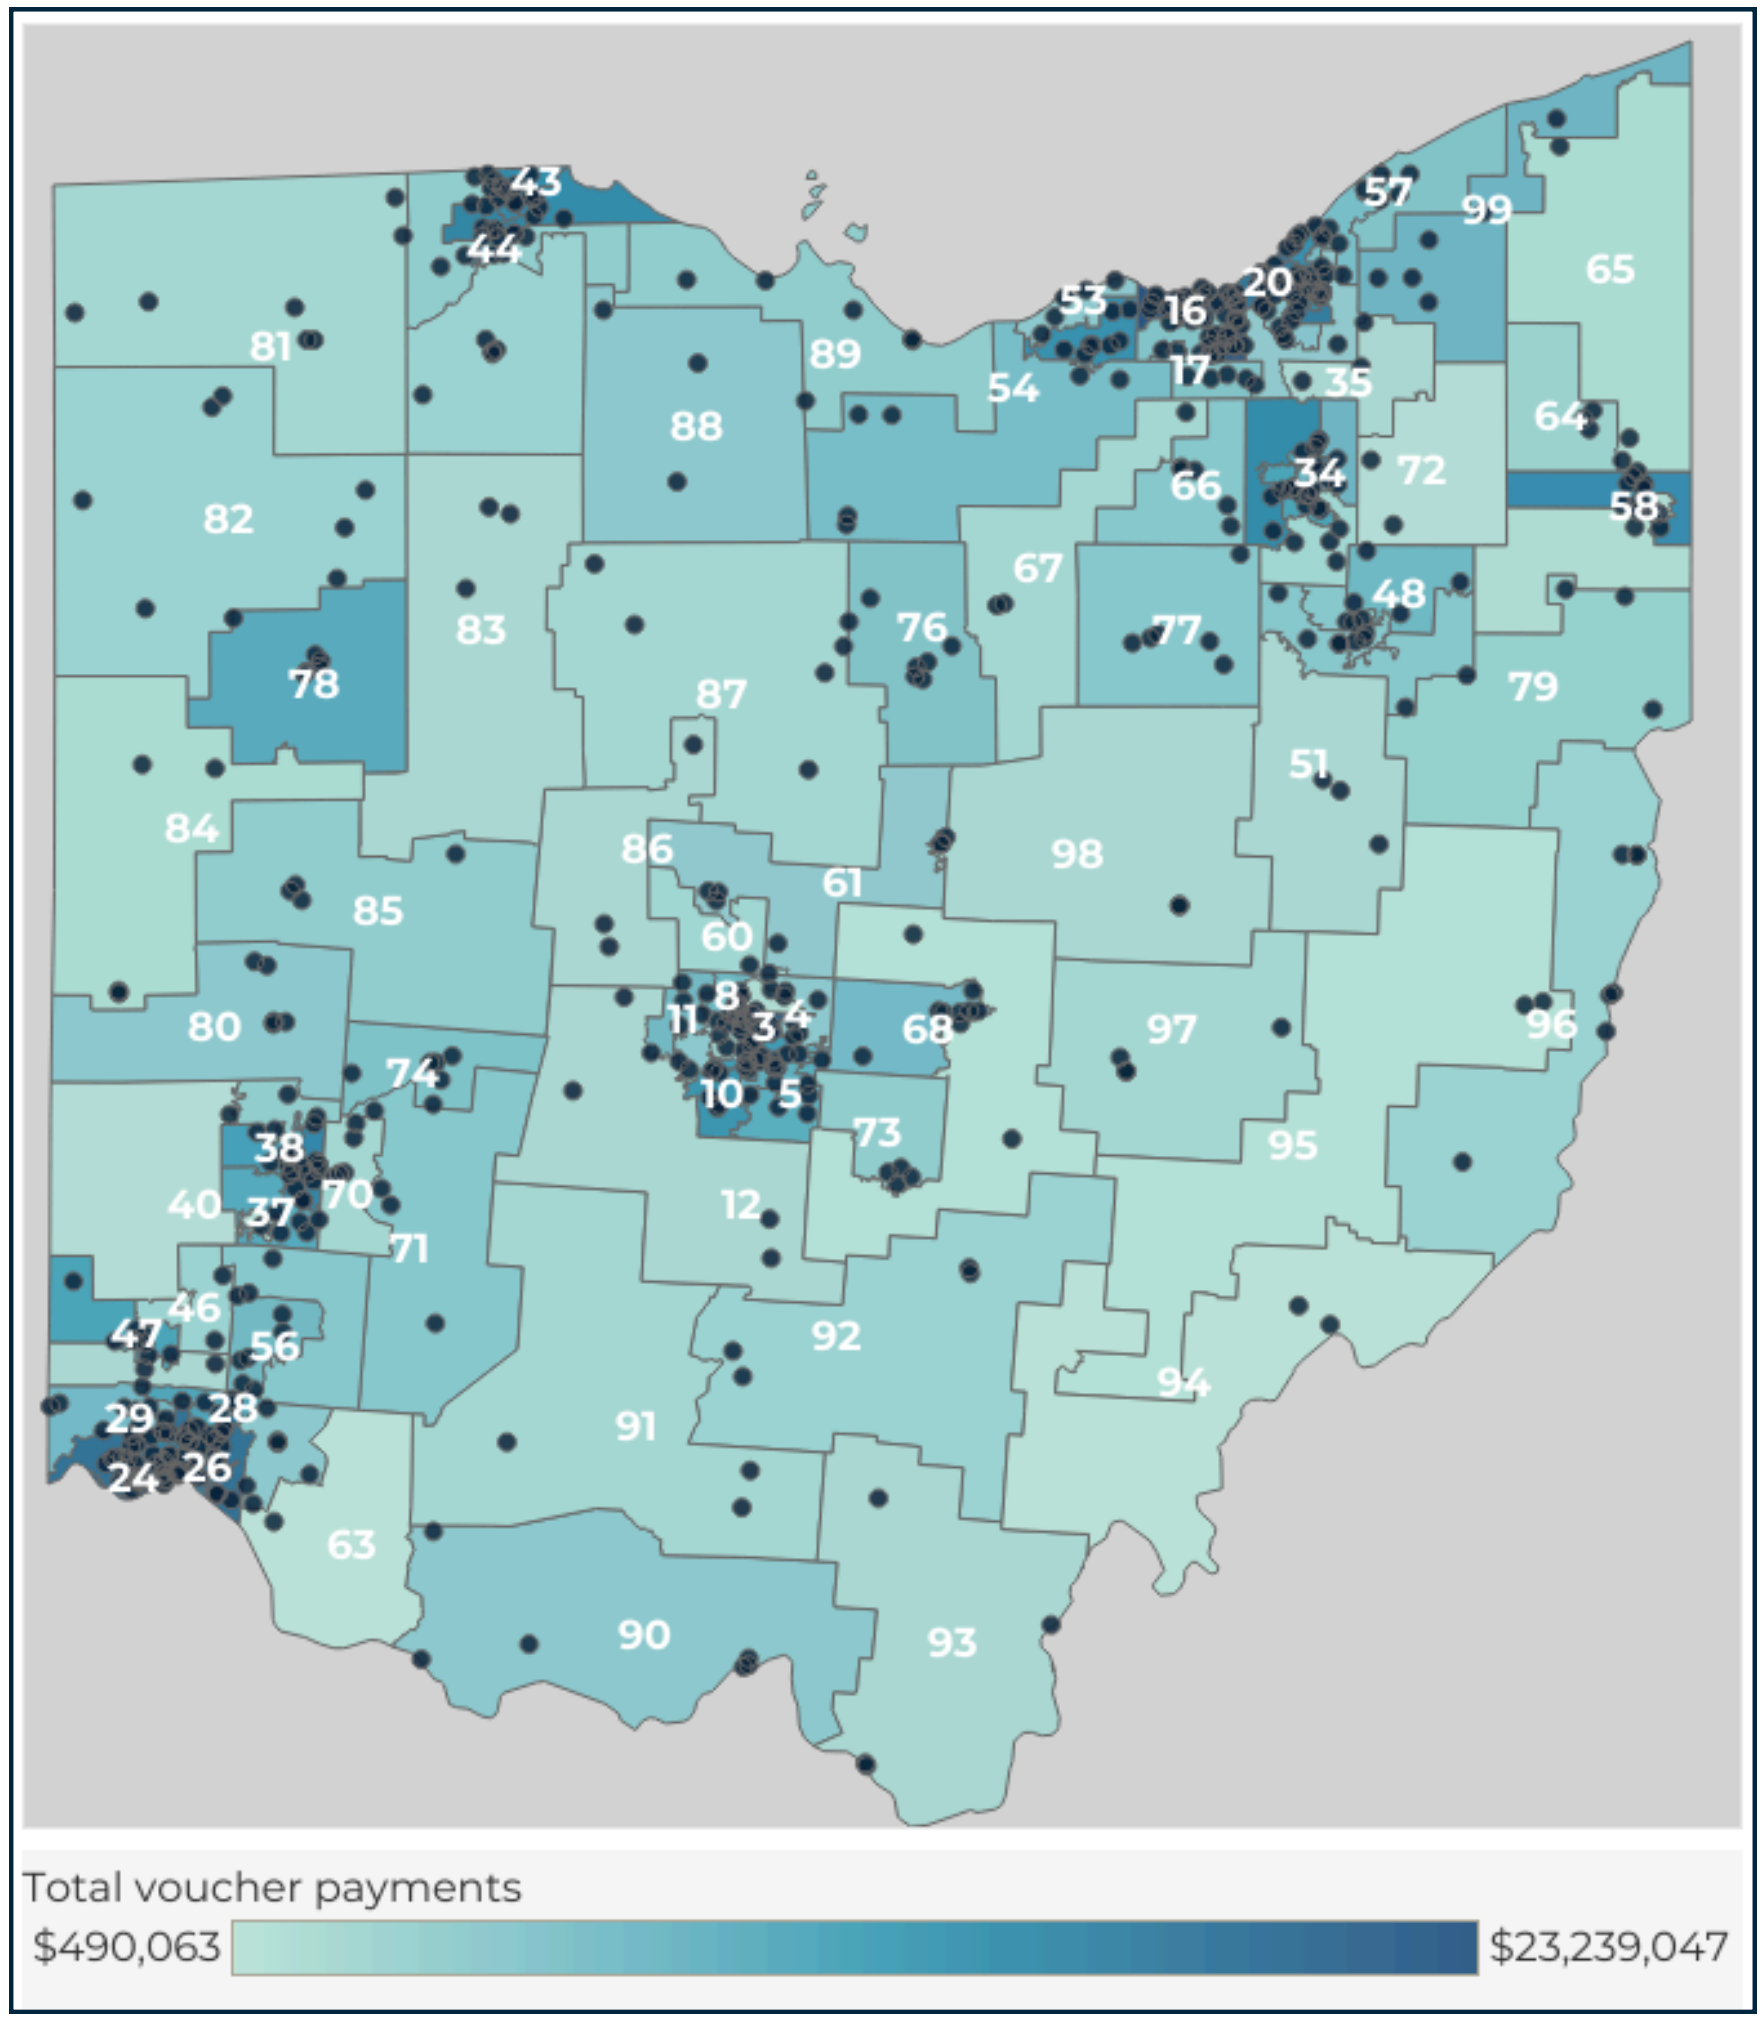
Email them at rep73@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8100

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 74

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 74 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,045

voucher students.

In District 74 there are 27

public schools attended by 14,533

students.

Contact Representative Willis and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

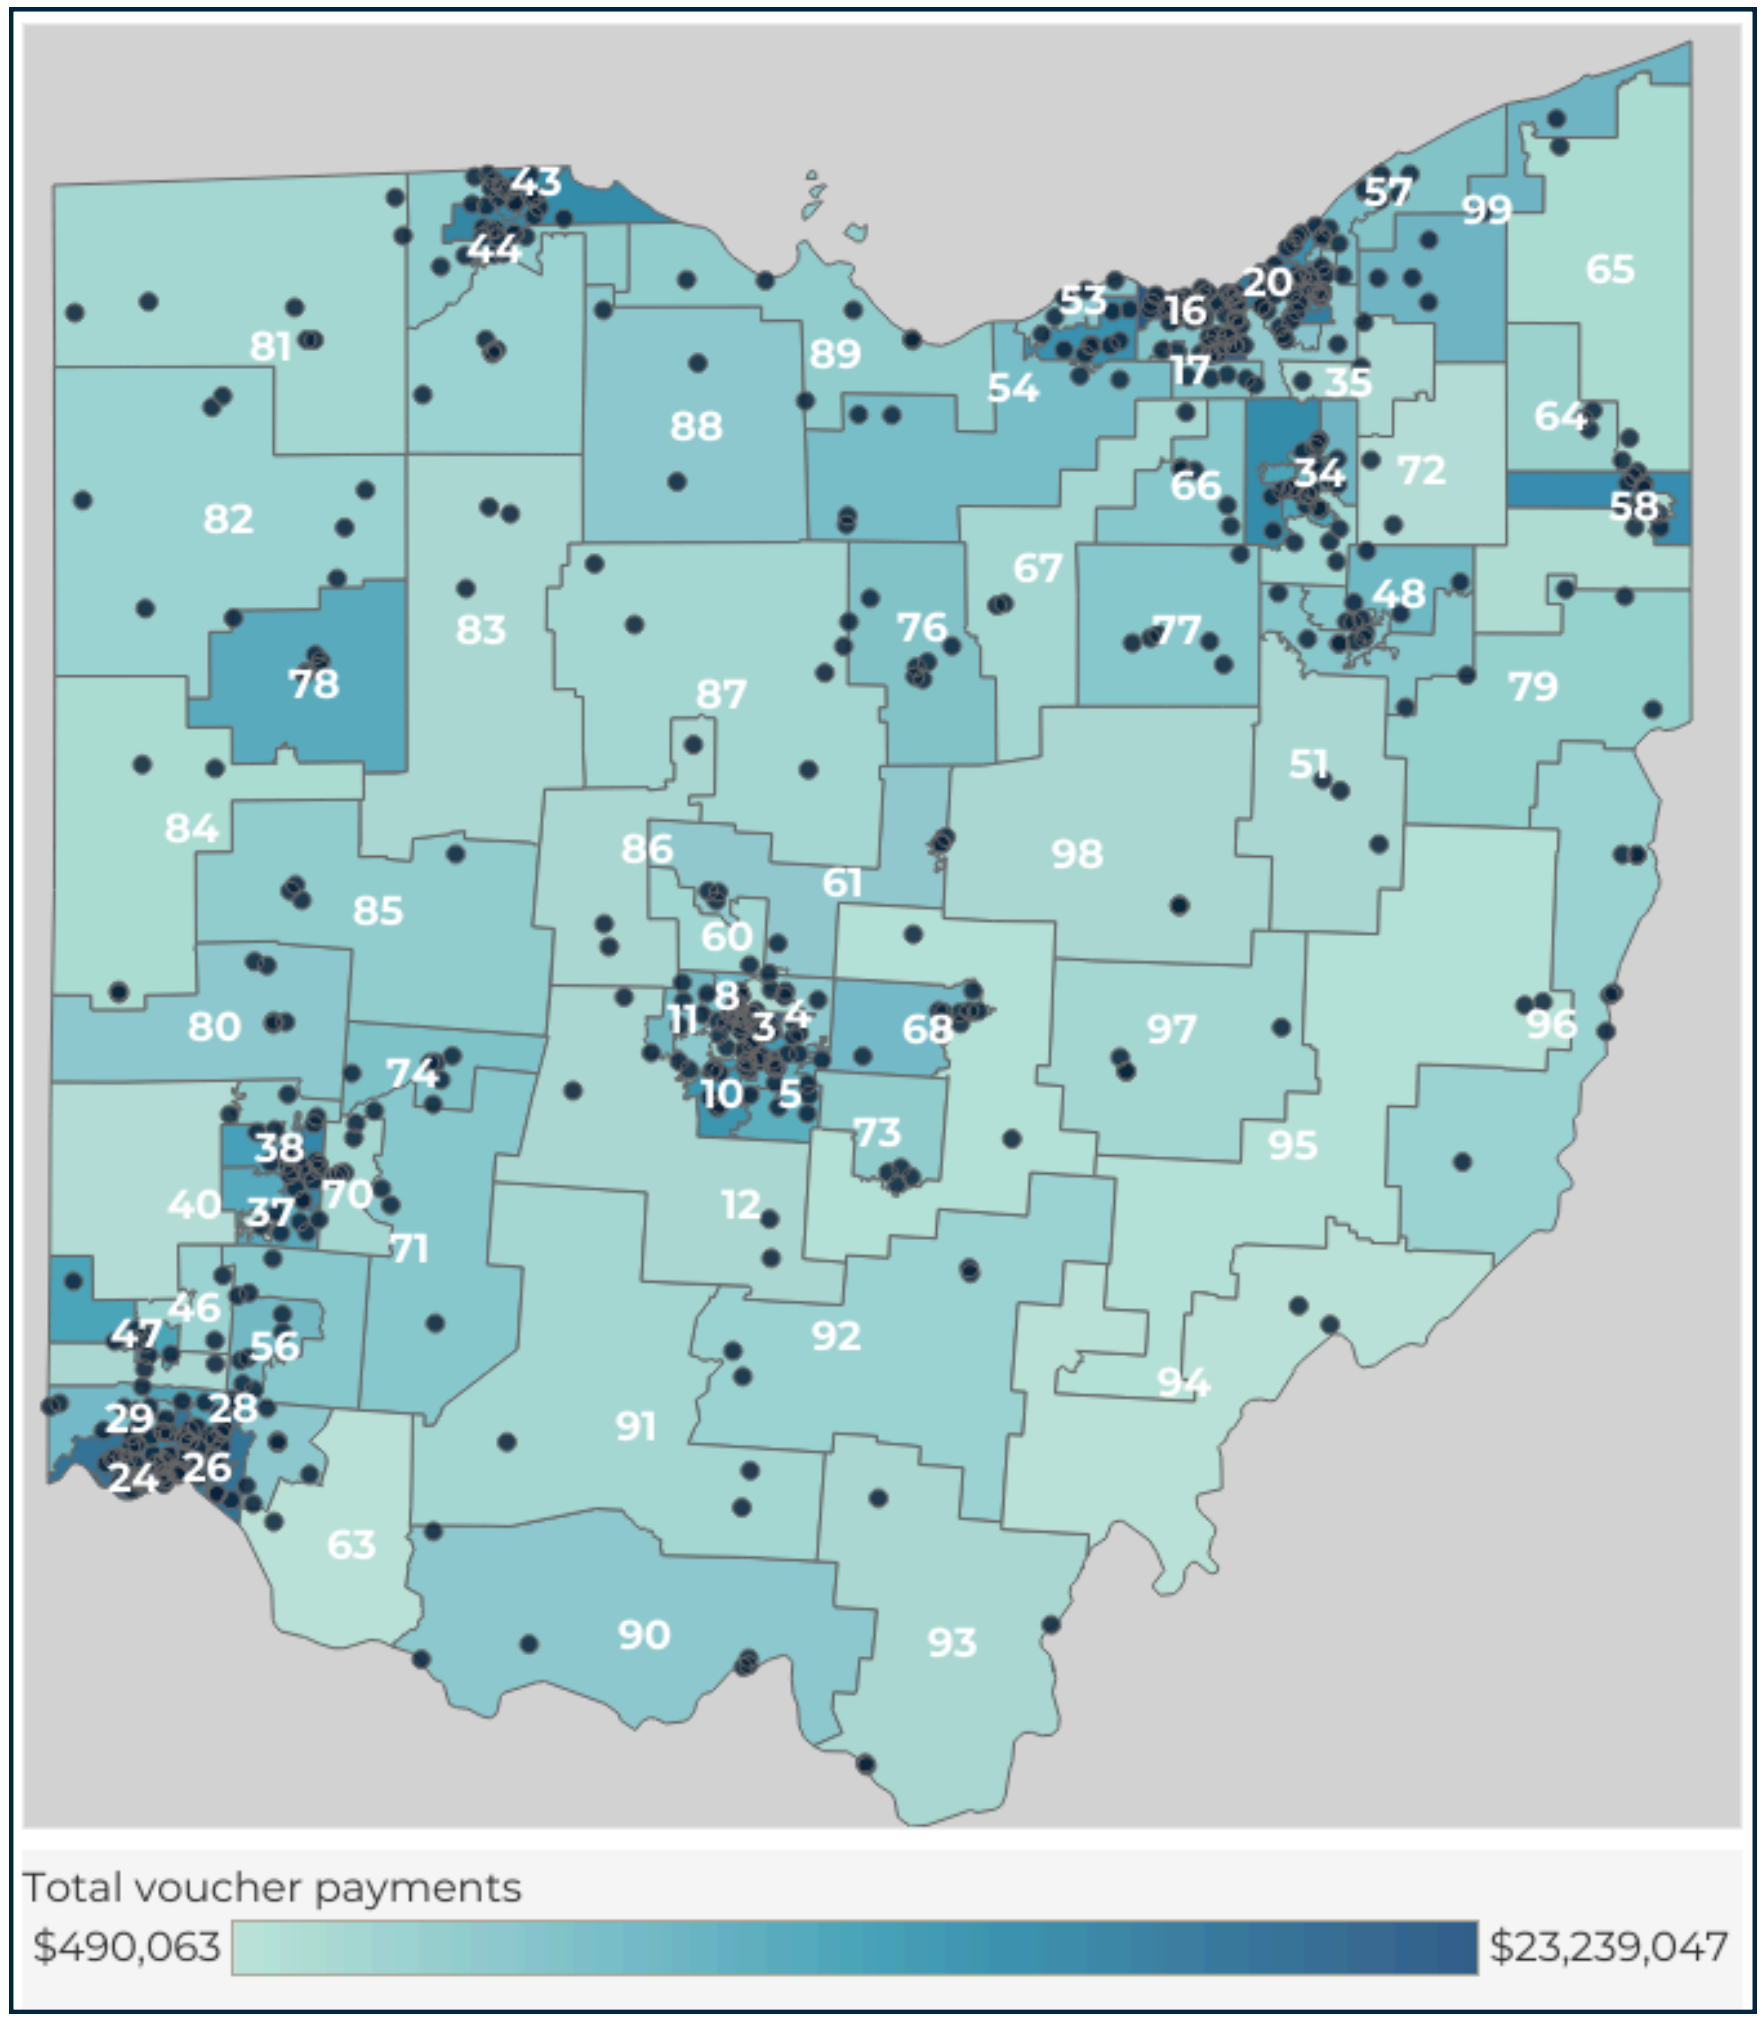
Email them at rep74@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2038

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 75

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 75 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 723

voucher students.

In District 75 there are 29

public schools attended by 15,734

students.

Contact Representative Ghanbari and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

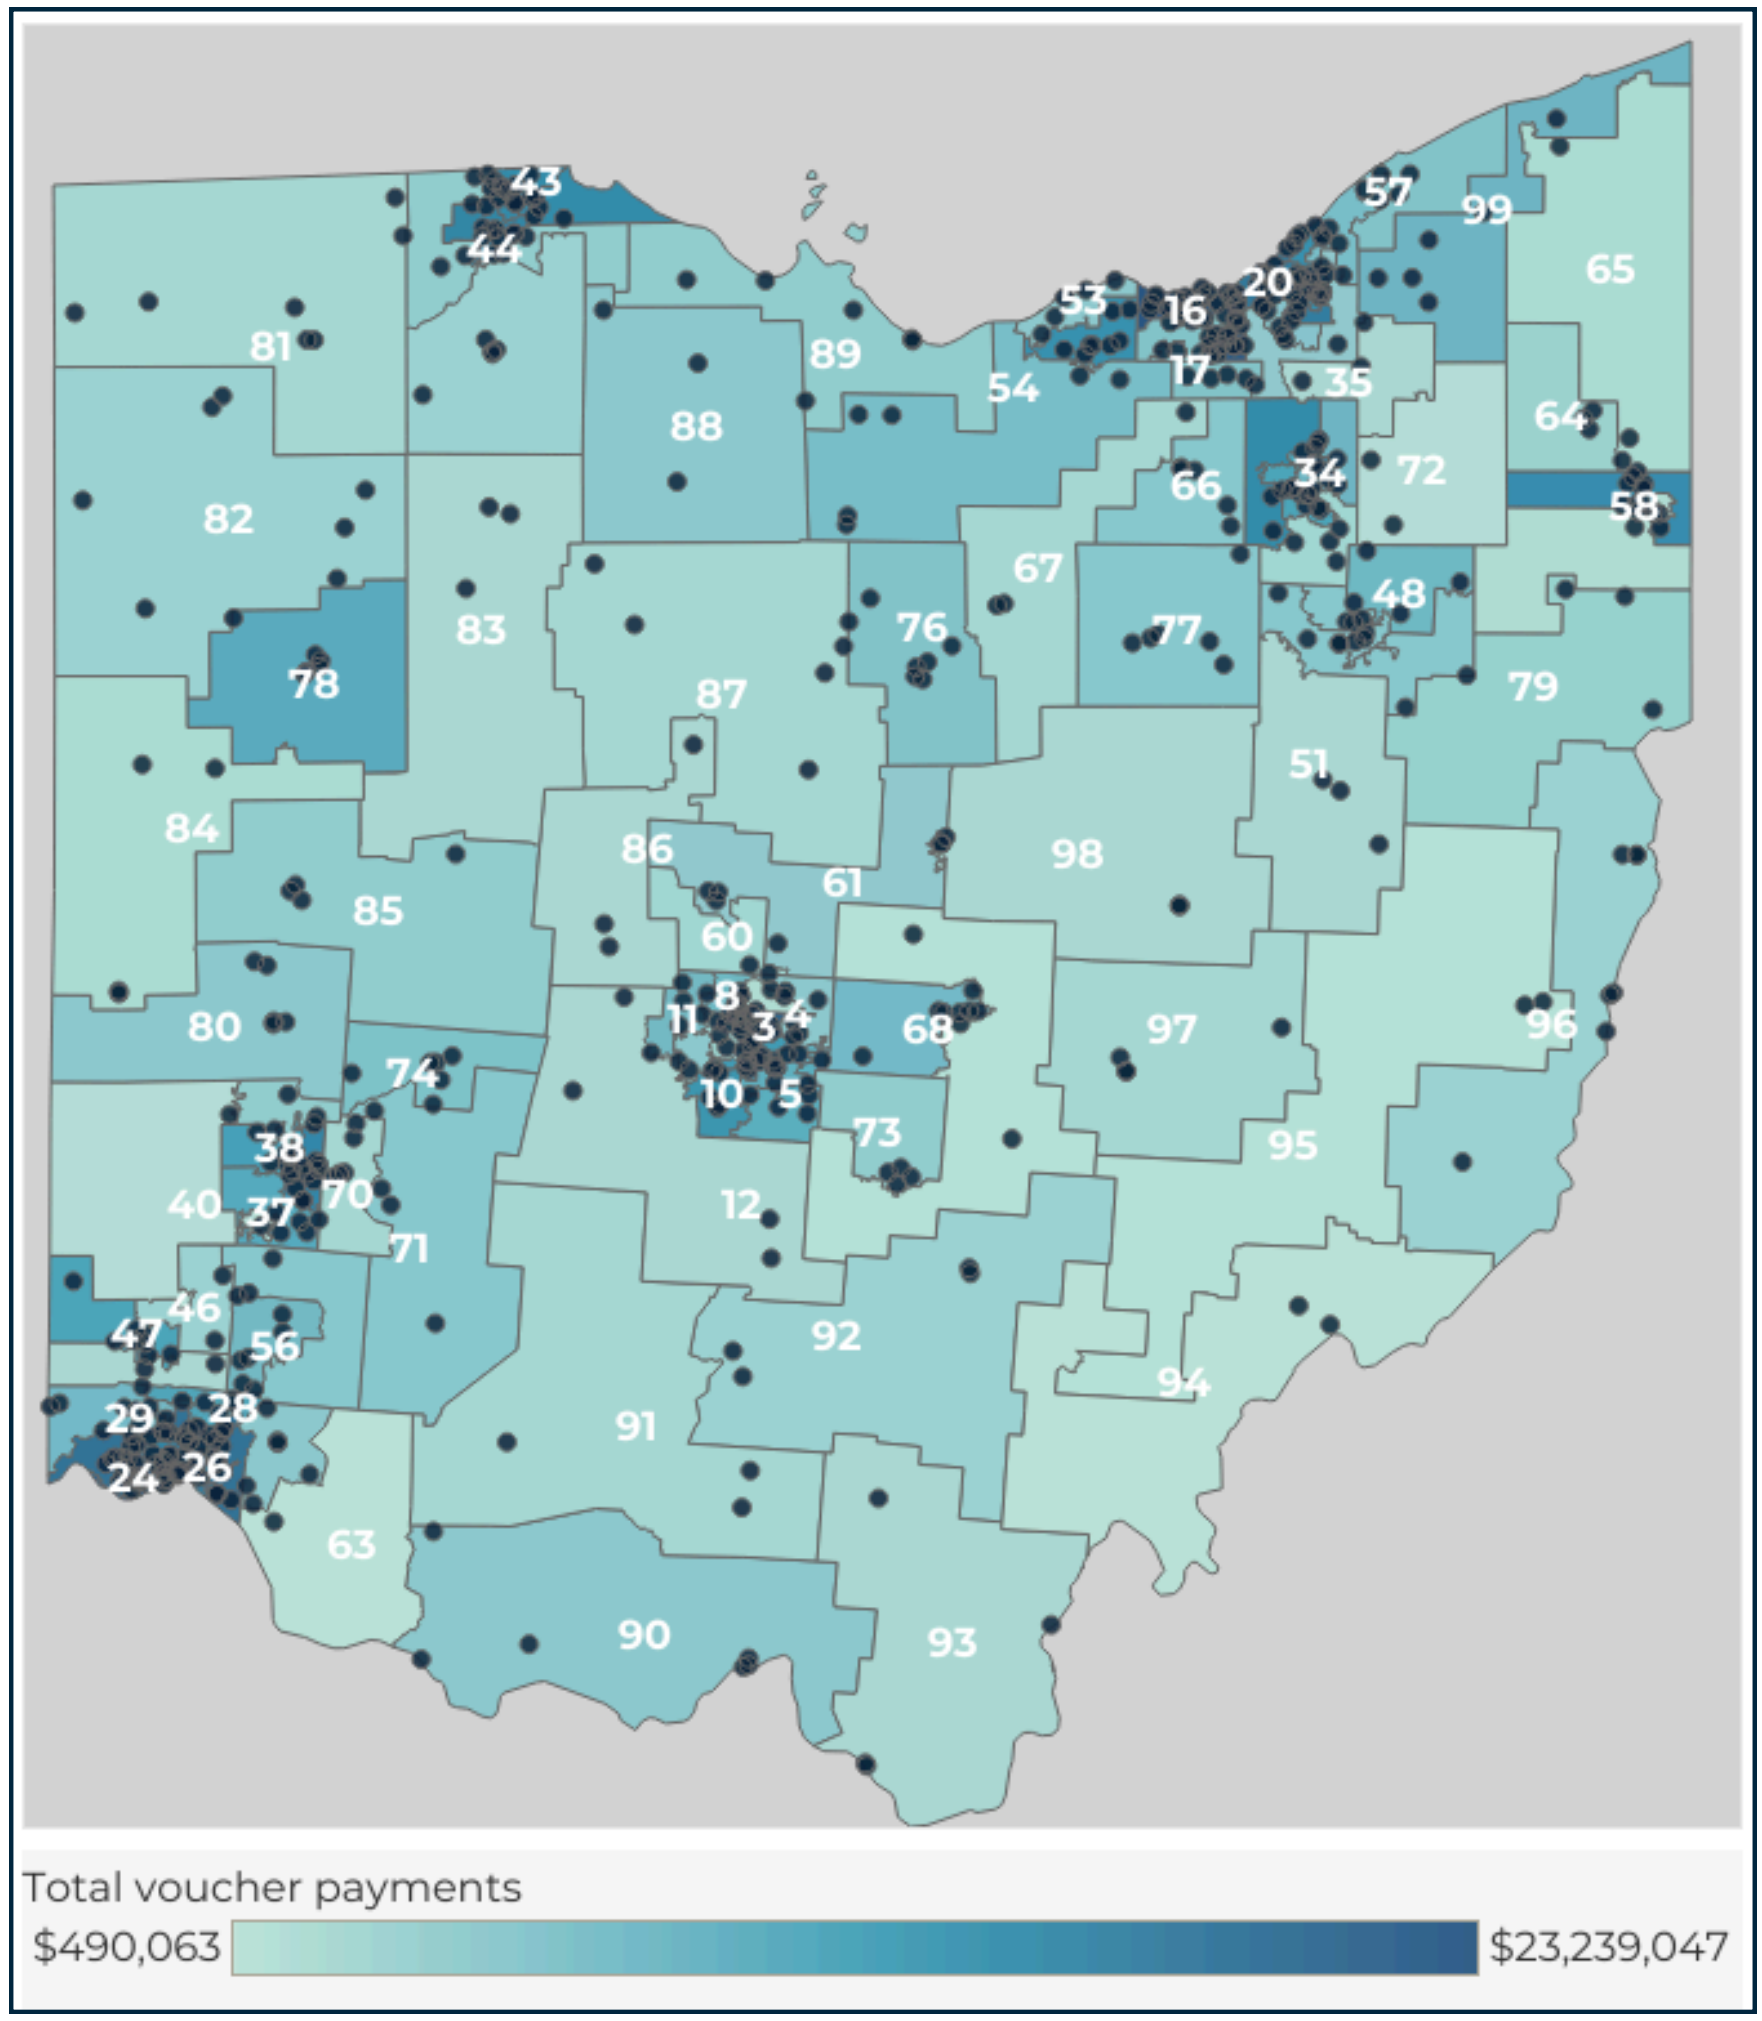
Email them at rep75@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8104

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 76

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 76 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 1,016

voucher students.

In District 76 there are 37

public schools attended by 14,762

students.

Contact Representative John and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

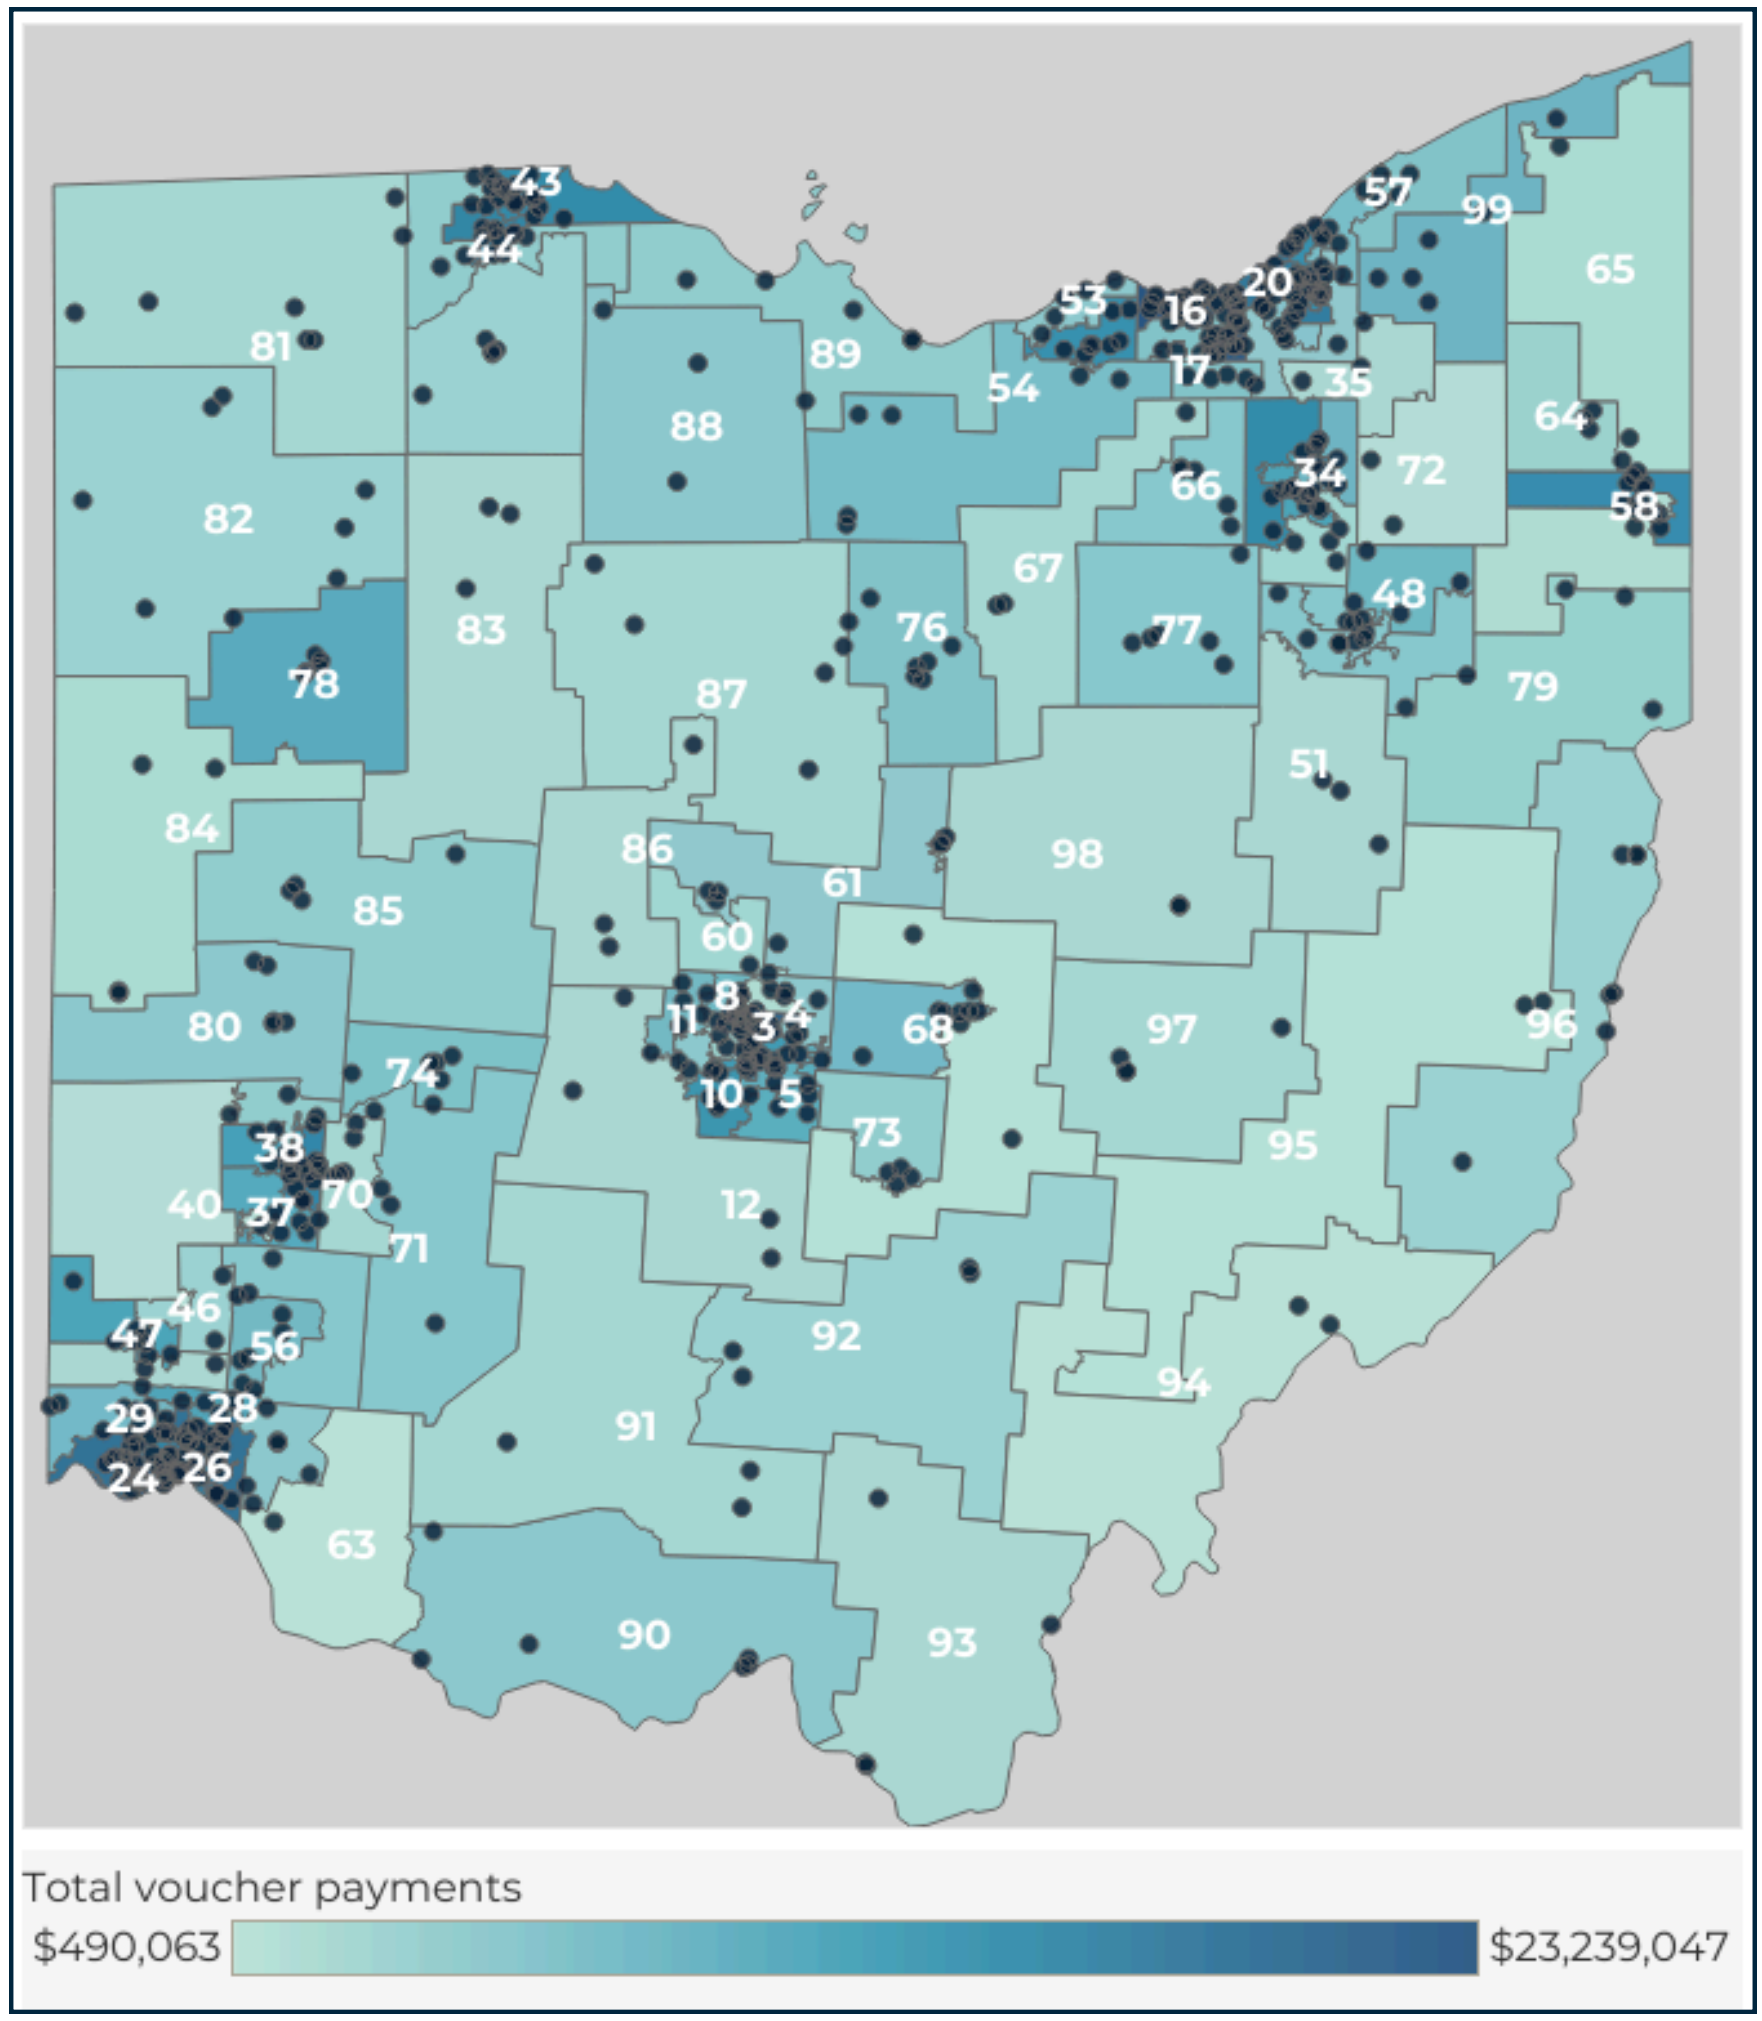
Email them at rep76@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5802

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 77

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 77 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 954

voucher students.

In District 77 there are 38

public schools attended by 13,572

students.

Contact Representative Craig and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

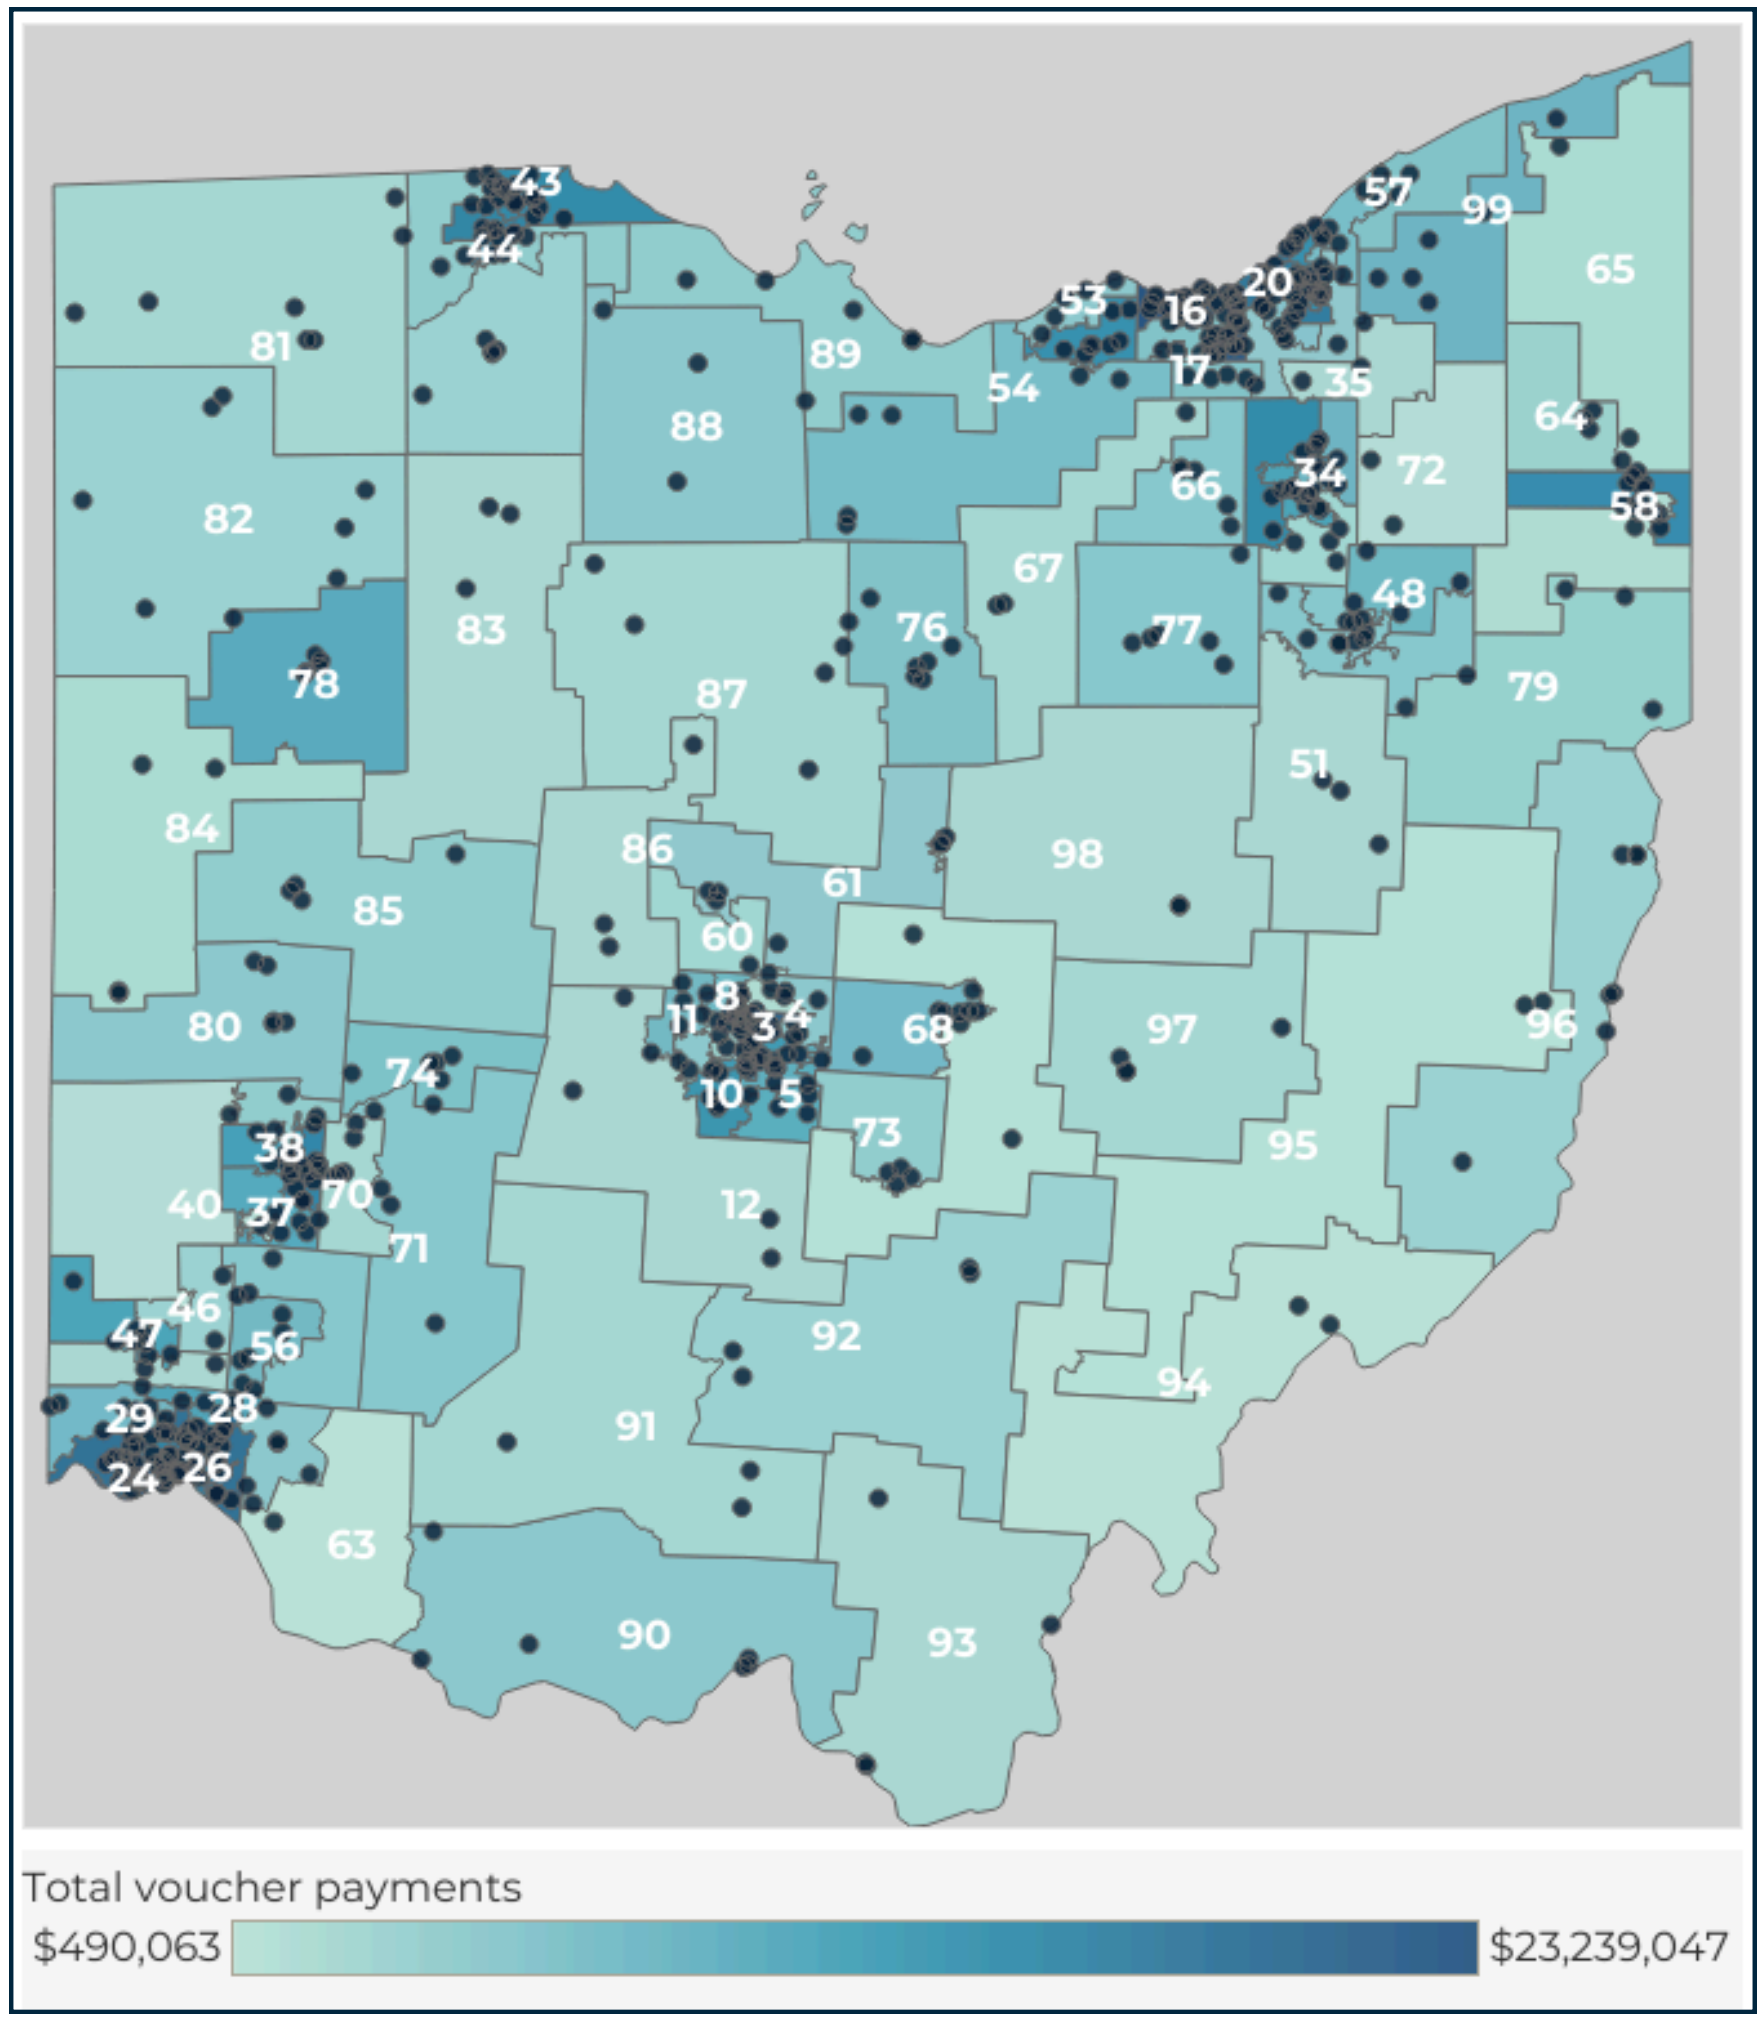
Email them at rep77@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1474

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 78

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 78 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 1,737

voucher students.

In District 78 there are 35

public schools attended by 14,161

students.

Contact Representative Huffman and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

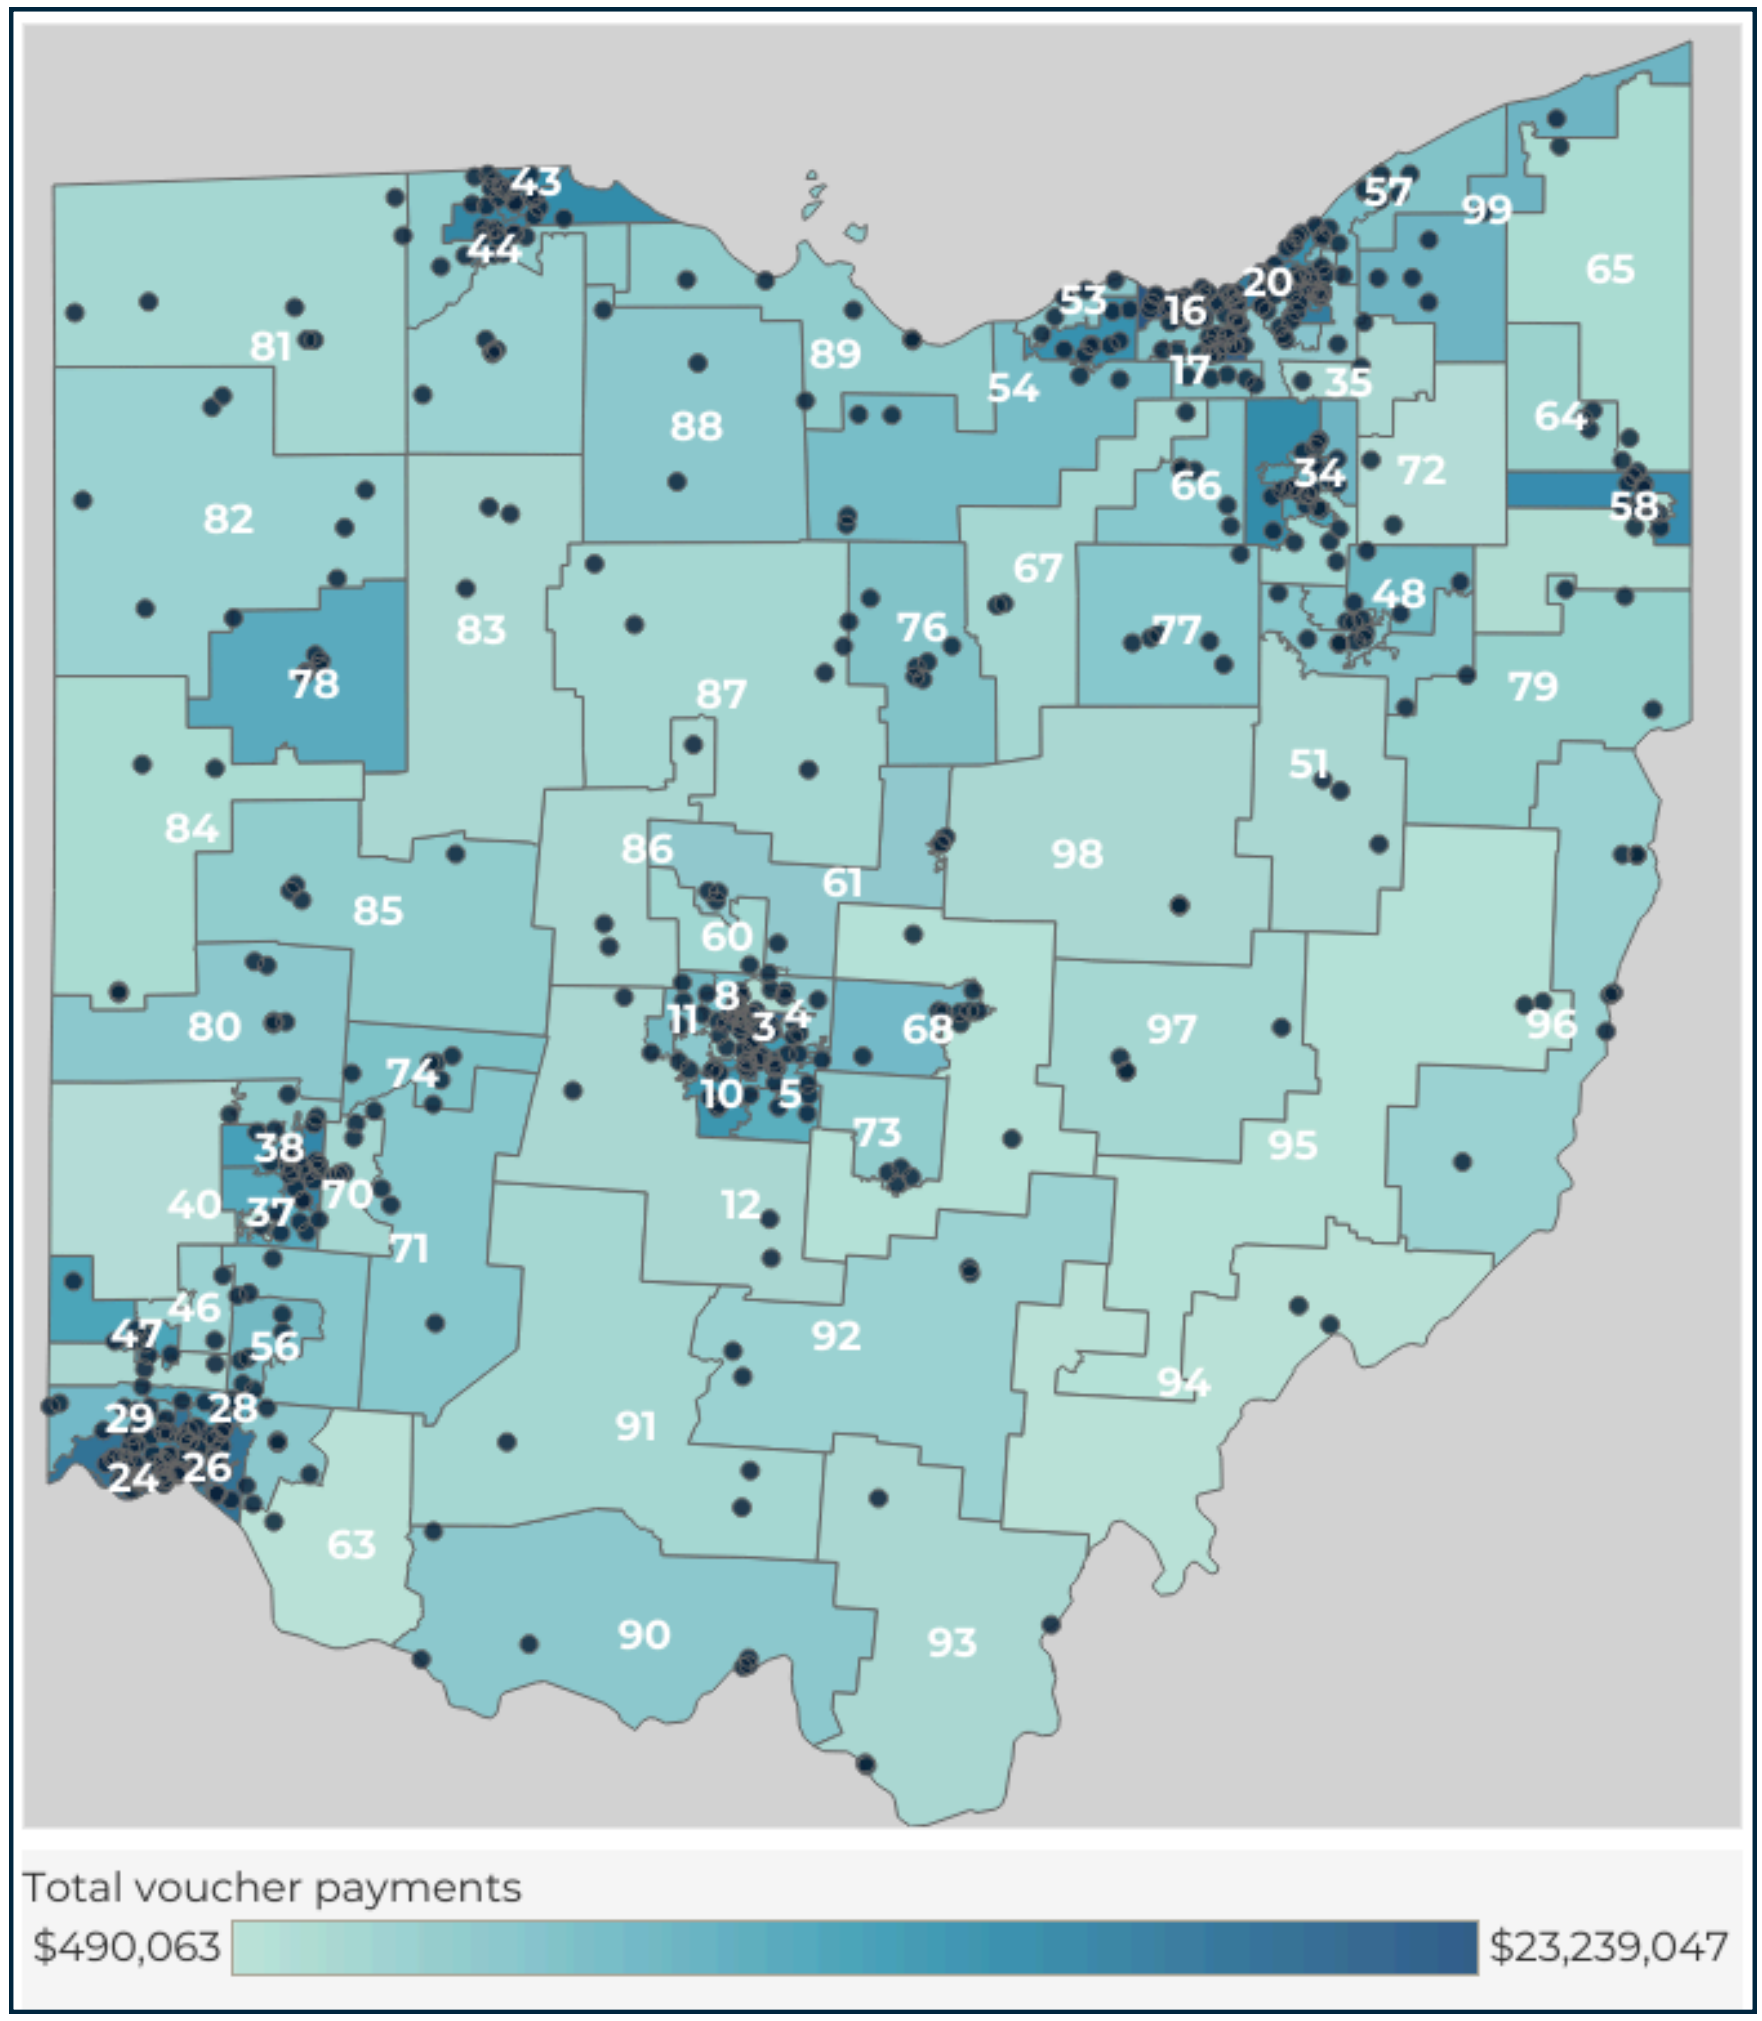
Email them at rep78@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-6344

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 79

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 79 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 611

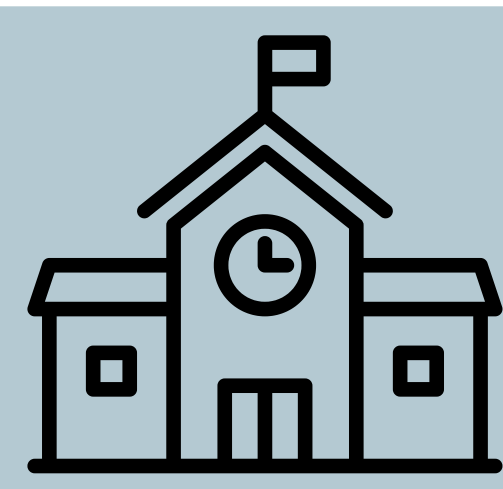
voucher students.



In District 79 there are

41

public schools attended by 14,808

students.

Contact Representative Robb Blasdel and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

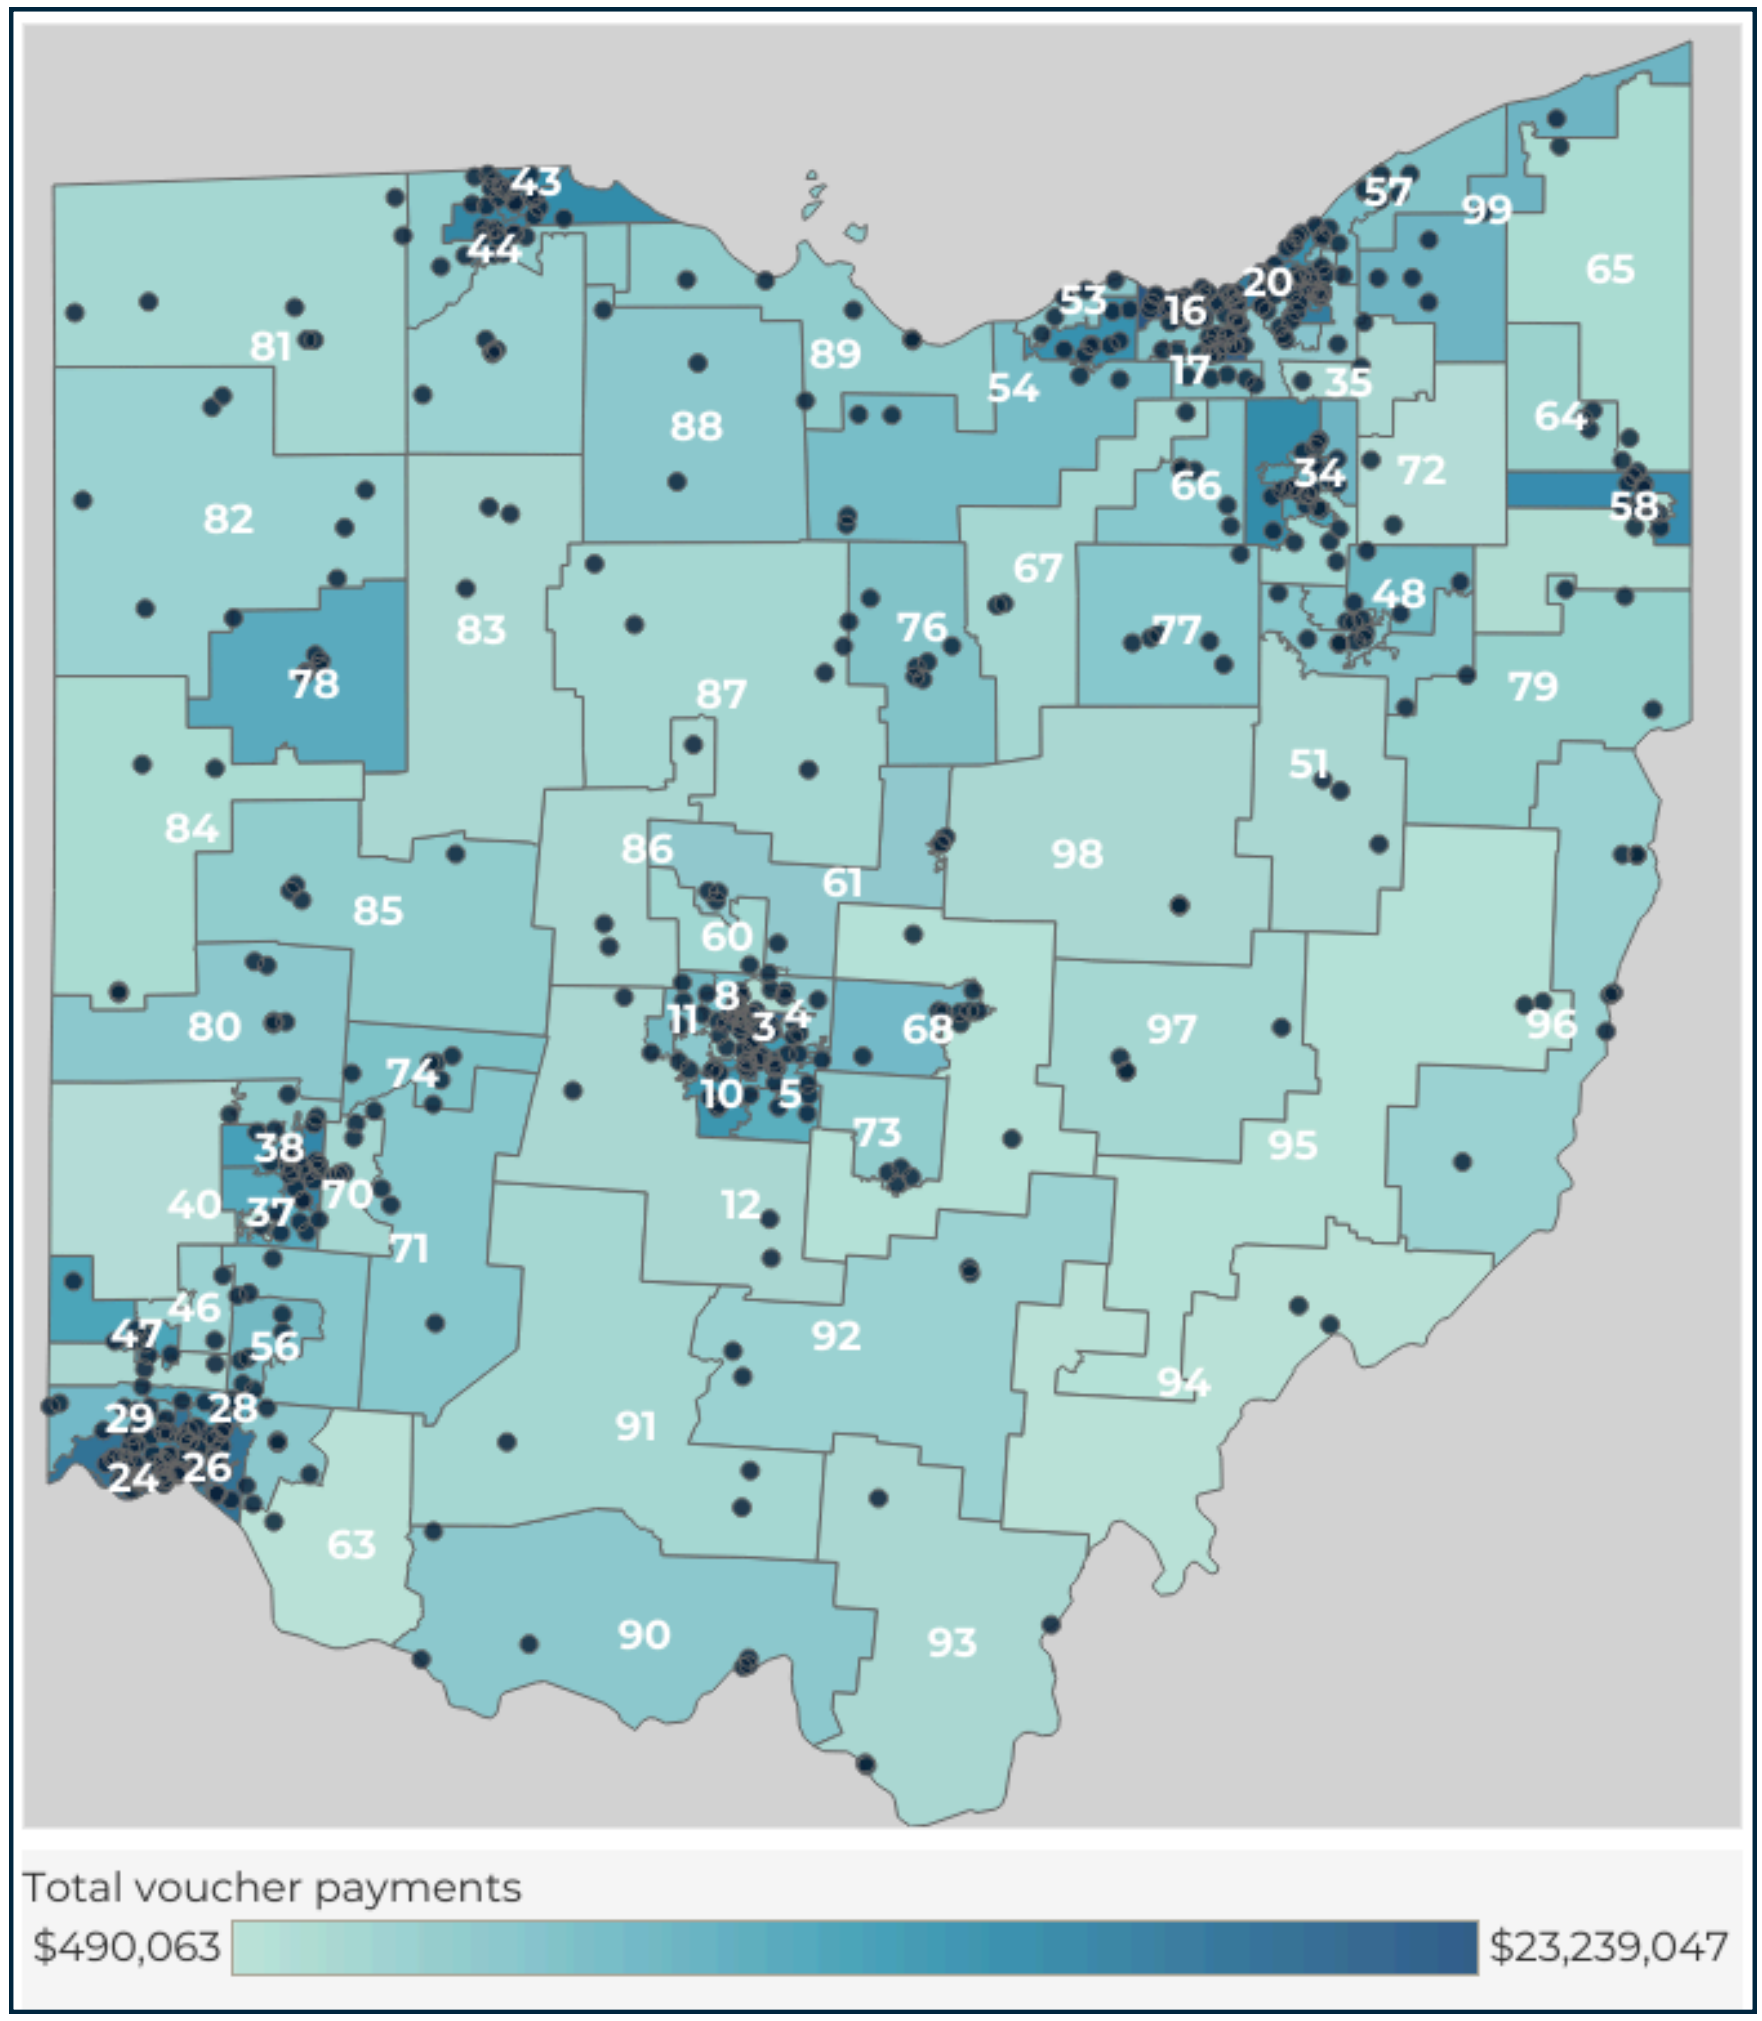
Email them at rep79@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8022

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 8

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 8 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 1,695

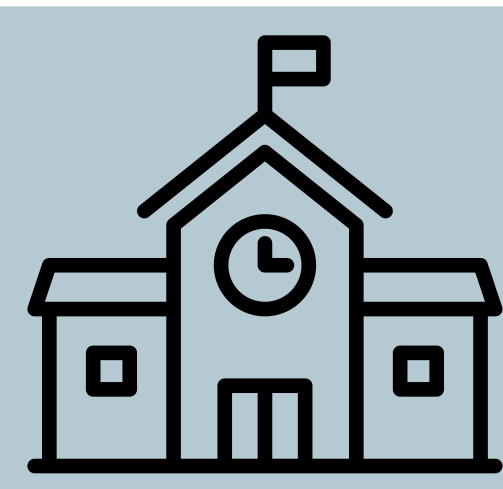
voucher students.



In District 8 there are

25

public schools attended by 13,801

students.

Contact Representative Somani and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

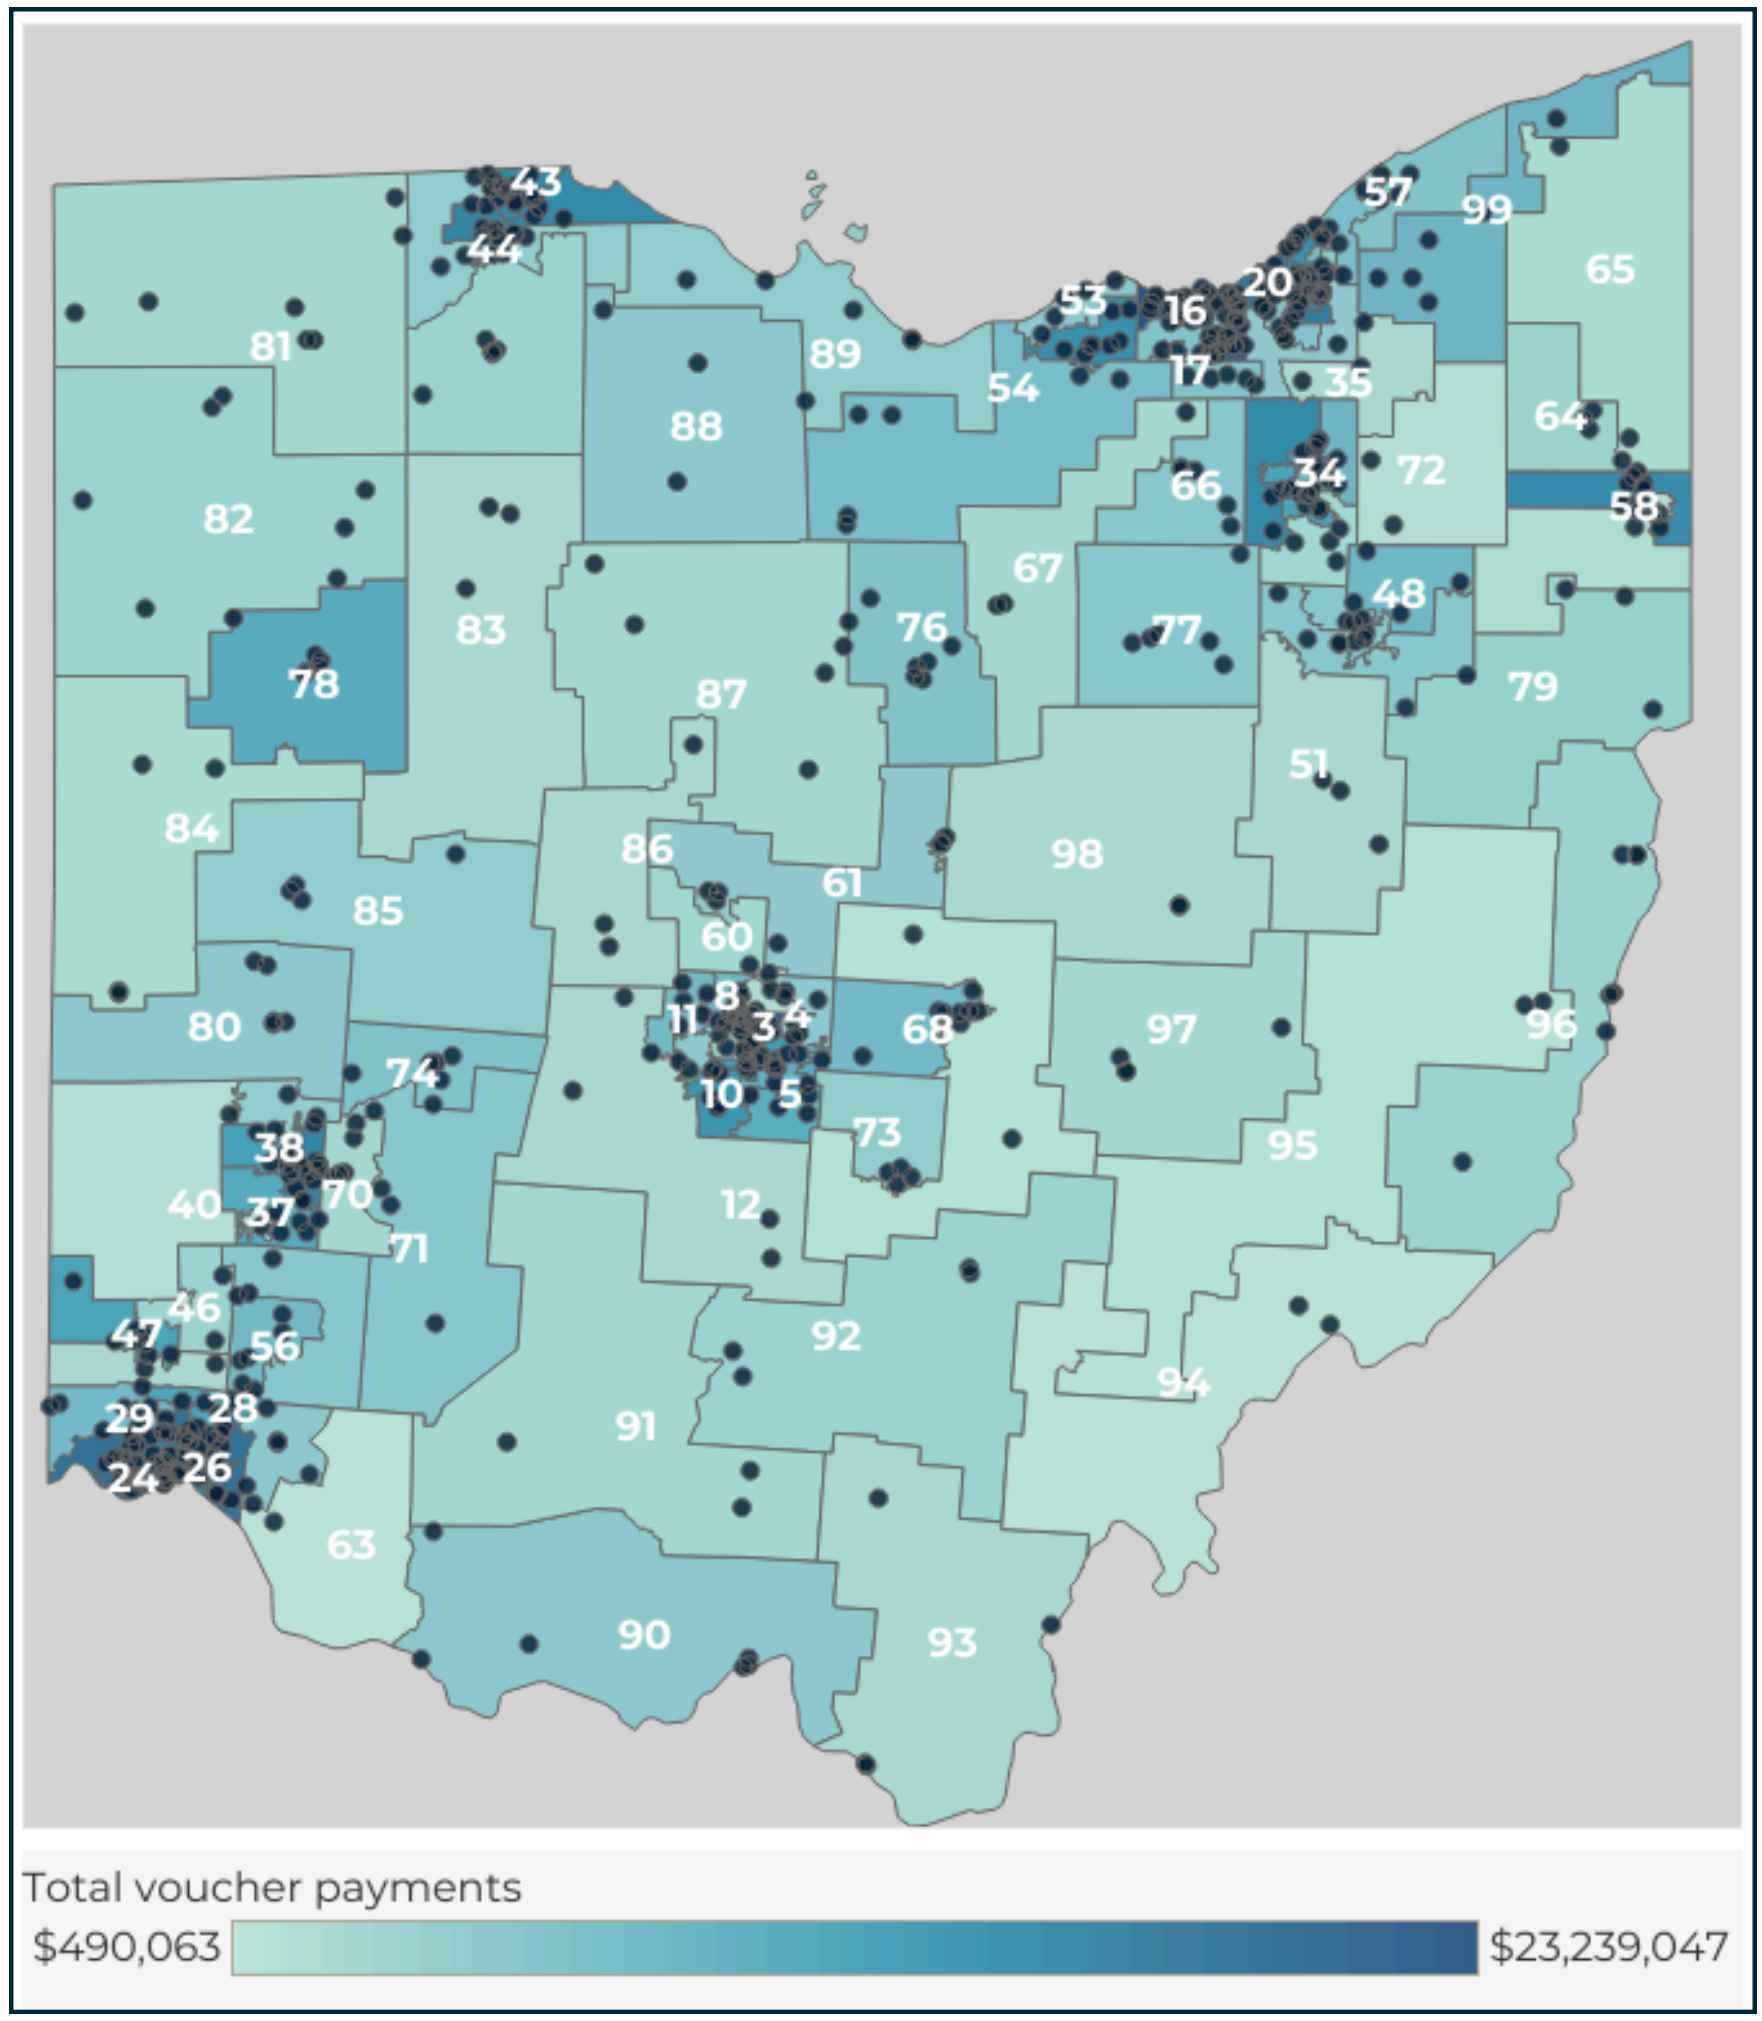
Email them at rep08@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-5358

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 80

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 80 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 918

voucher students.

In District 80 there are 42

public schools attended by 17,948

students.

Contact Representative Newman and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

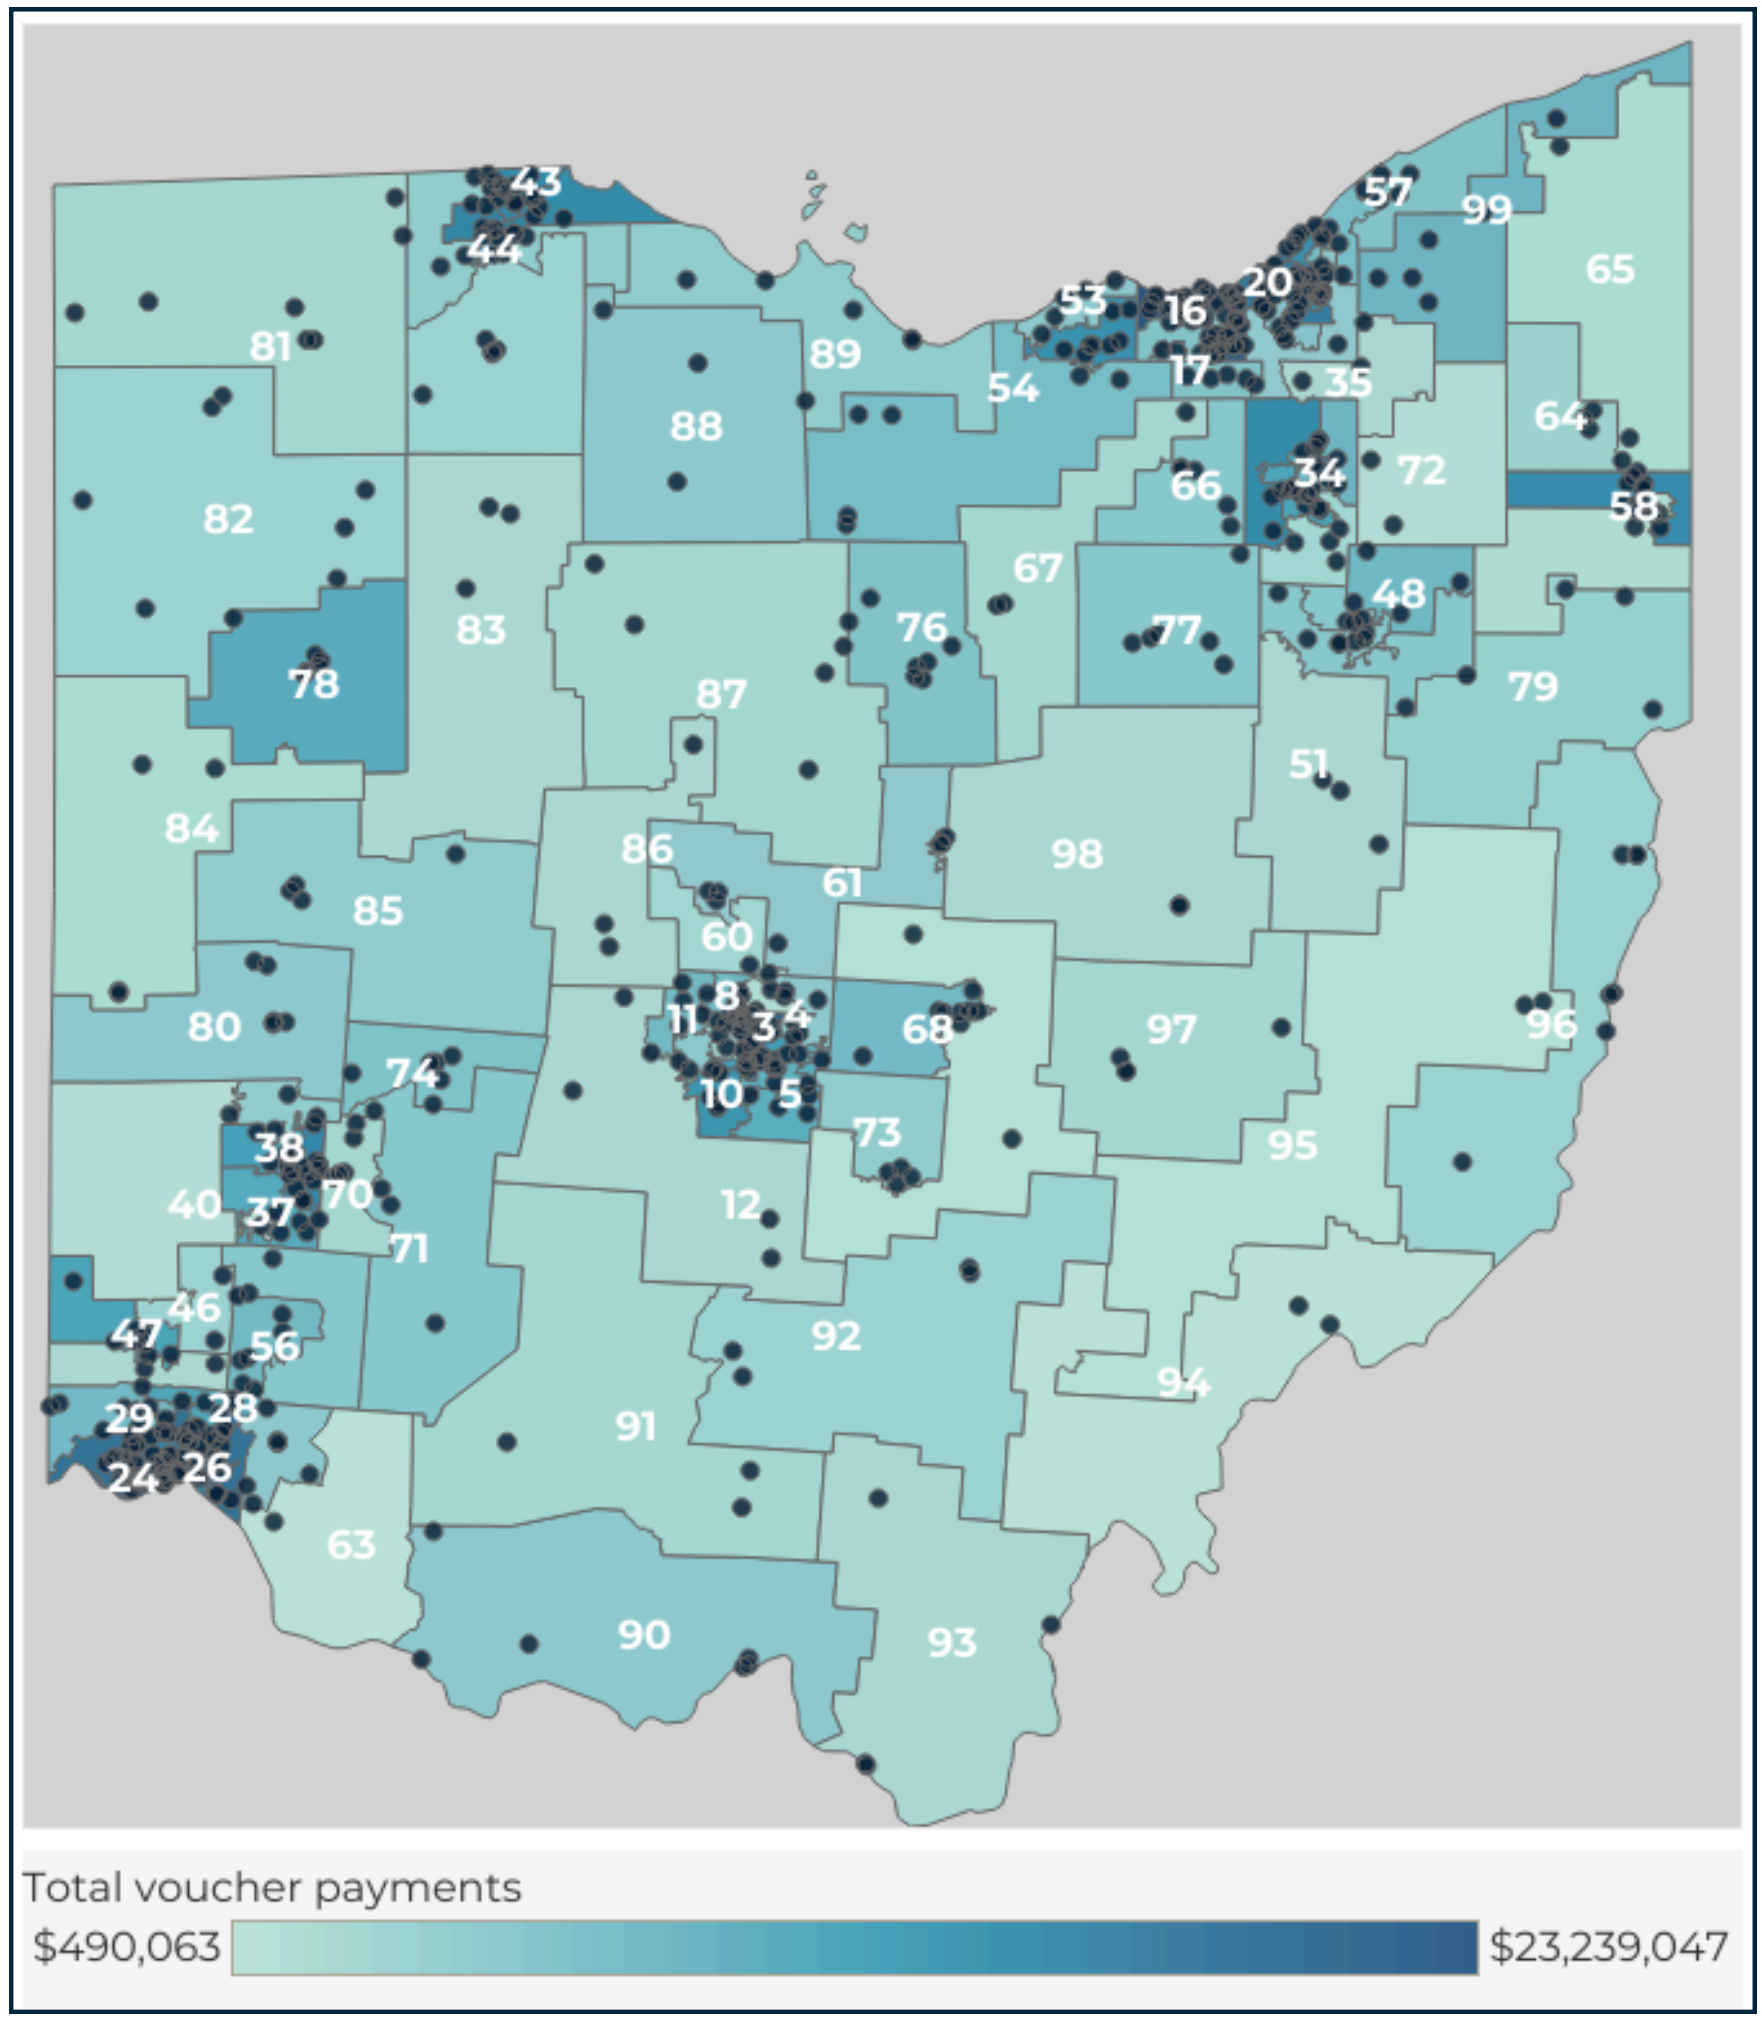
Email them at Rep80@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8114

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 81

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 81 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 443

voucher students.

In District 81 there are 50

public schools attended by 17,597

students.

Contact Representative Hoops and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

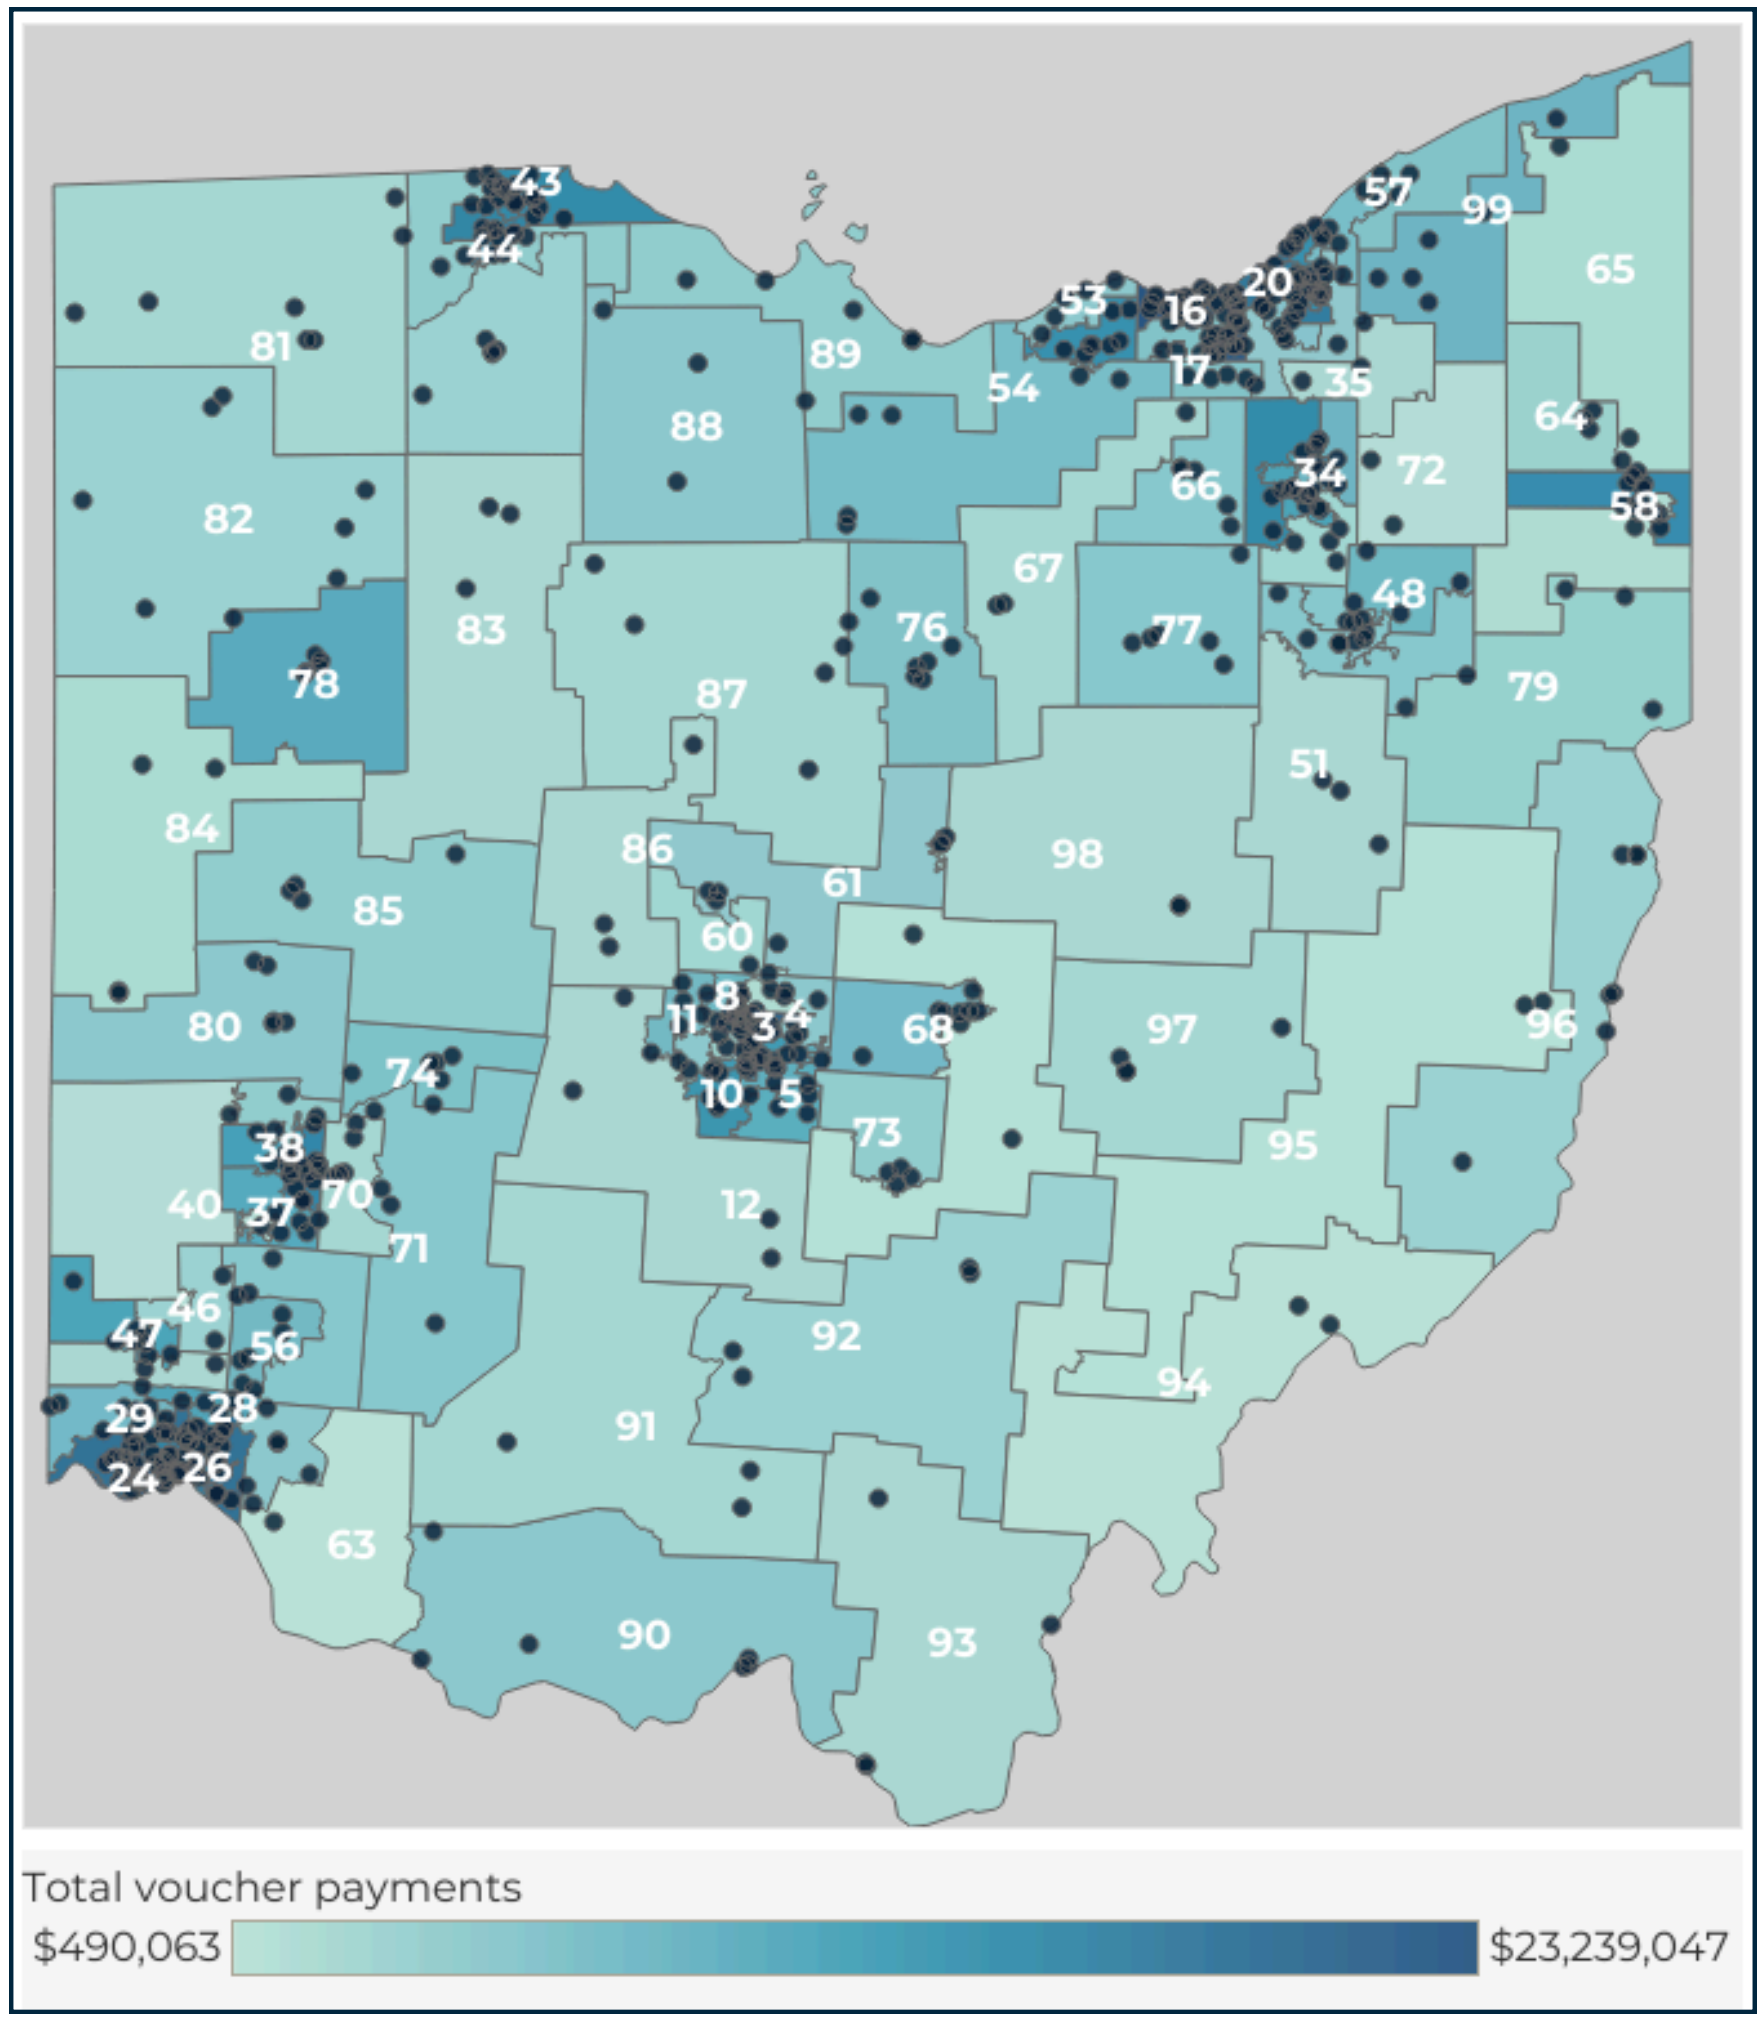
Email them at rep81@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3760

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 82

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 82 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 677

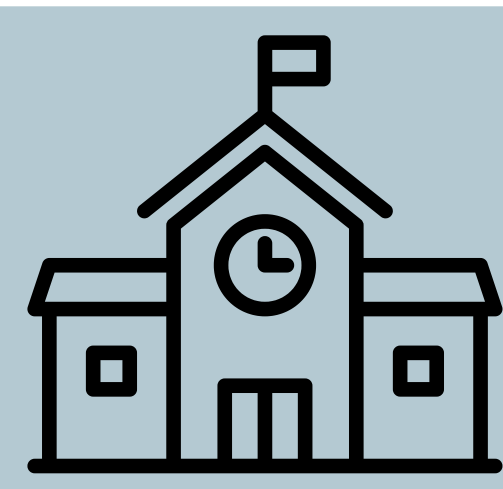
voucher students.



In District 82 there are

52

public schools attended by 16,478

students.

Contact Representative Klopfenstein and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

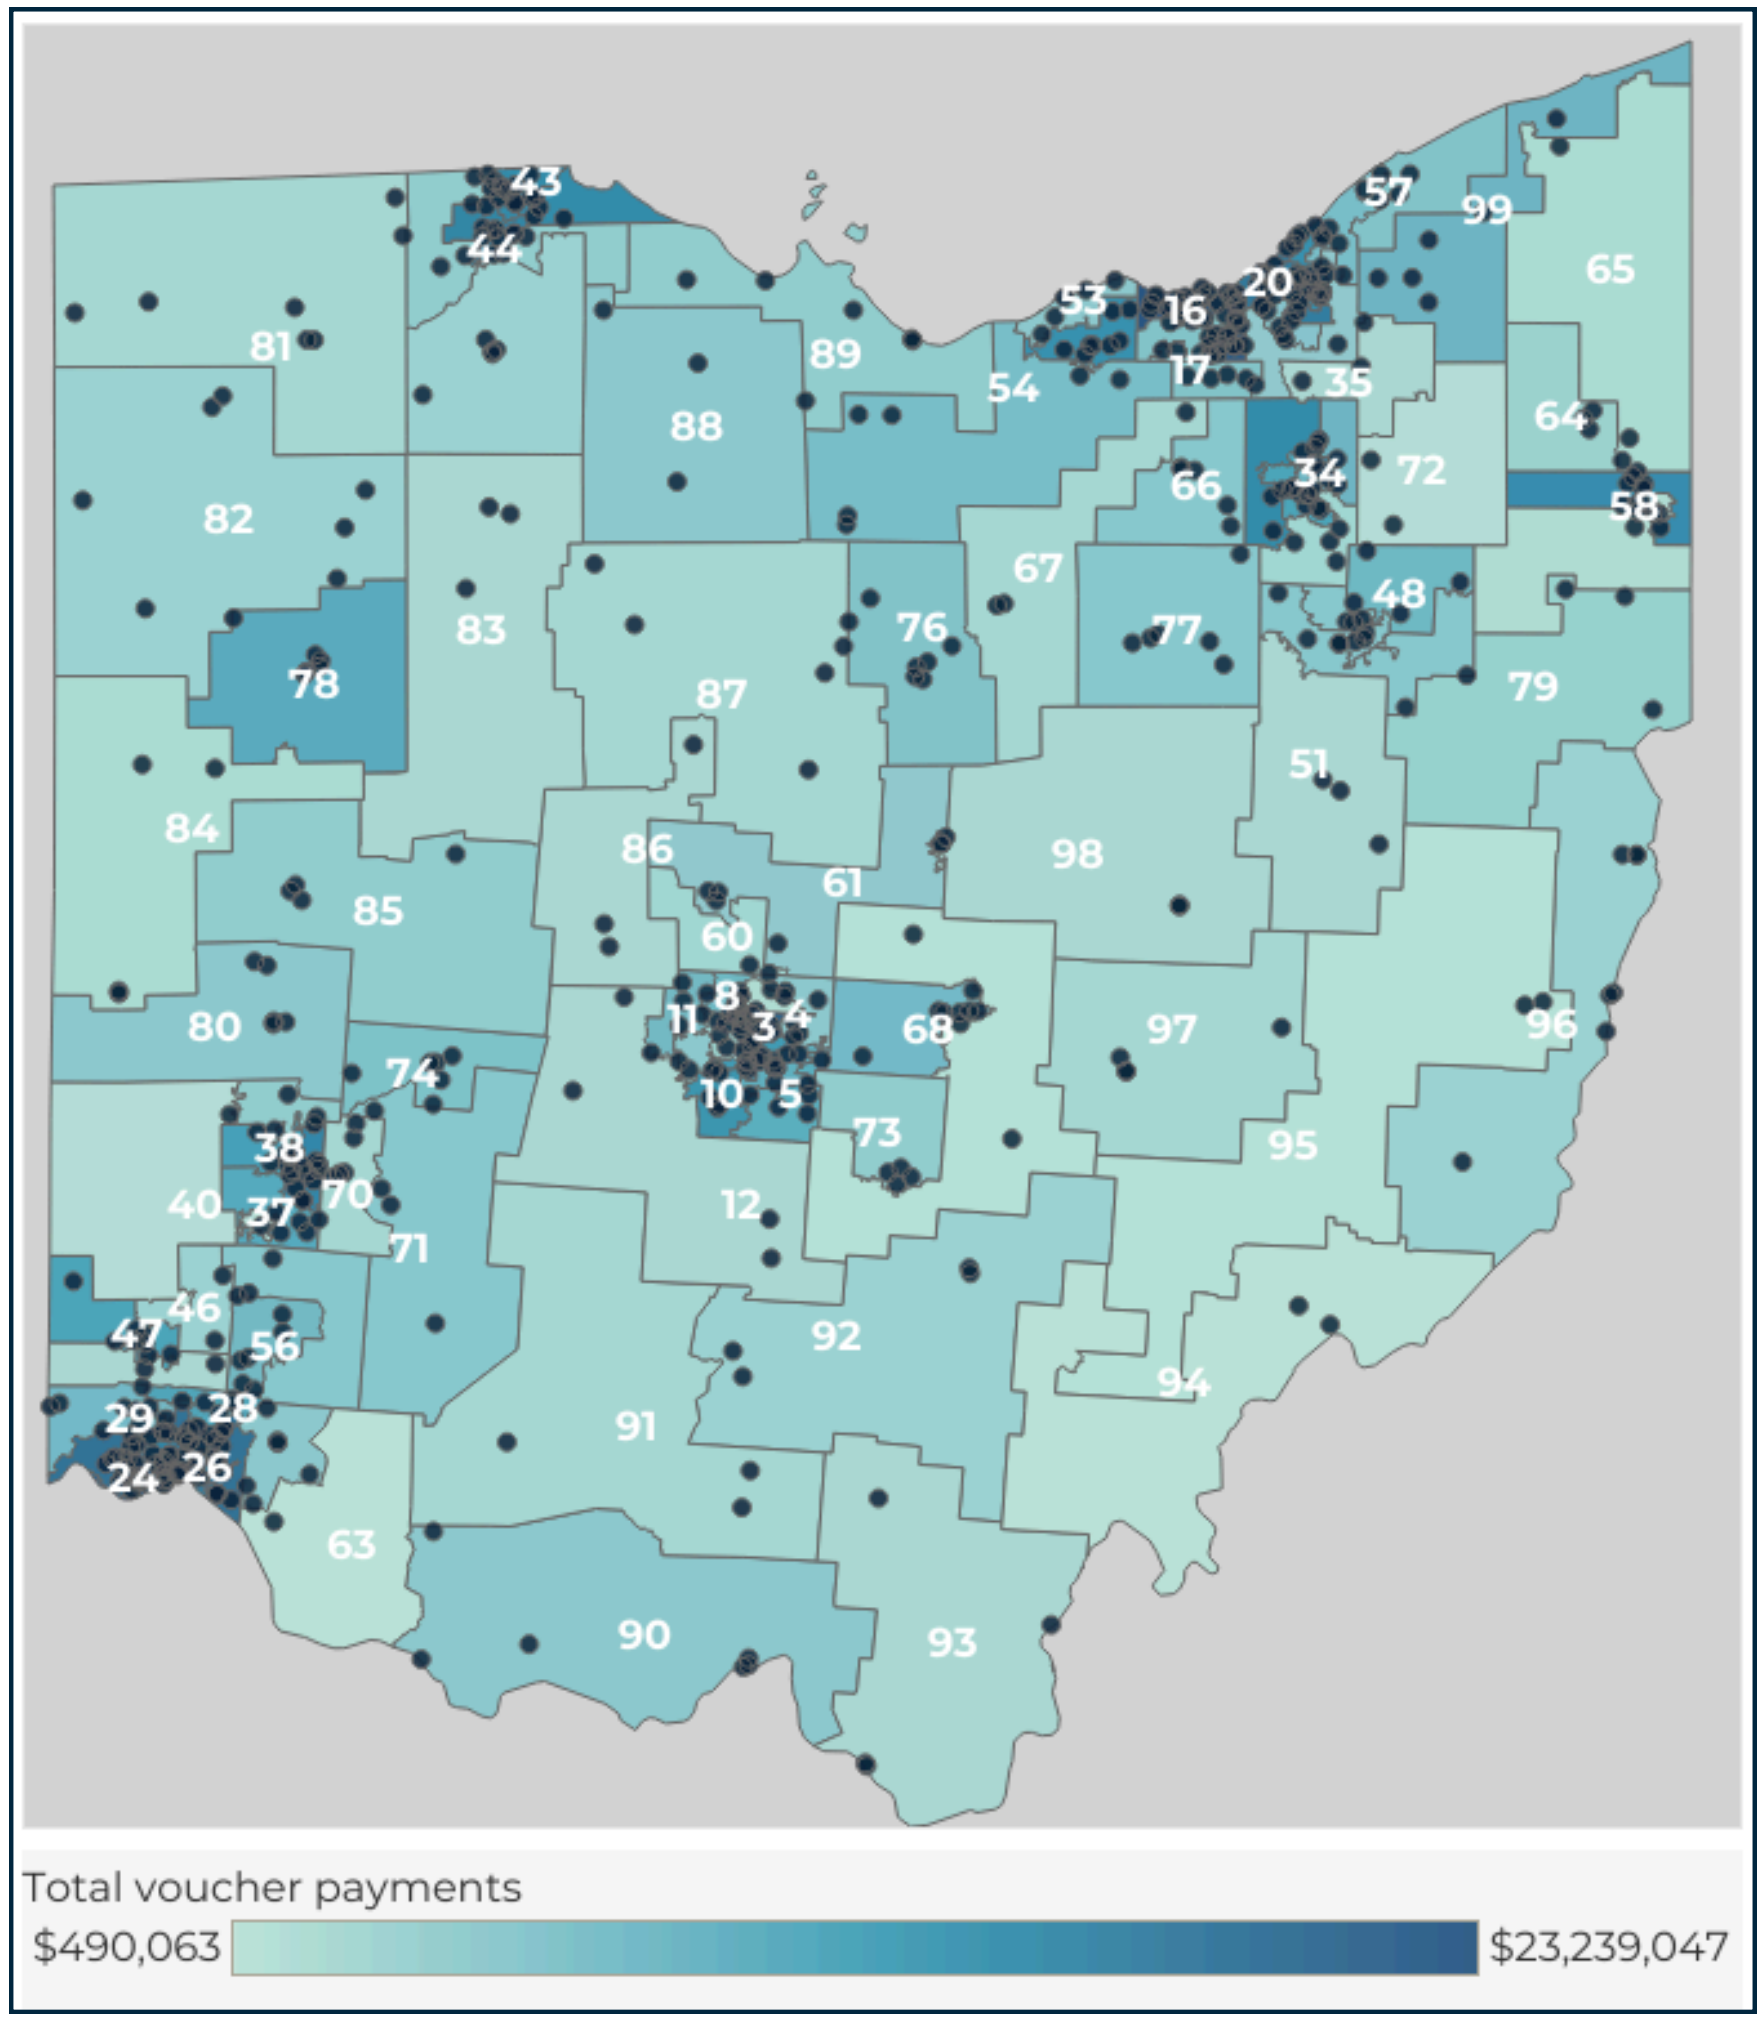
Email them at rep82@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-5091

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 83

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 83 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 468

voucher students.

In District 83 there are

52

public schools attended by 18,401

students.

Contact Representative Mathews and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

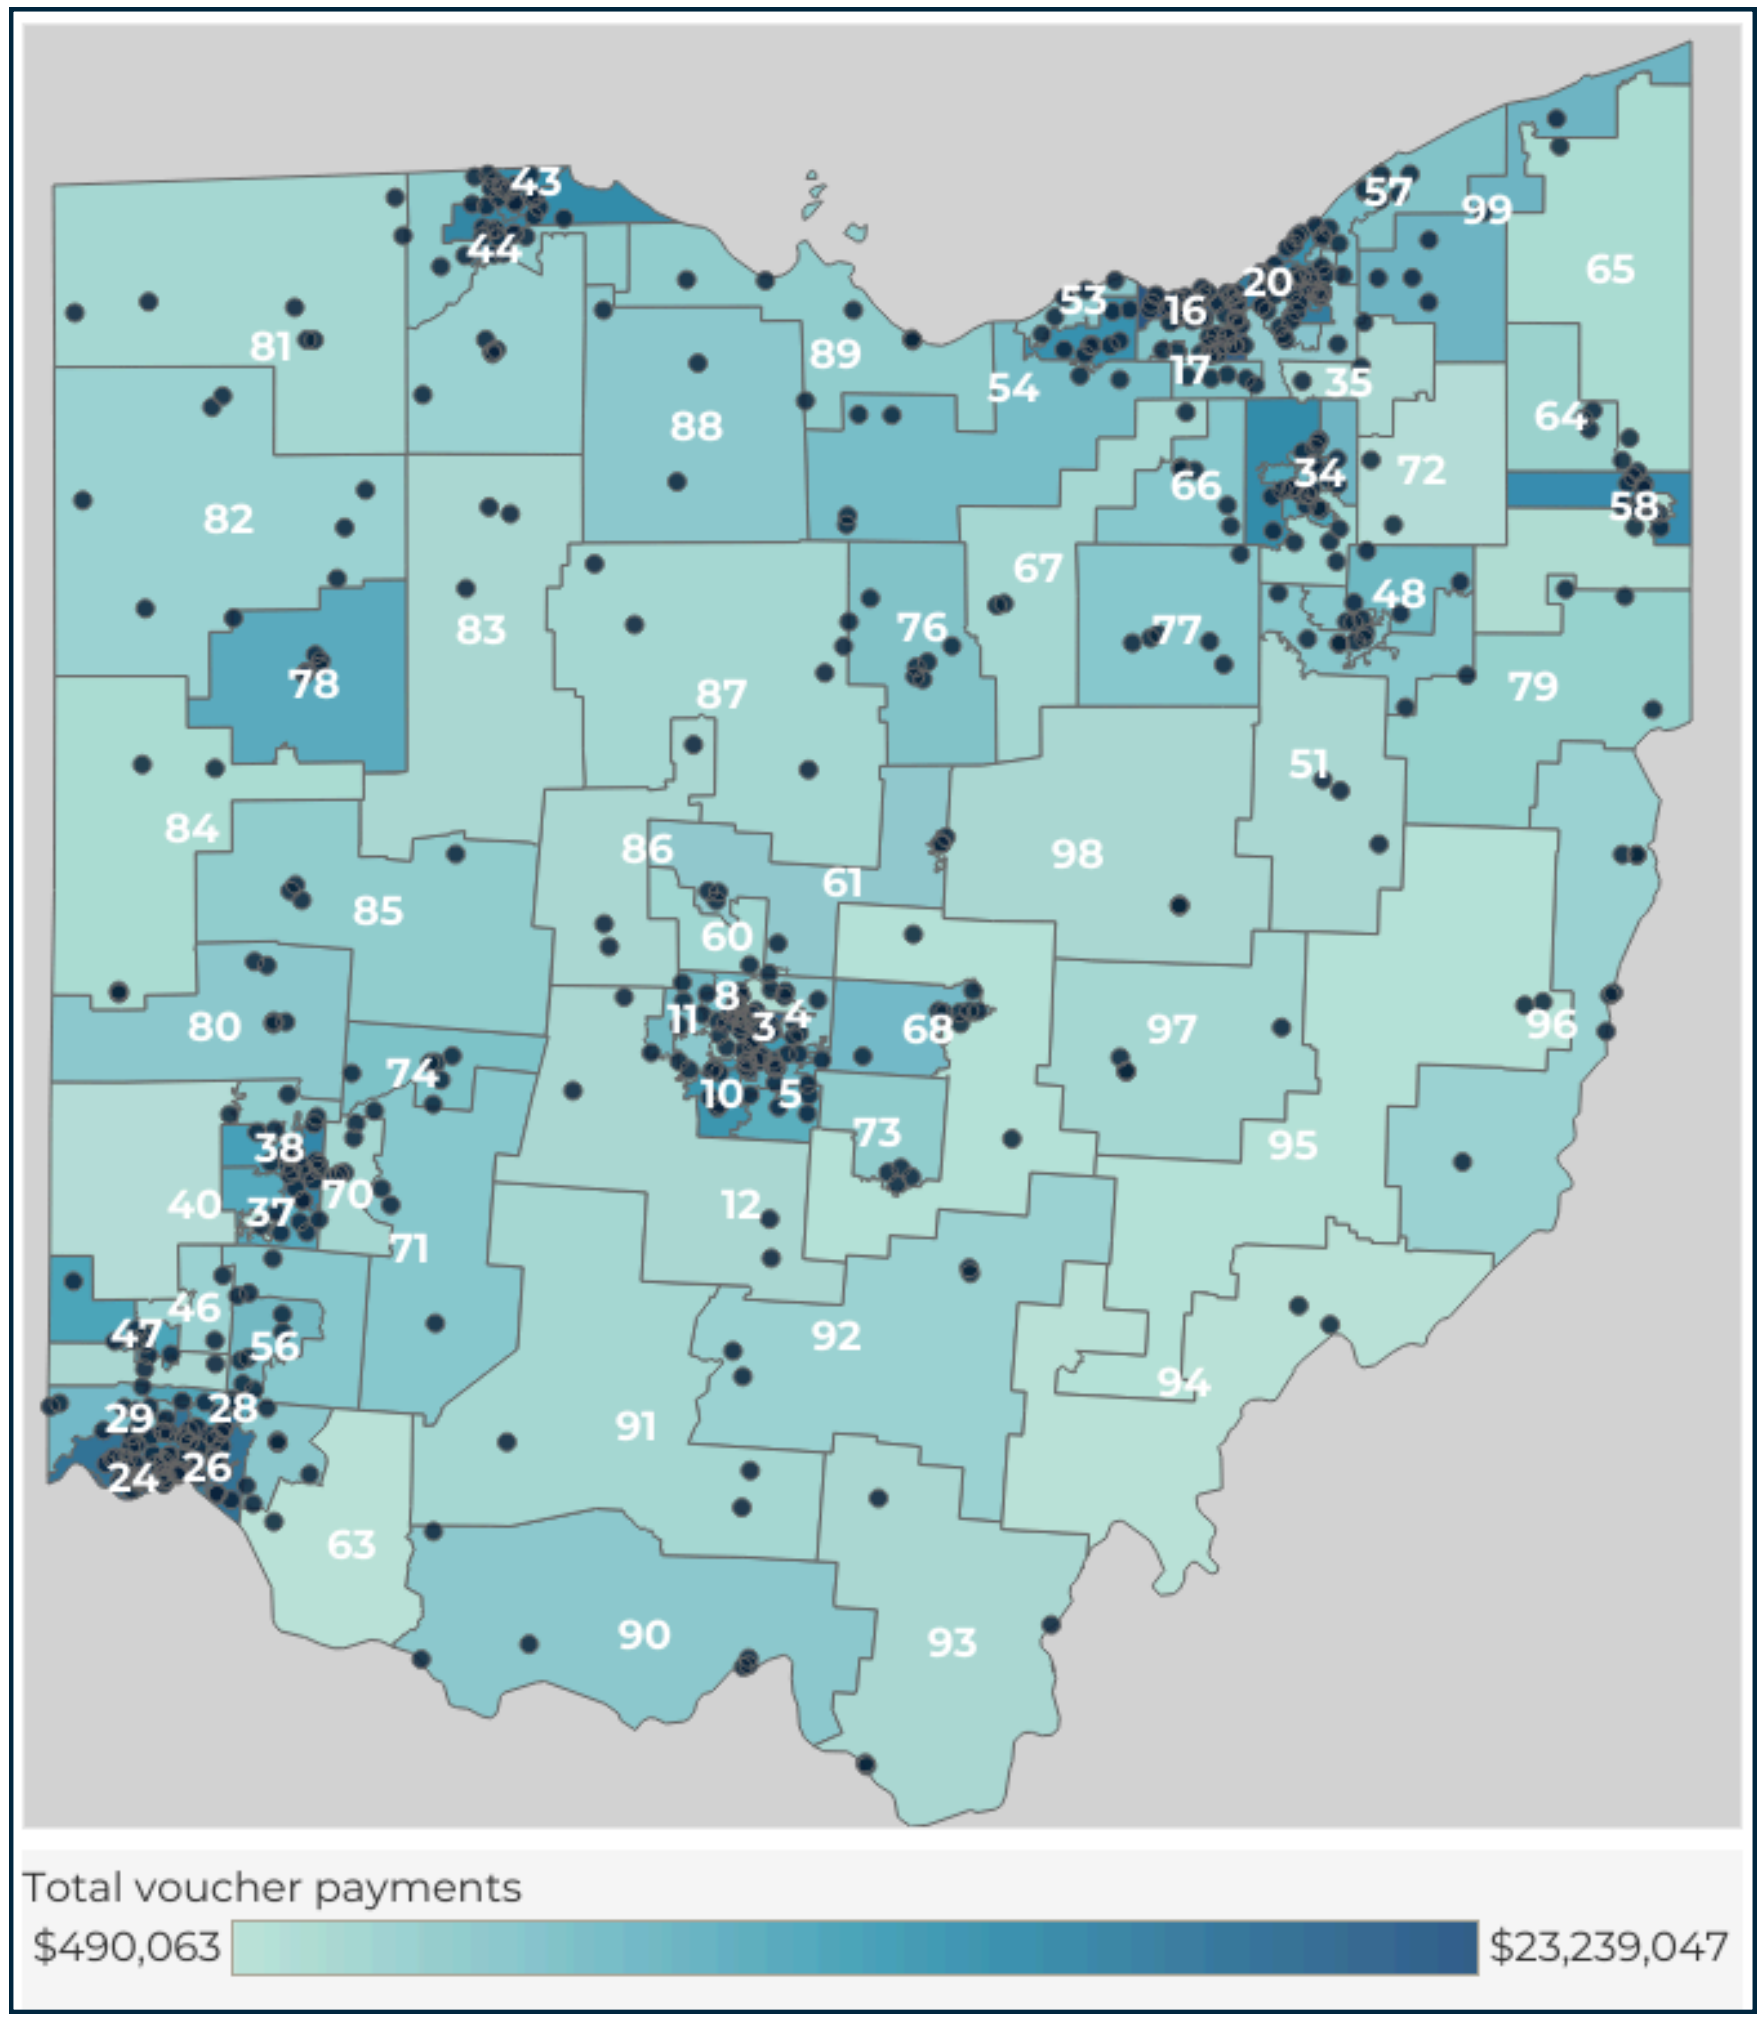
Email them at rep83@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3819

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 84

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 84 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 384

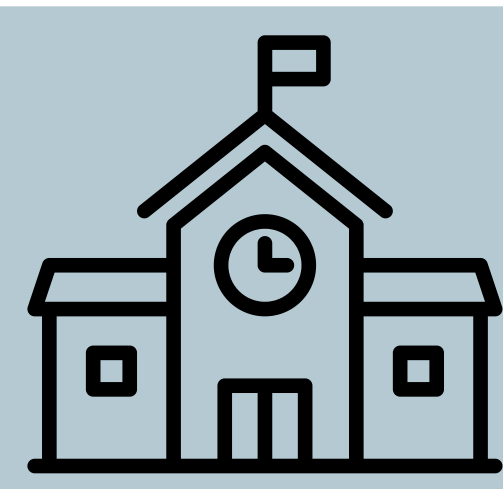
voucher students.



In District 84 there are

47

public schools attended by 19,873

students.

Contact Representative King and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

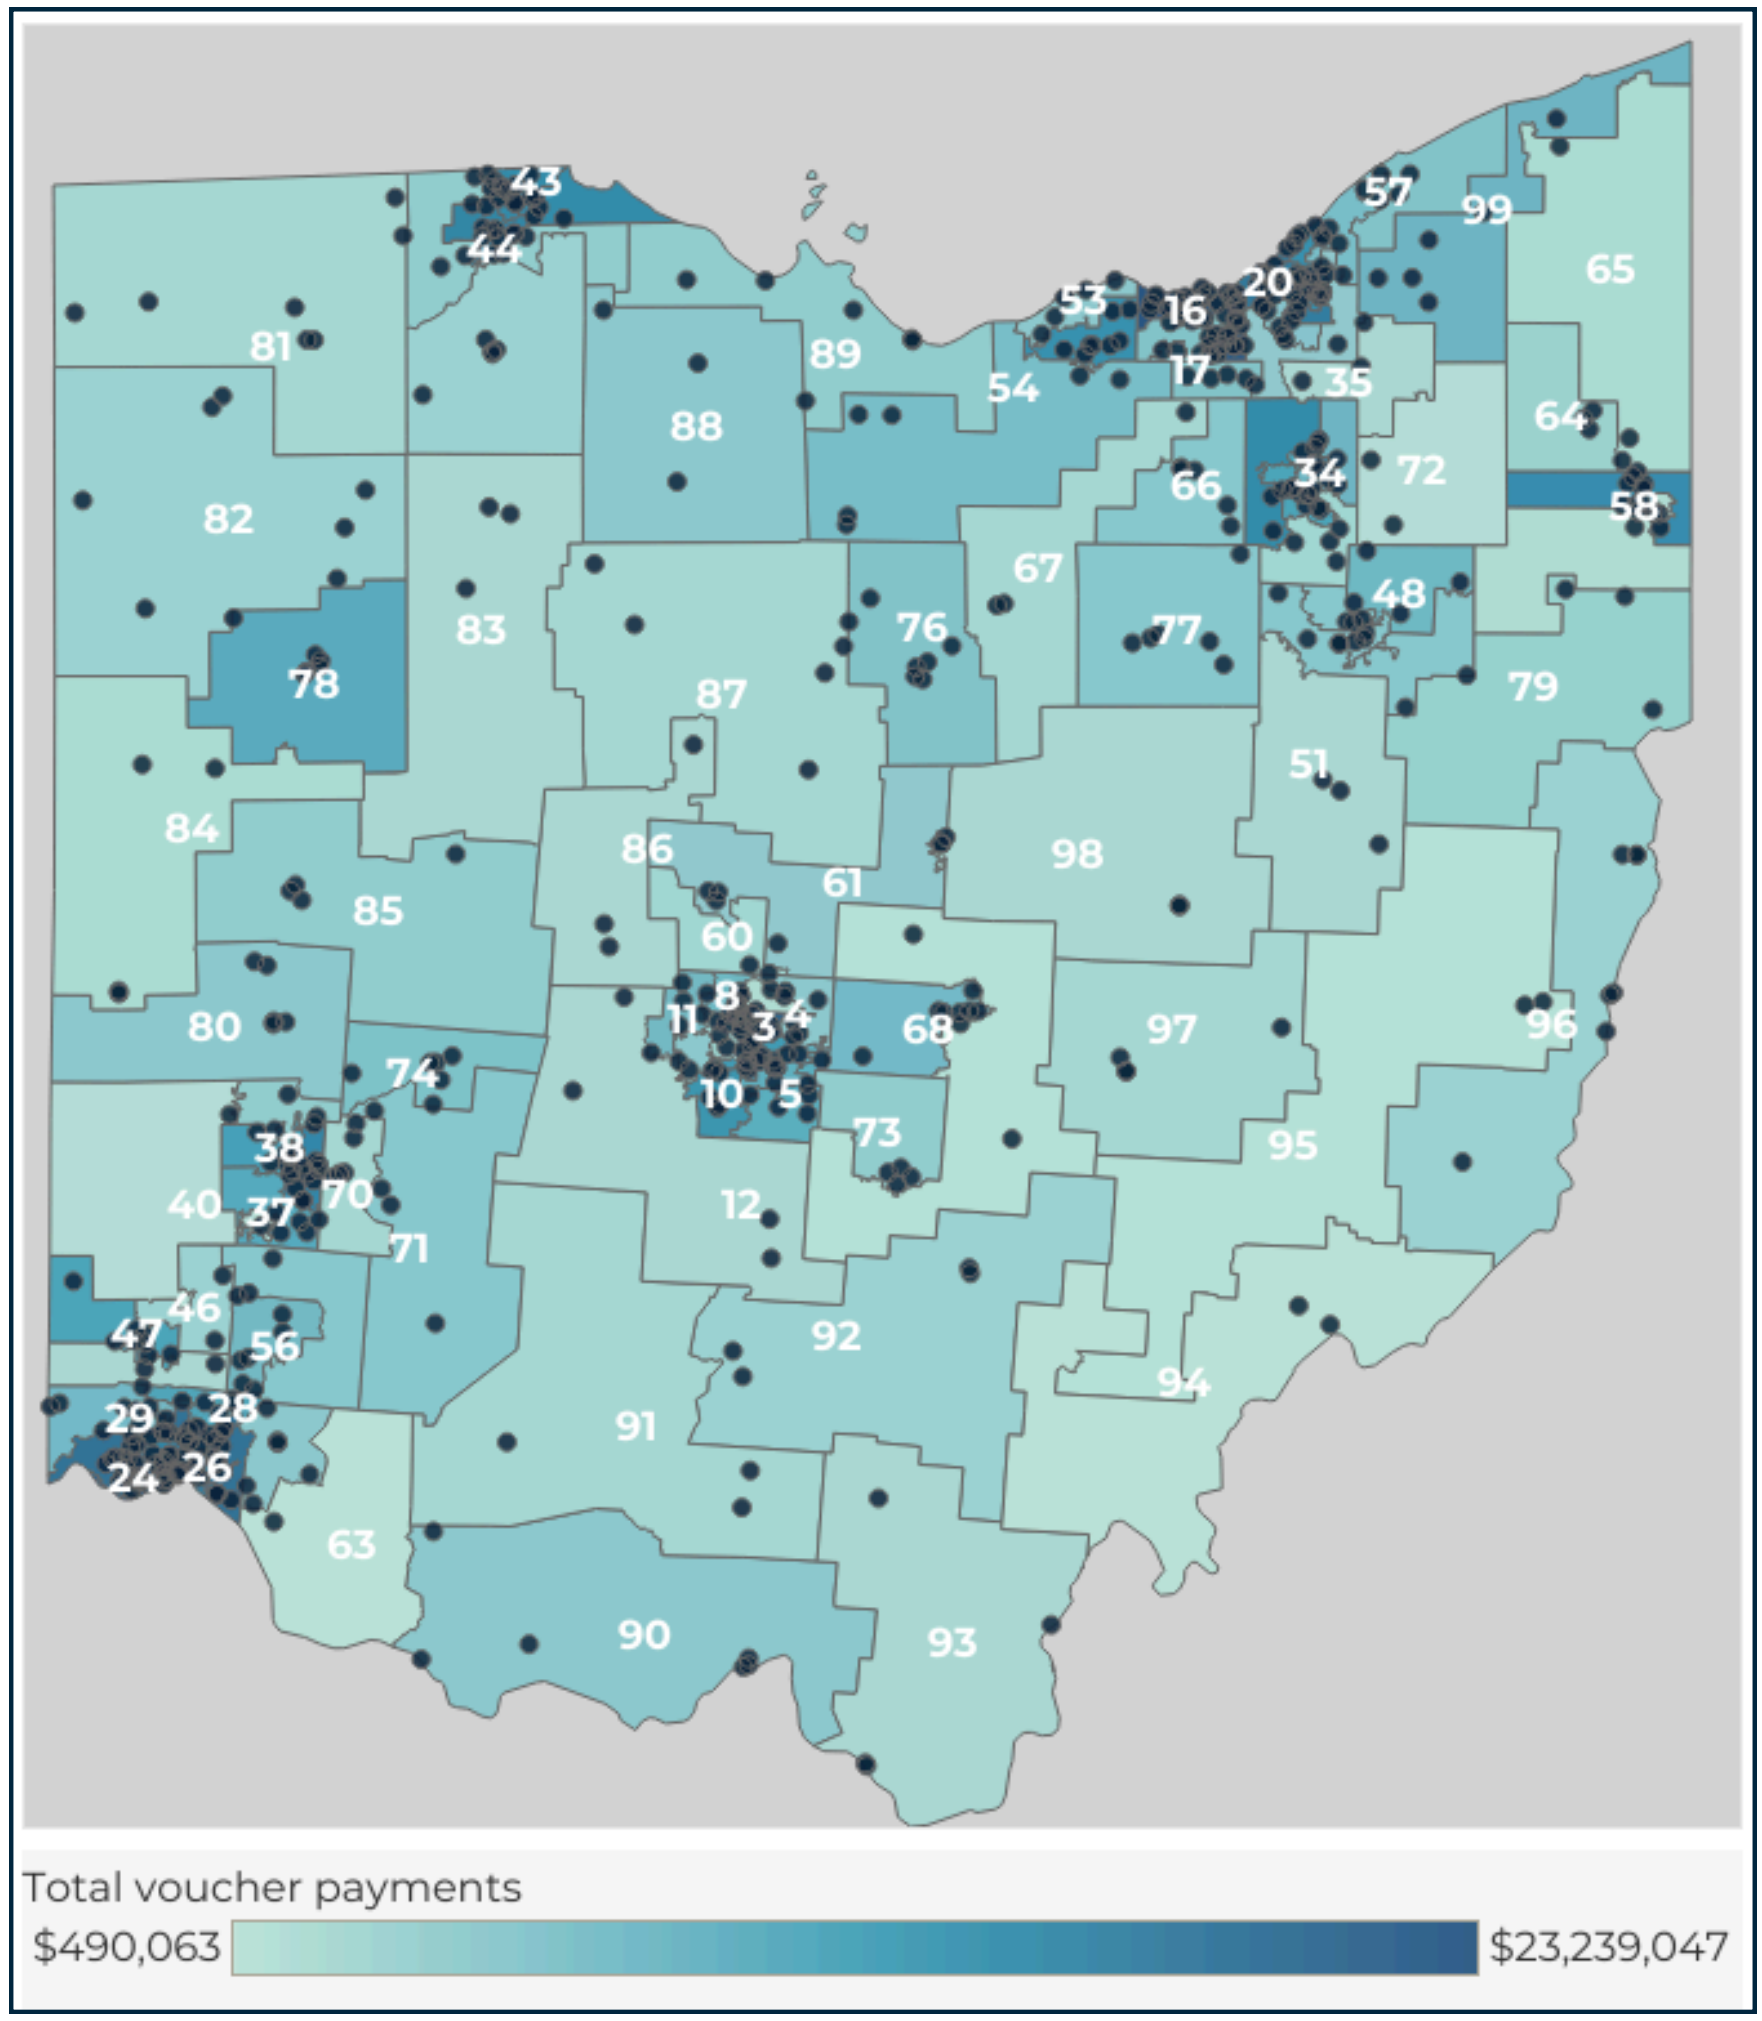
Email them at Rep84@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-9624

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 85

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 85 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 754

voucher students.

In District 85 there are 42

public schools attended by 16,363

students.

Contact Representative Barhorst and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

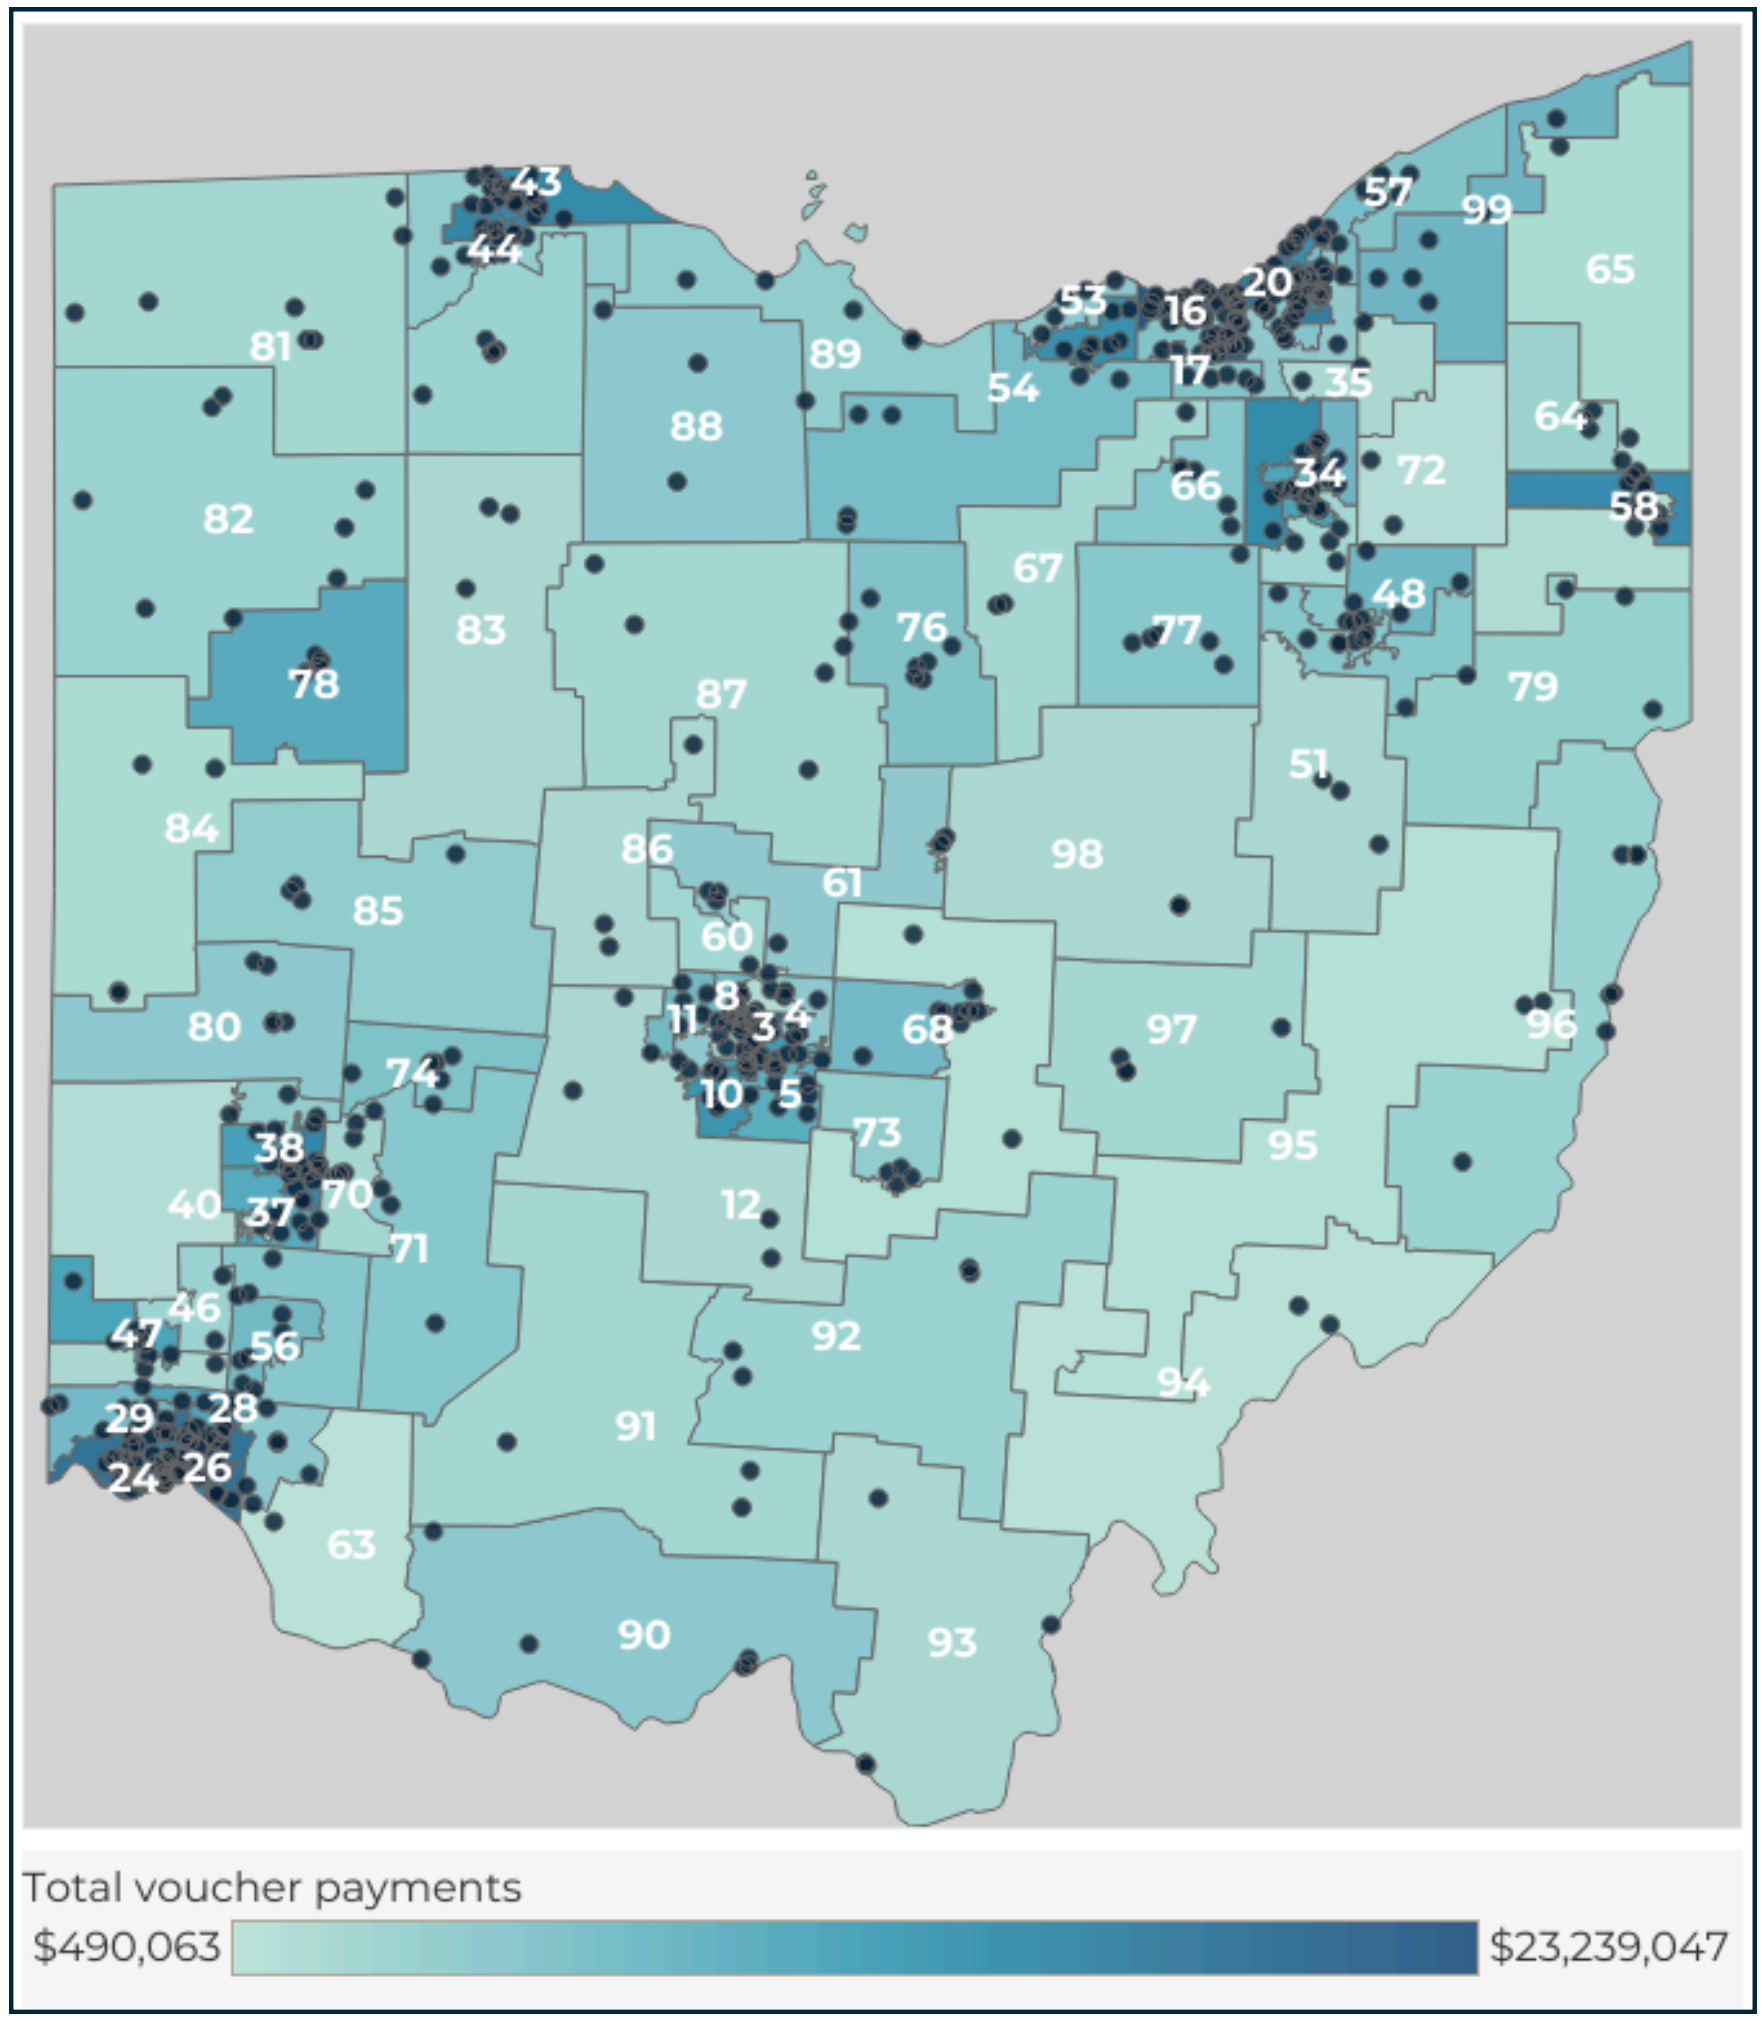
Email them at Rep85@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1507

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 86

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 86 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 462

voucher students.

In District 86 there are 30

public schools attended by 17,455

students.

Contact Representative Richardson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

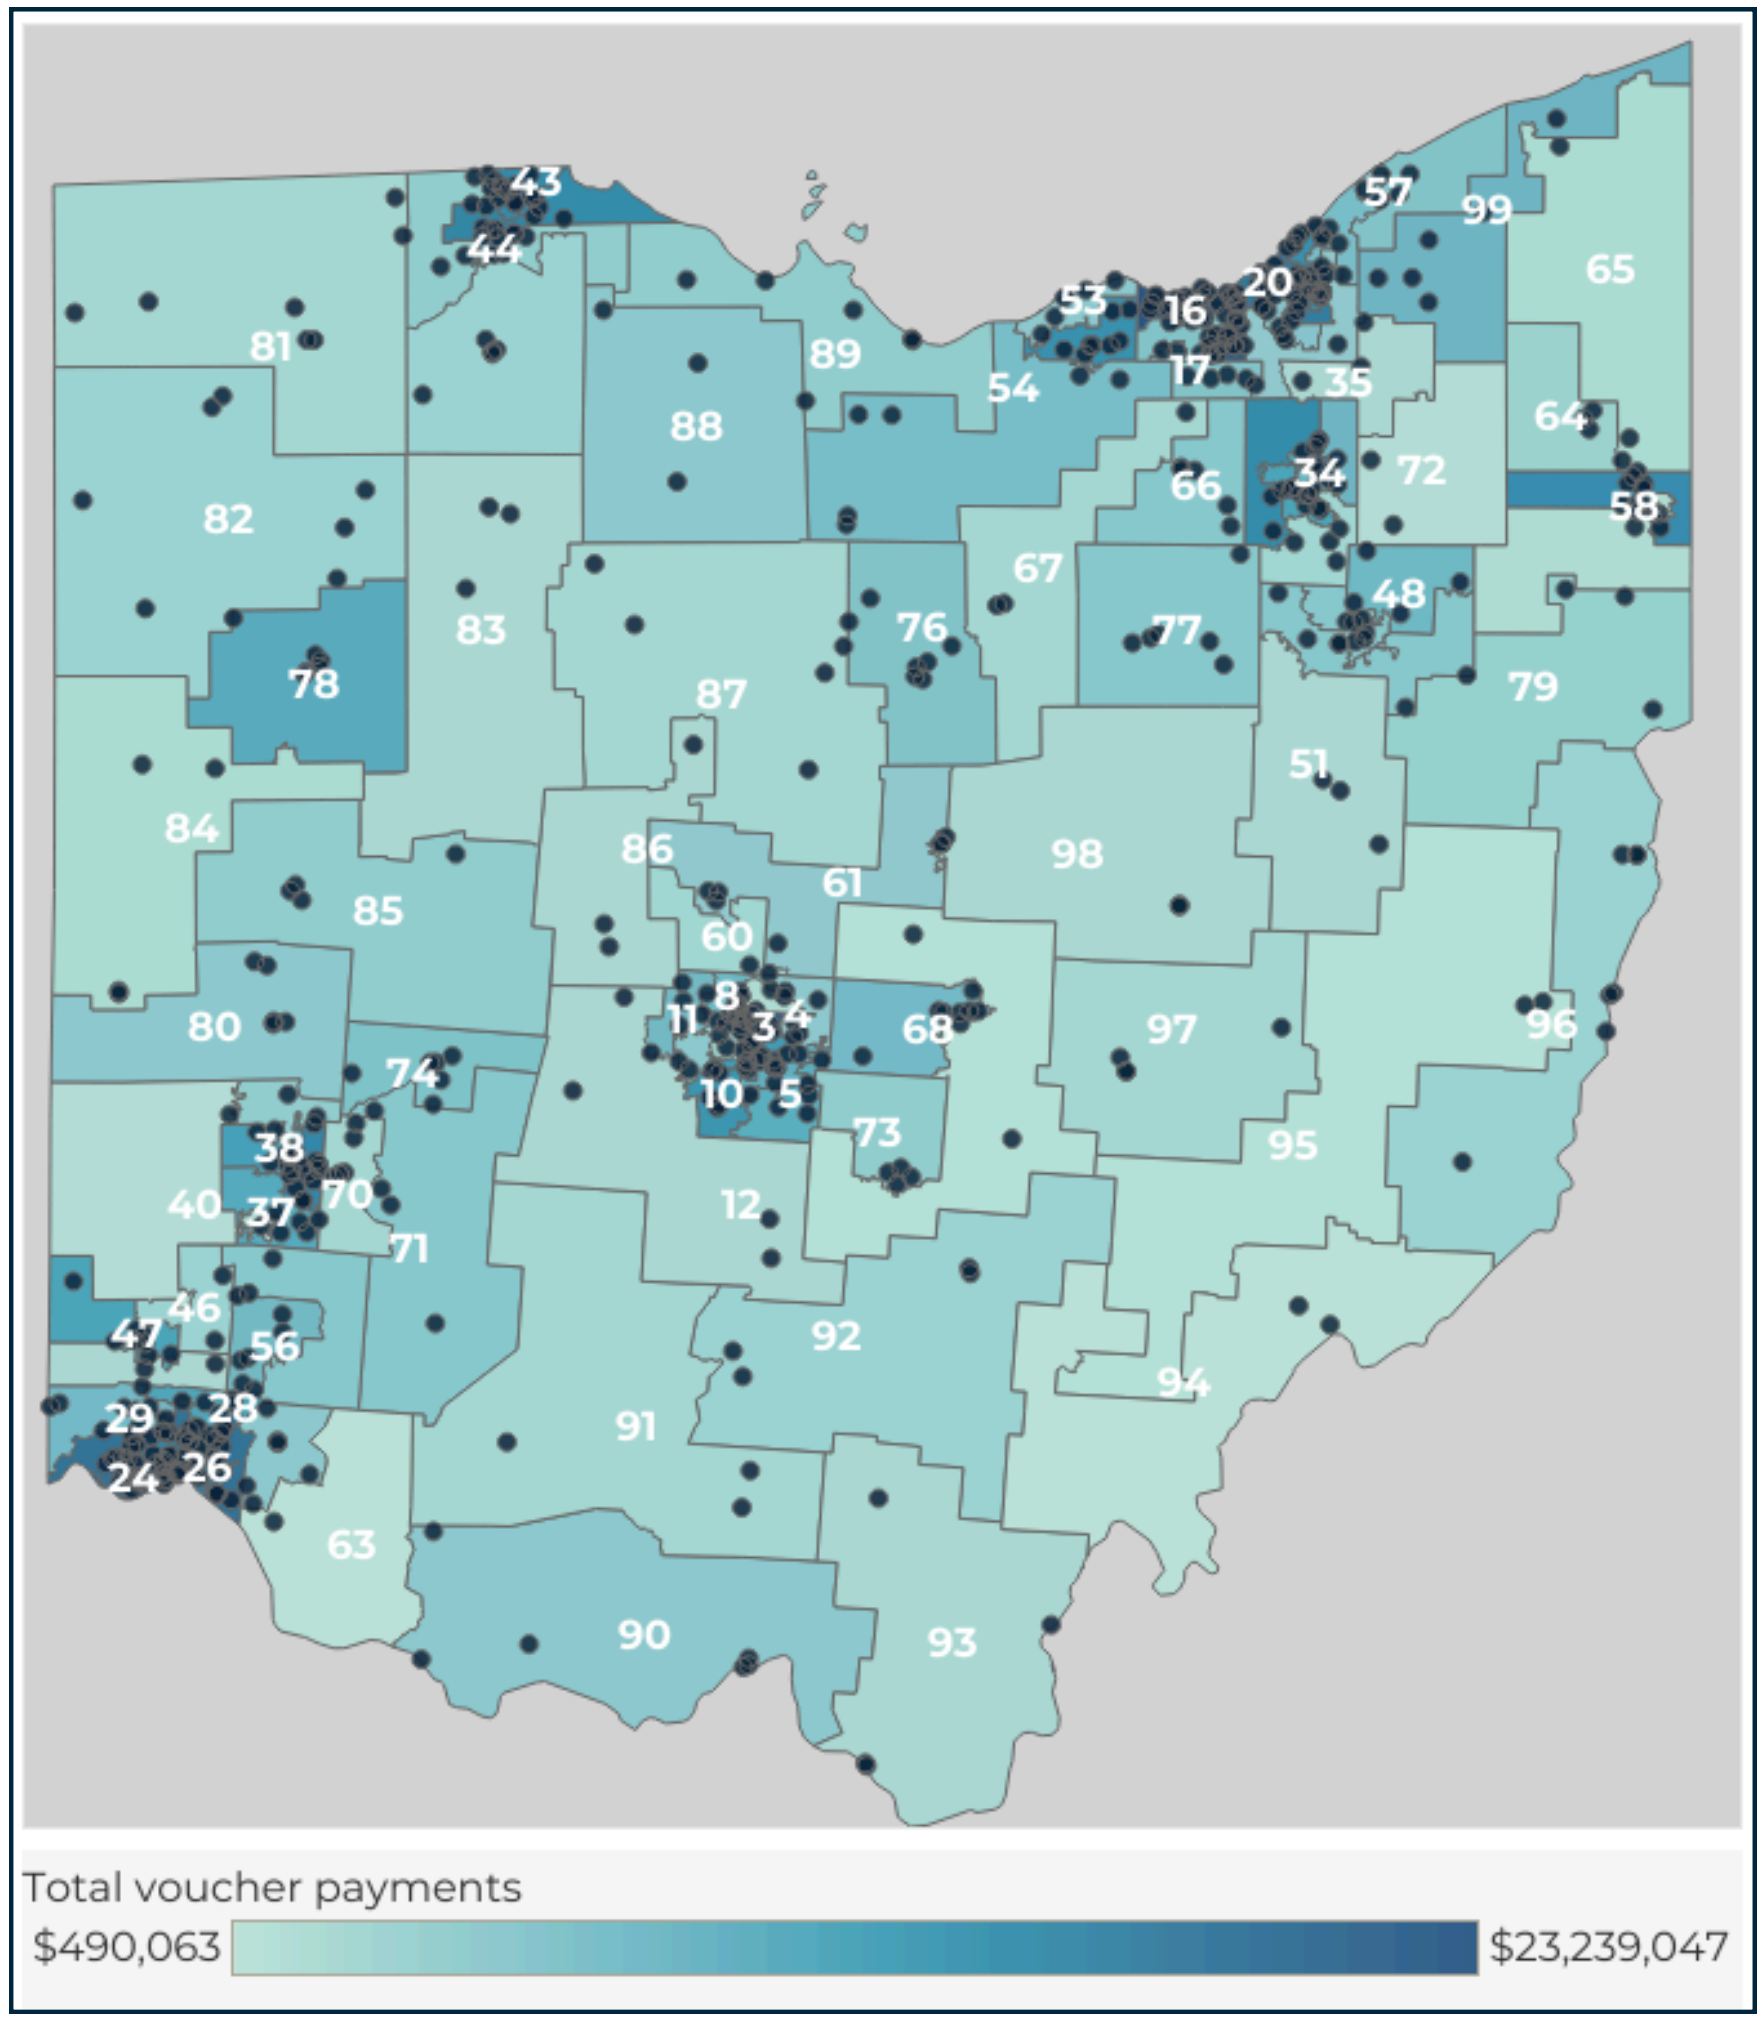
Email them at rep86@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-8147

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 87

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 87 there are

5

private voucher schools attended by 472

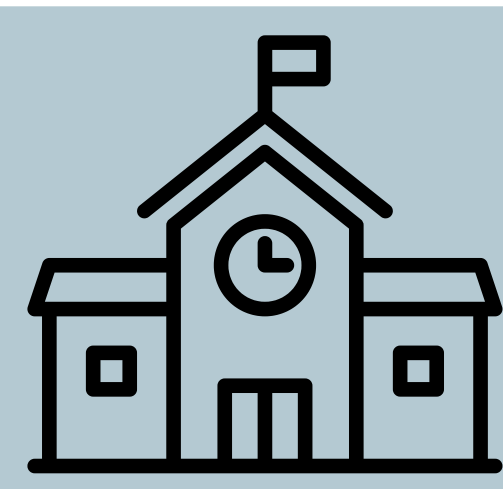
voucher students.



In District 87 there are

51

public schools attended by 16,641

students.

Contact Representative McClain and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

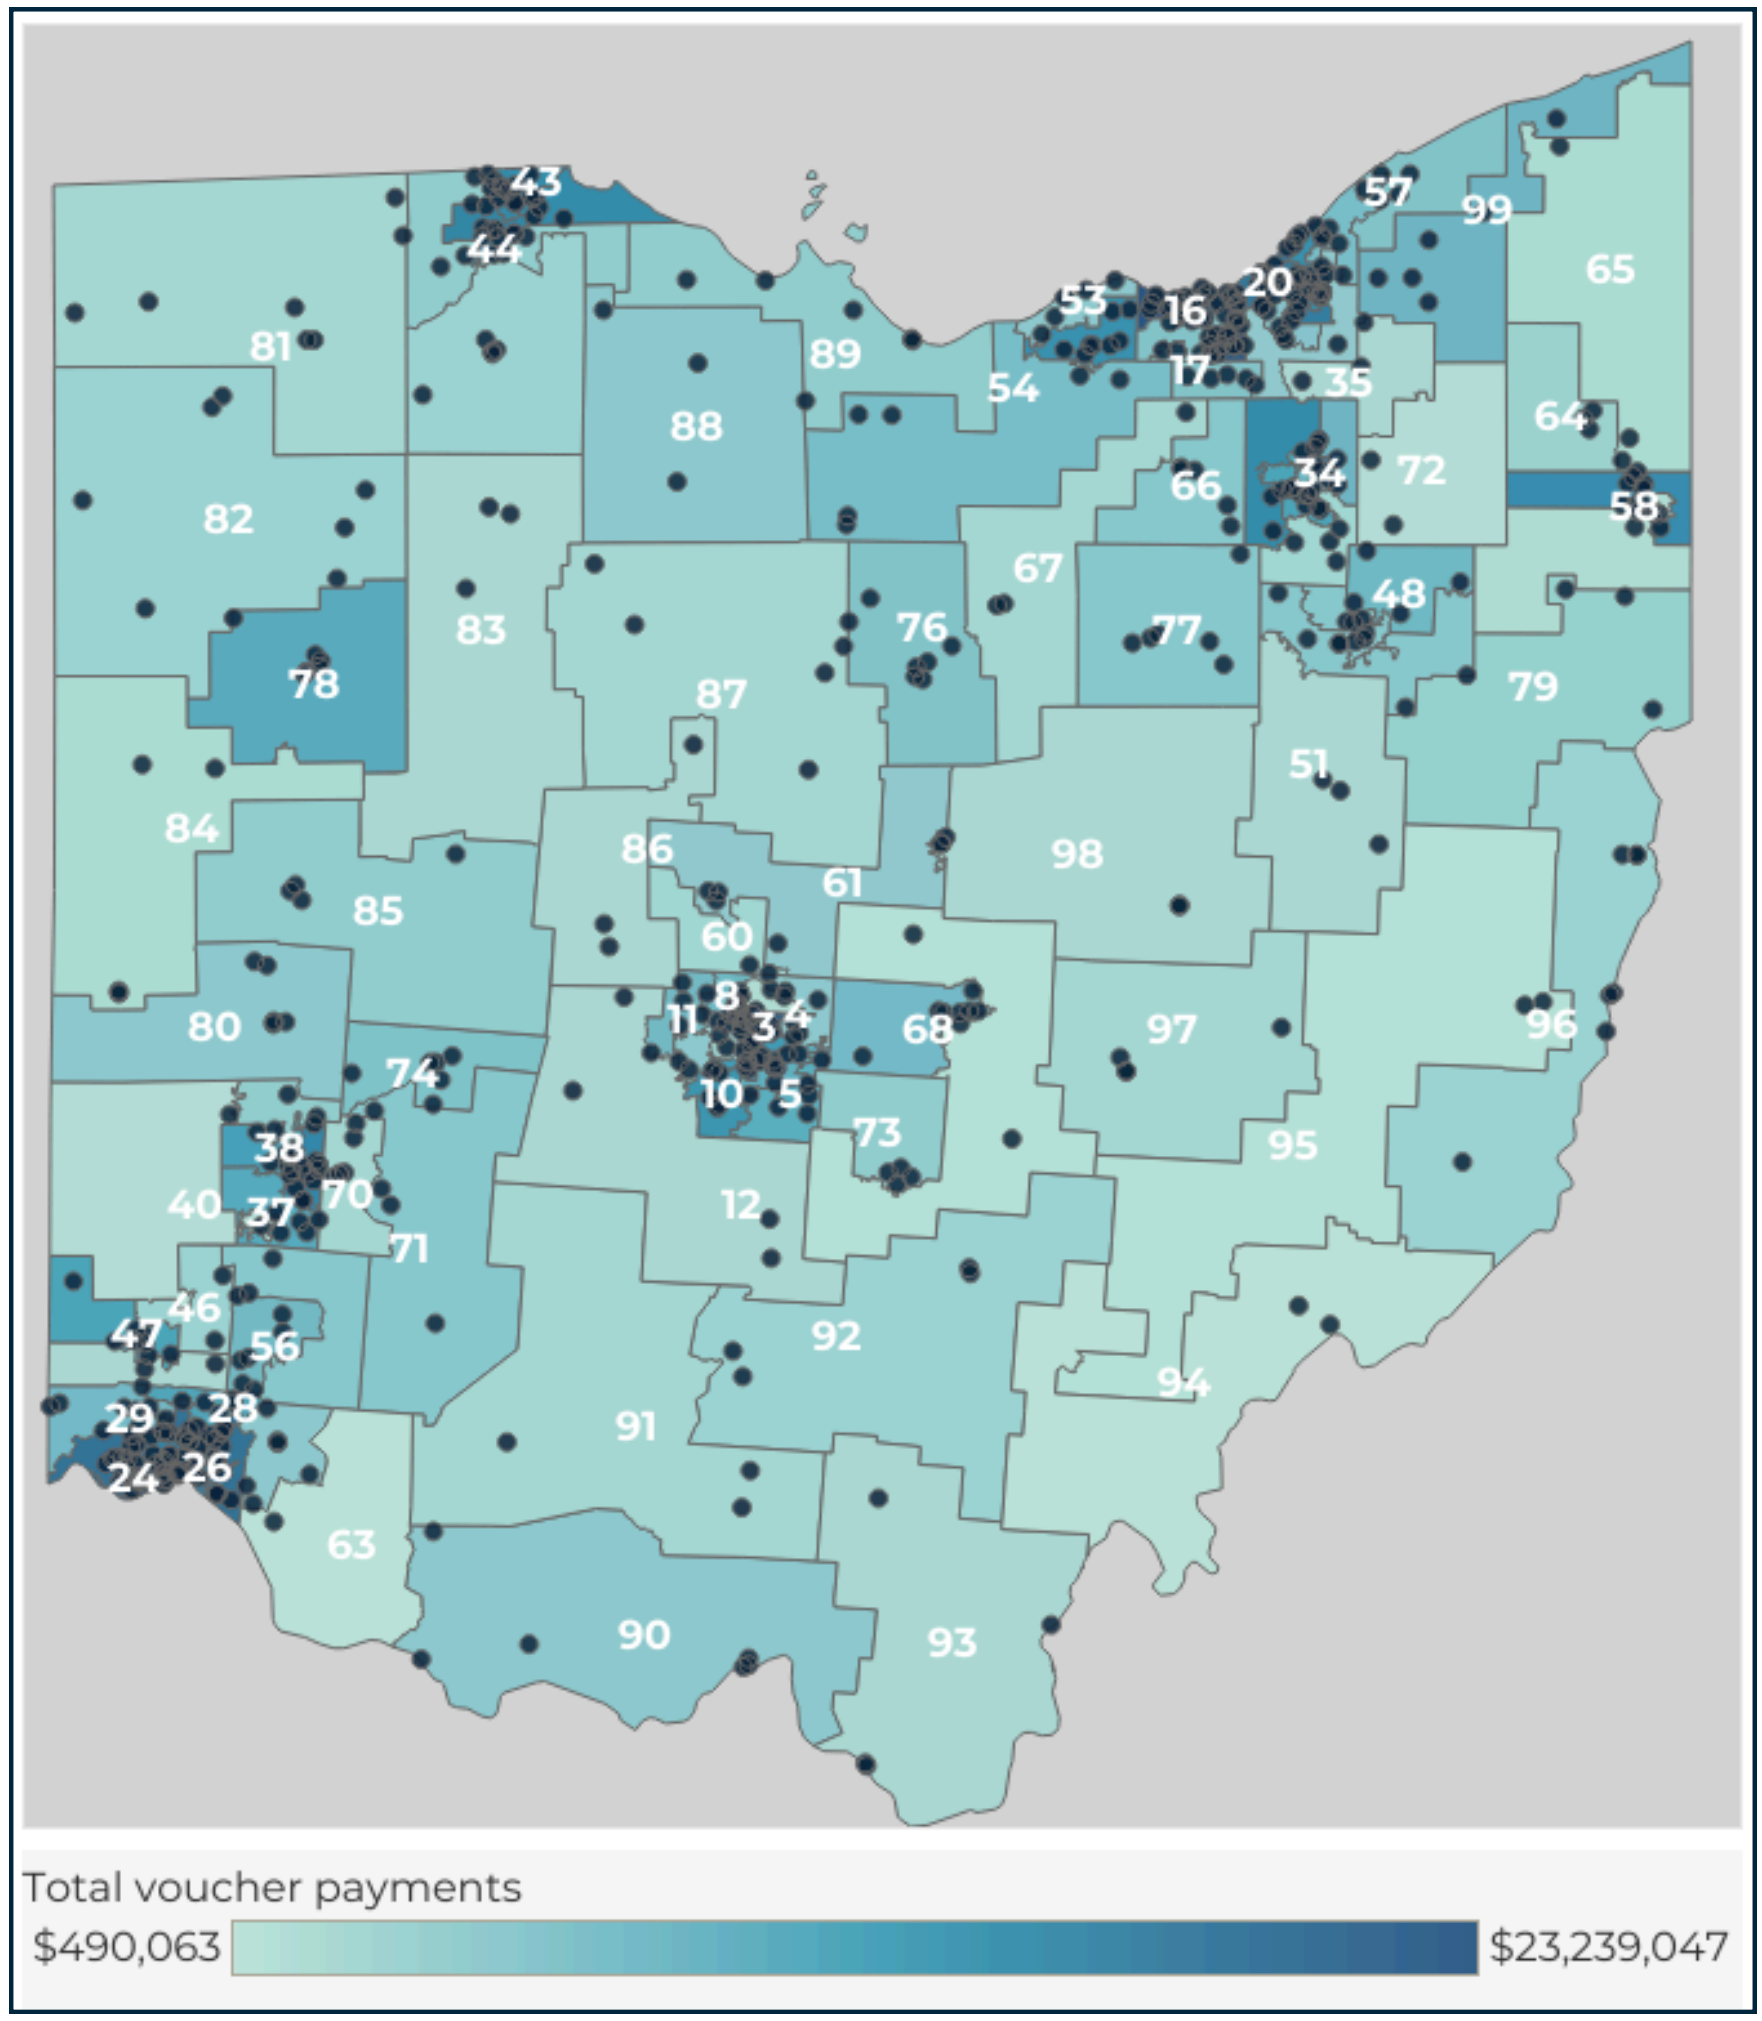
Email them at rep87@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6265

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 88

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 88 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 862

voucher students.

In District 88 there are 34

public schools attended by 13,078

students.

Contact Representative Click and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

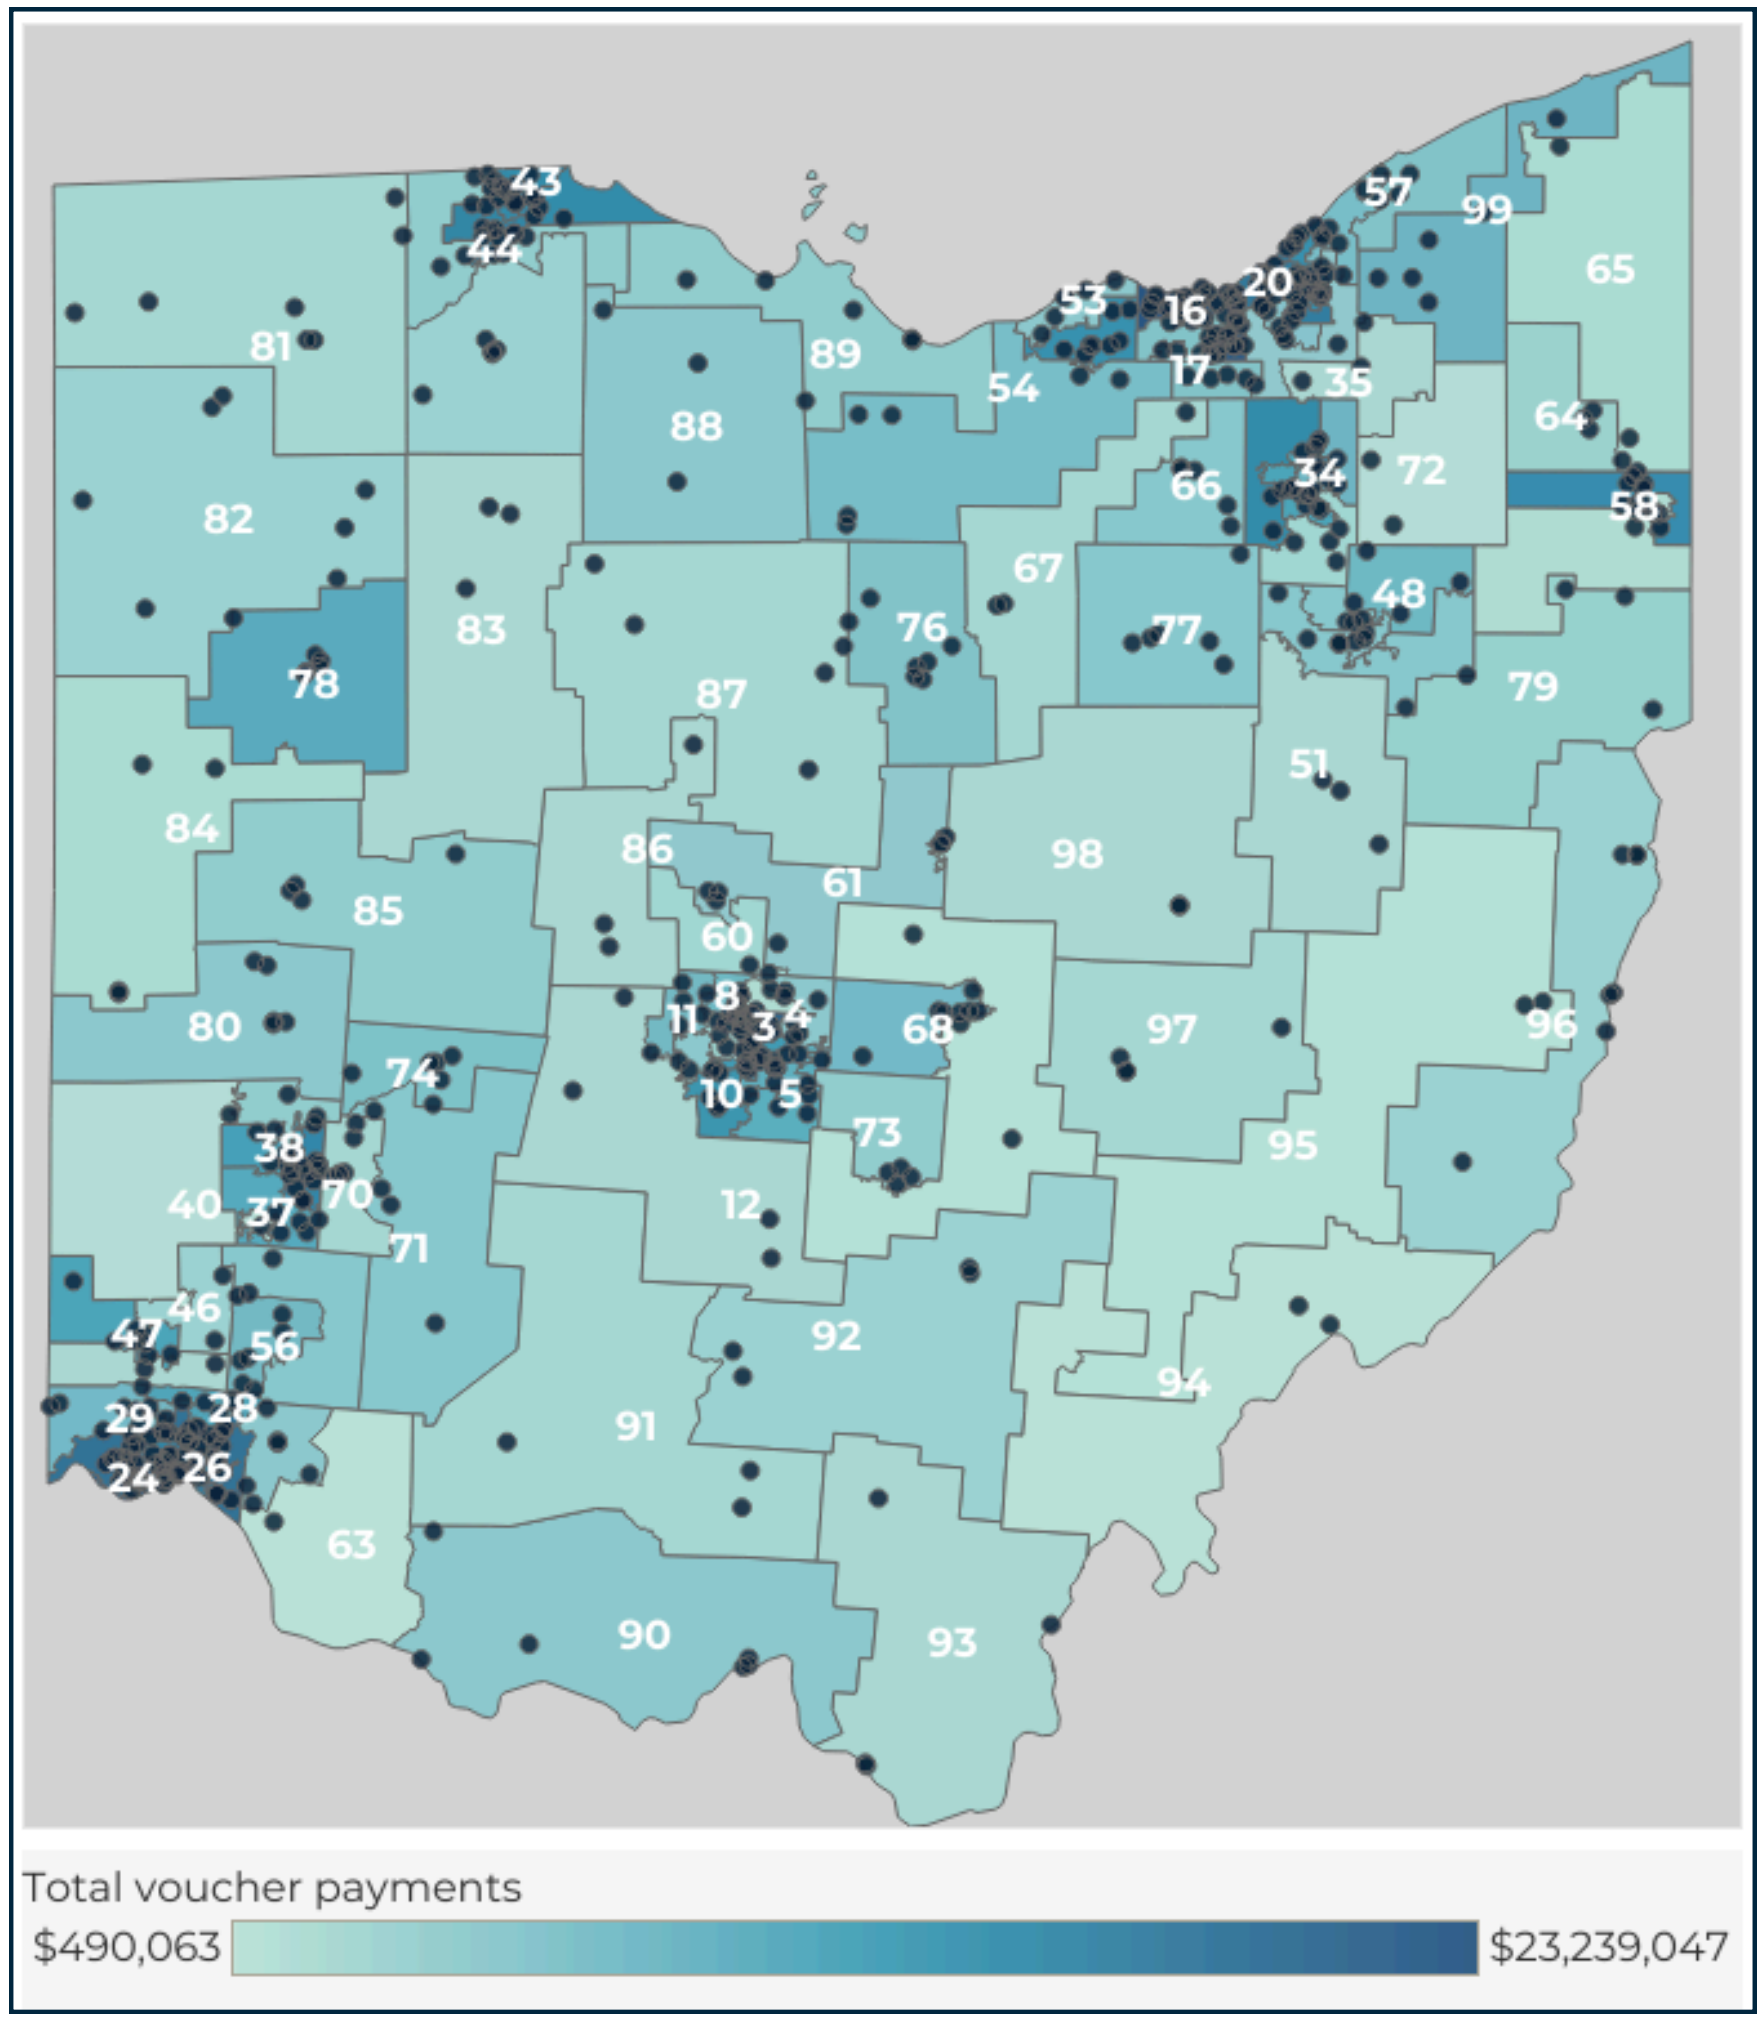
Email them at rep88@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1374

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 89

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 89 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 827

voucher students.

In District 89 there are 38

public schools attended by 14,545

students.

Contact Representative Sweanigen and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

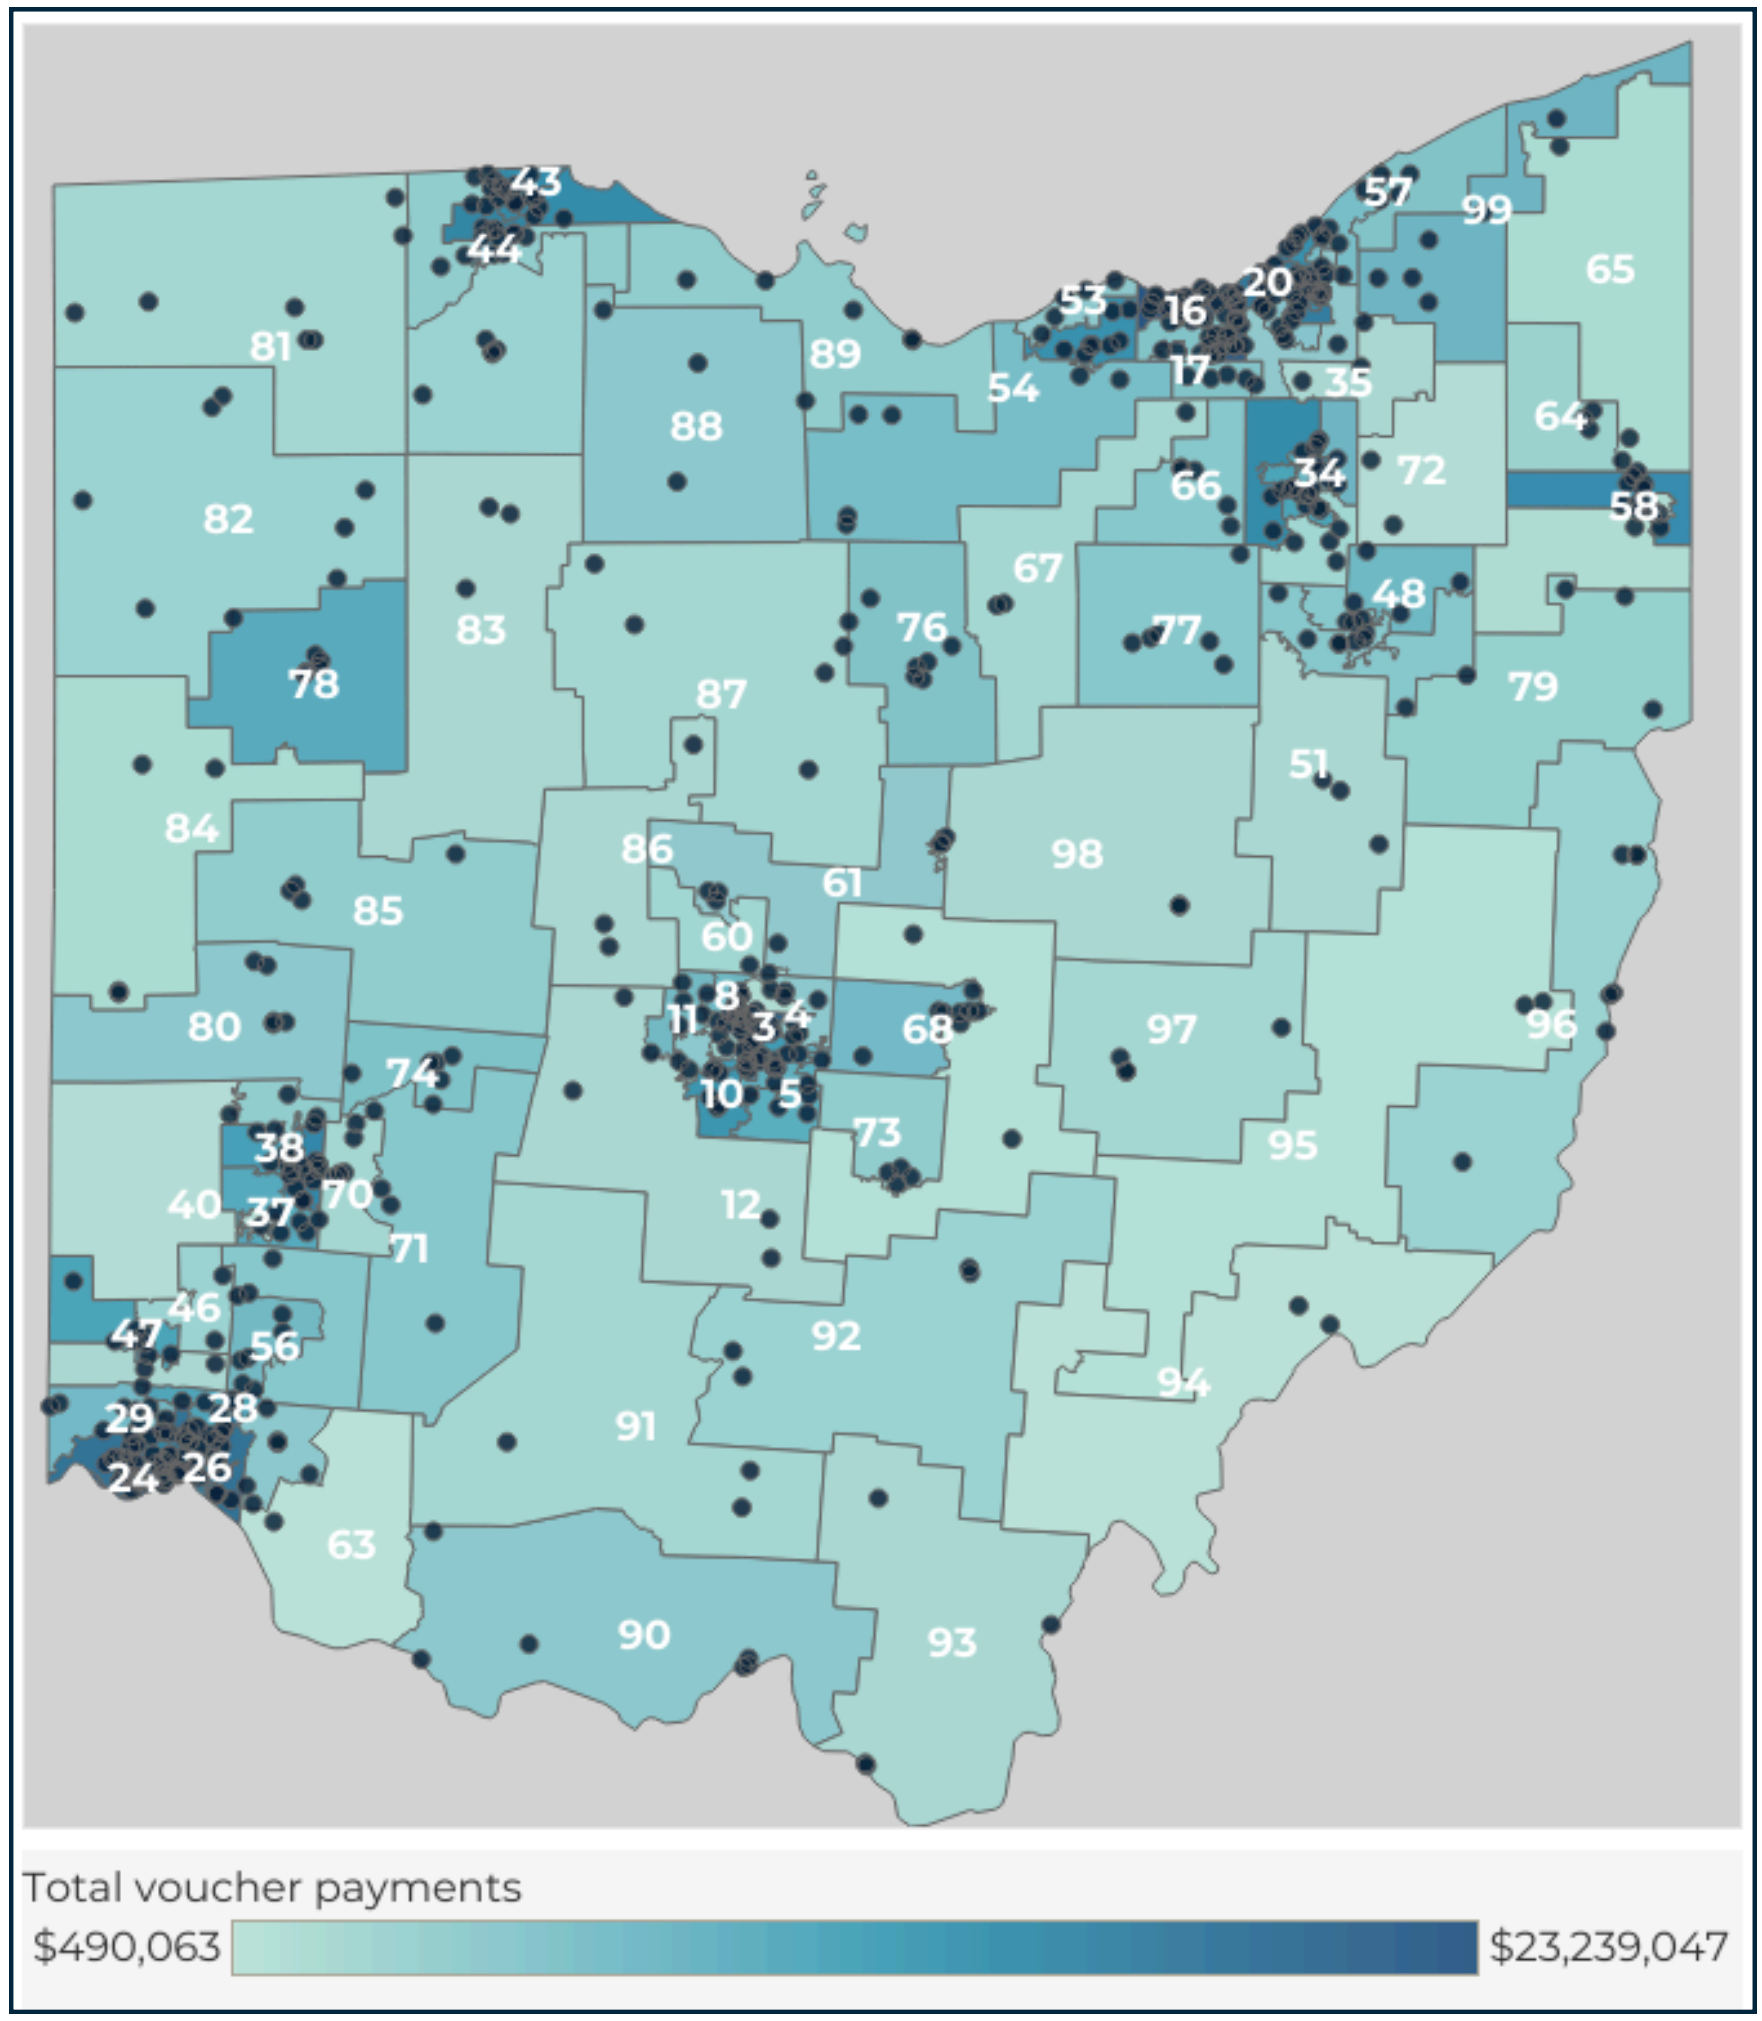
Email them at rep89@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6011

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 9

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 9 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 265

voucher students.

In District 9 there are 20

public schools attended by 8,815

students.

Contact Representative Abdullahi and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

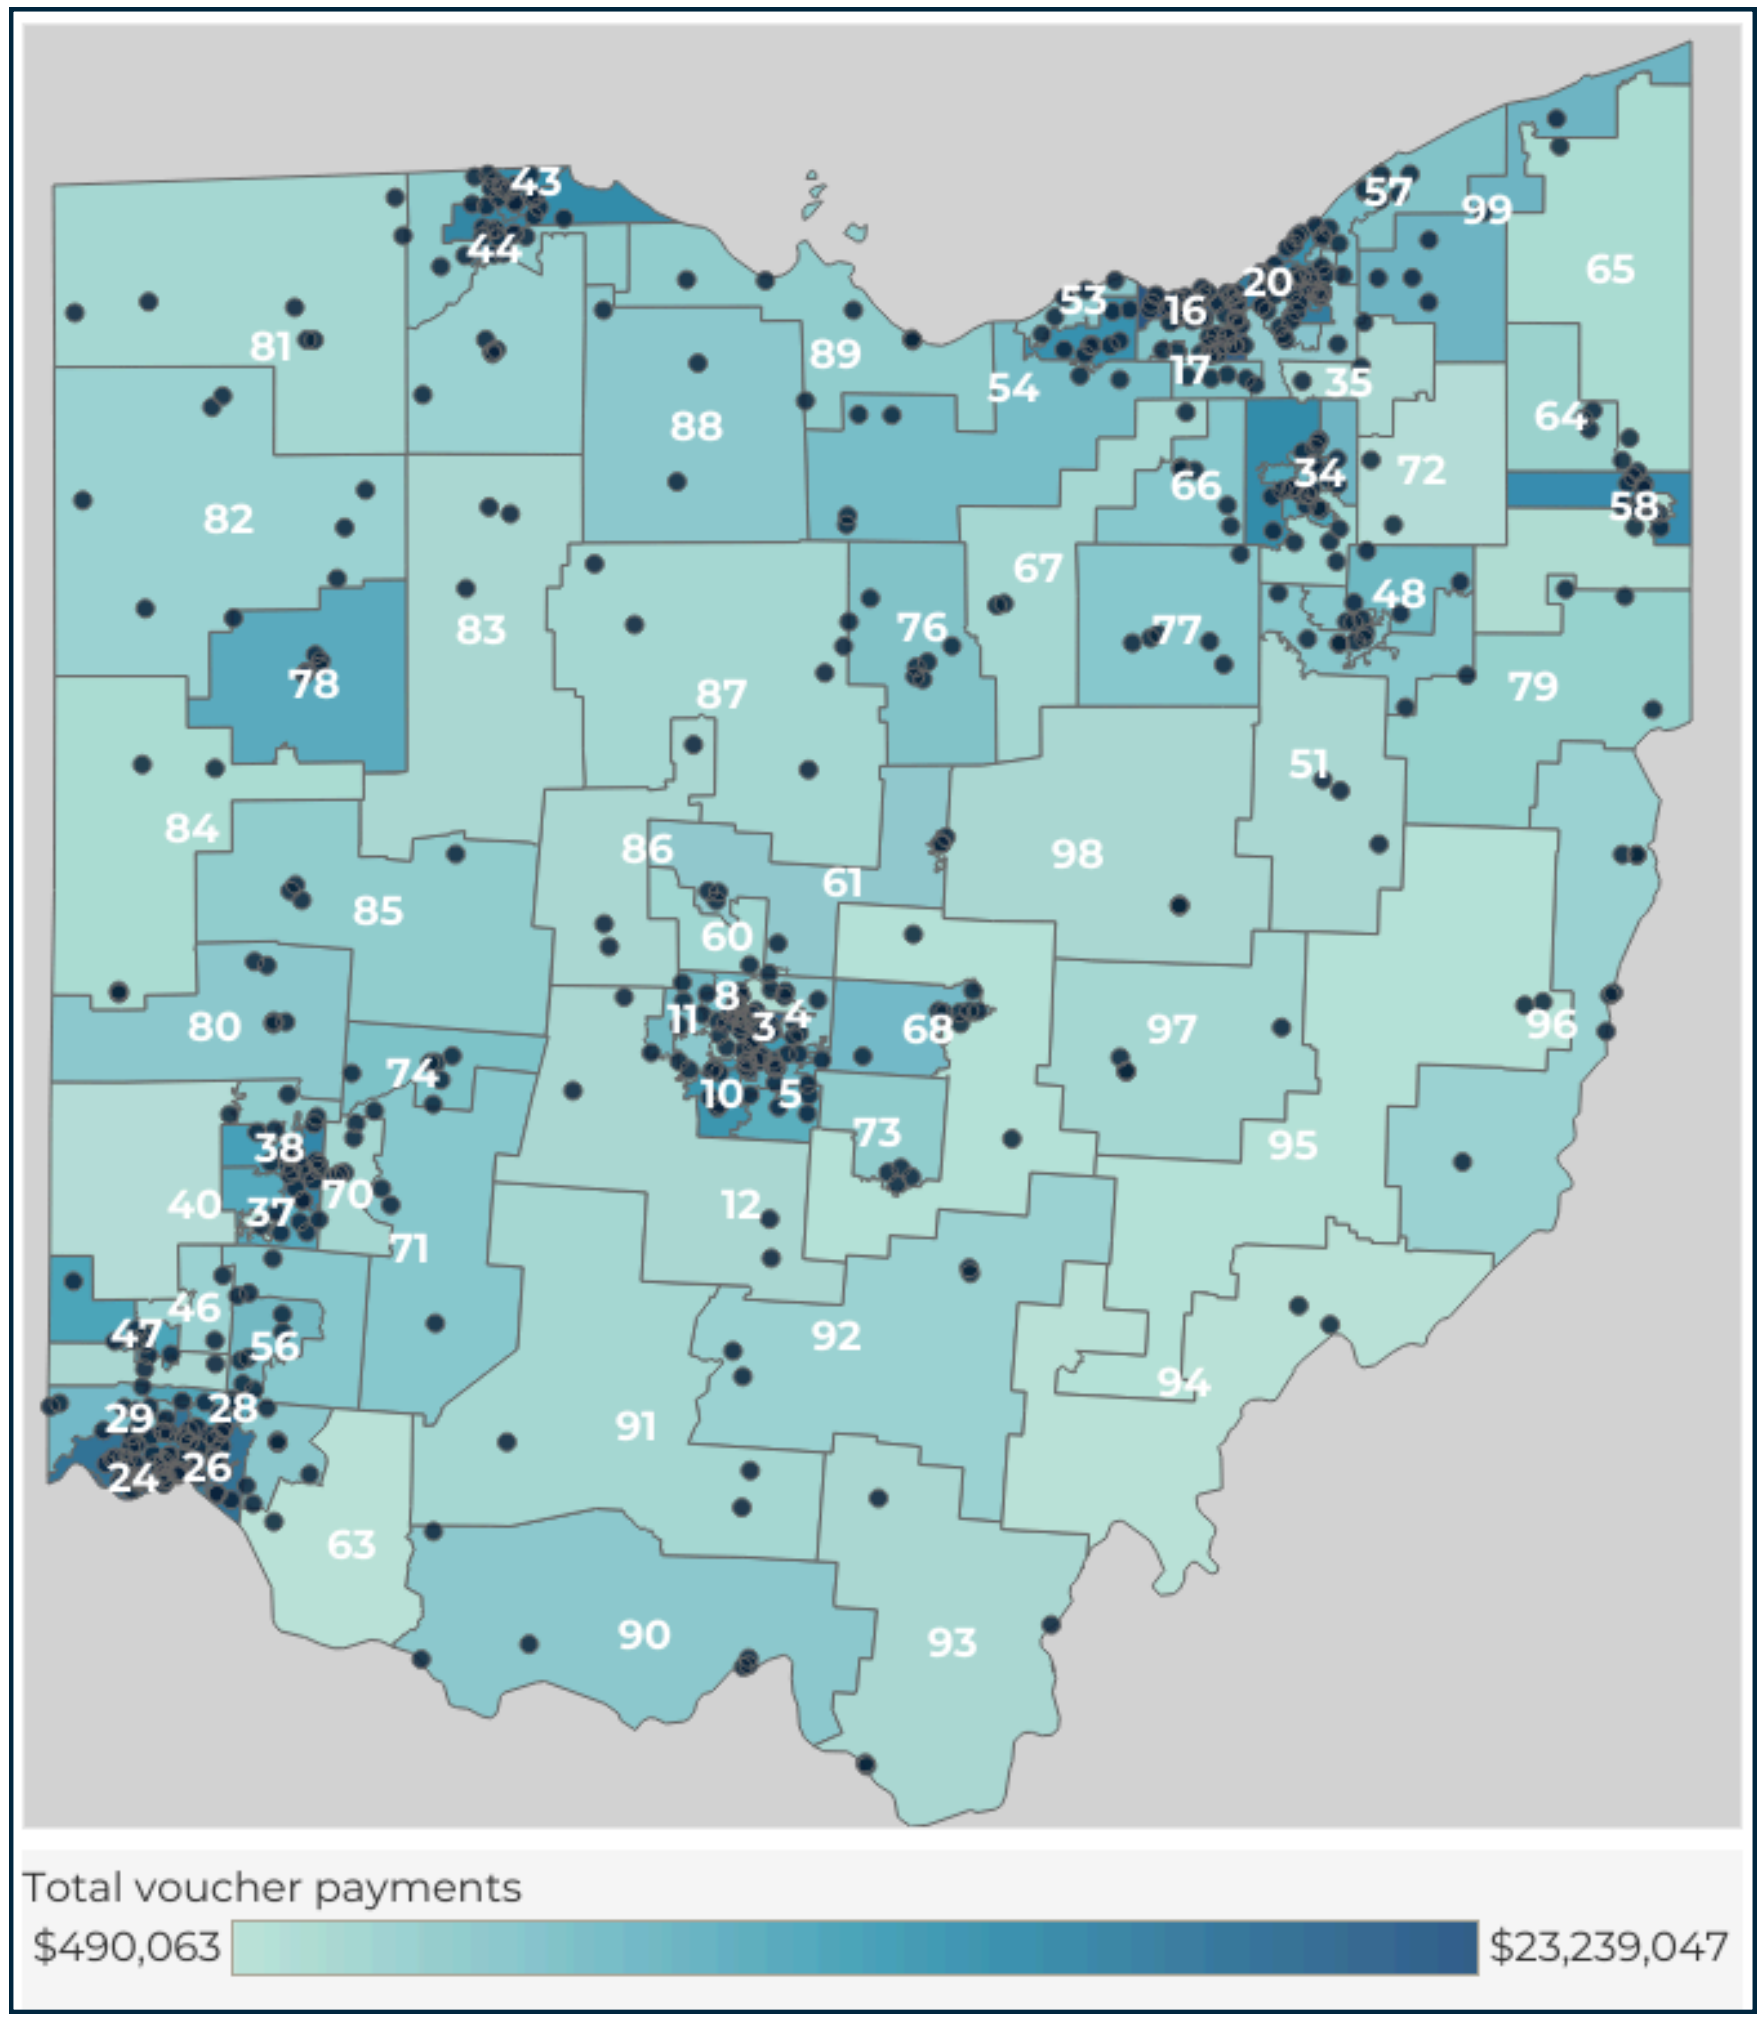
Email them at Rep09@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2473

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 90

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 90 there are

6

private voucher schools attended by 799

voucher students.

In District 90 there are 44

public schools attended by 15,581

students.

Contact Representative Pizzulli and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

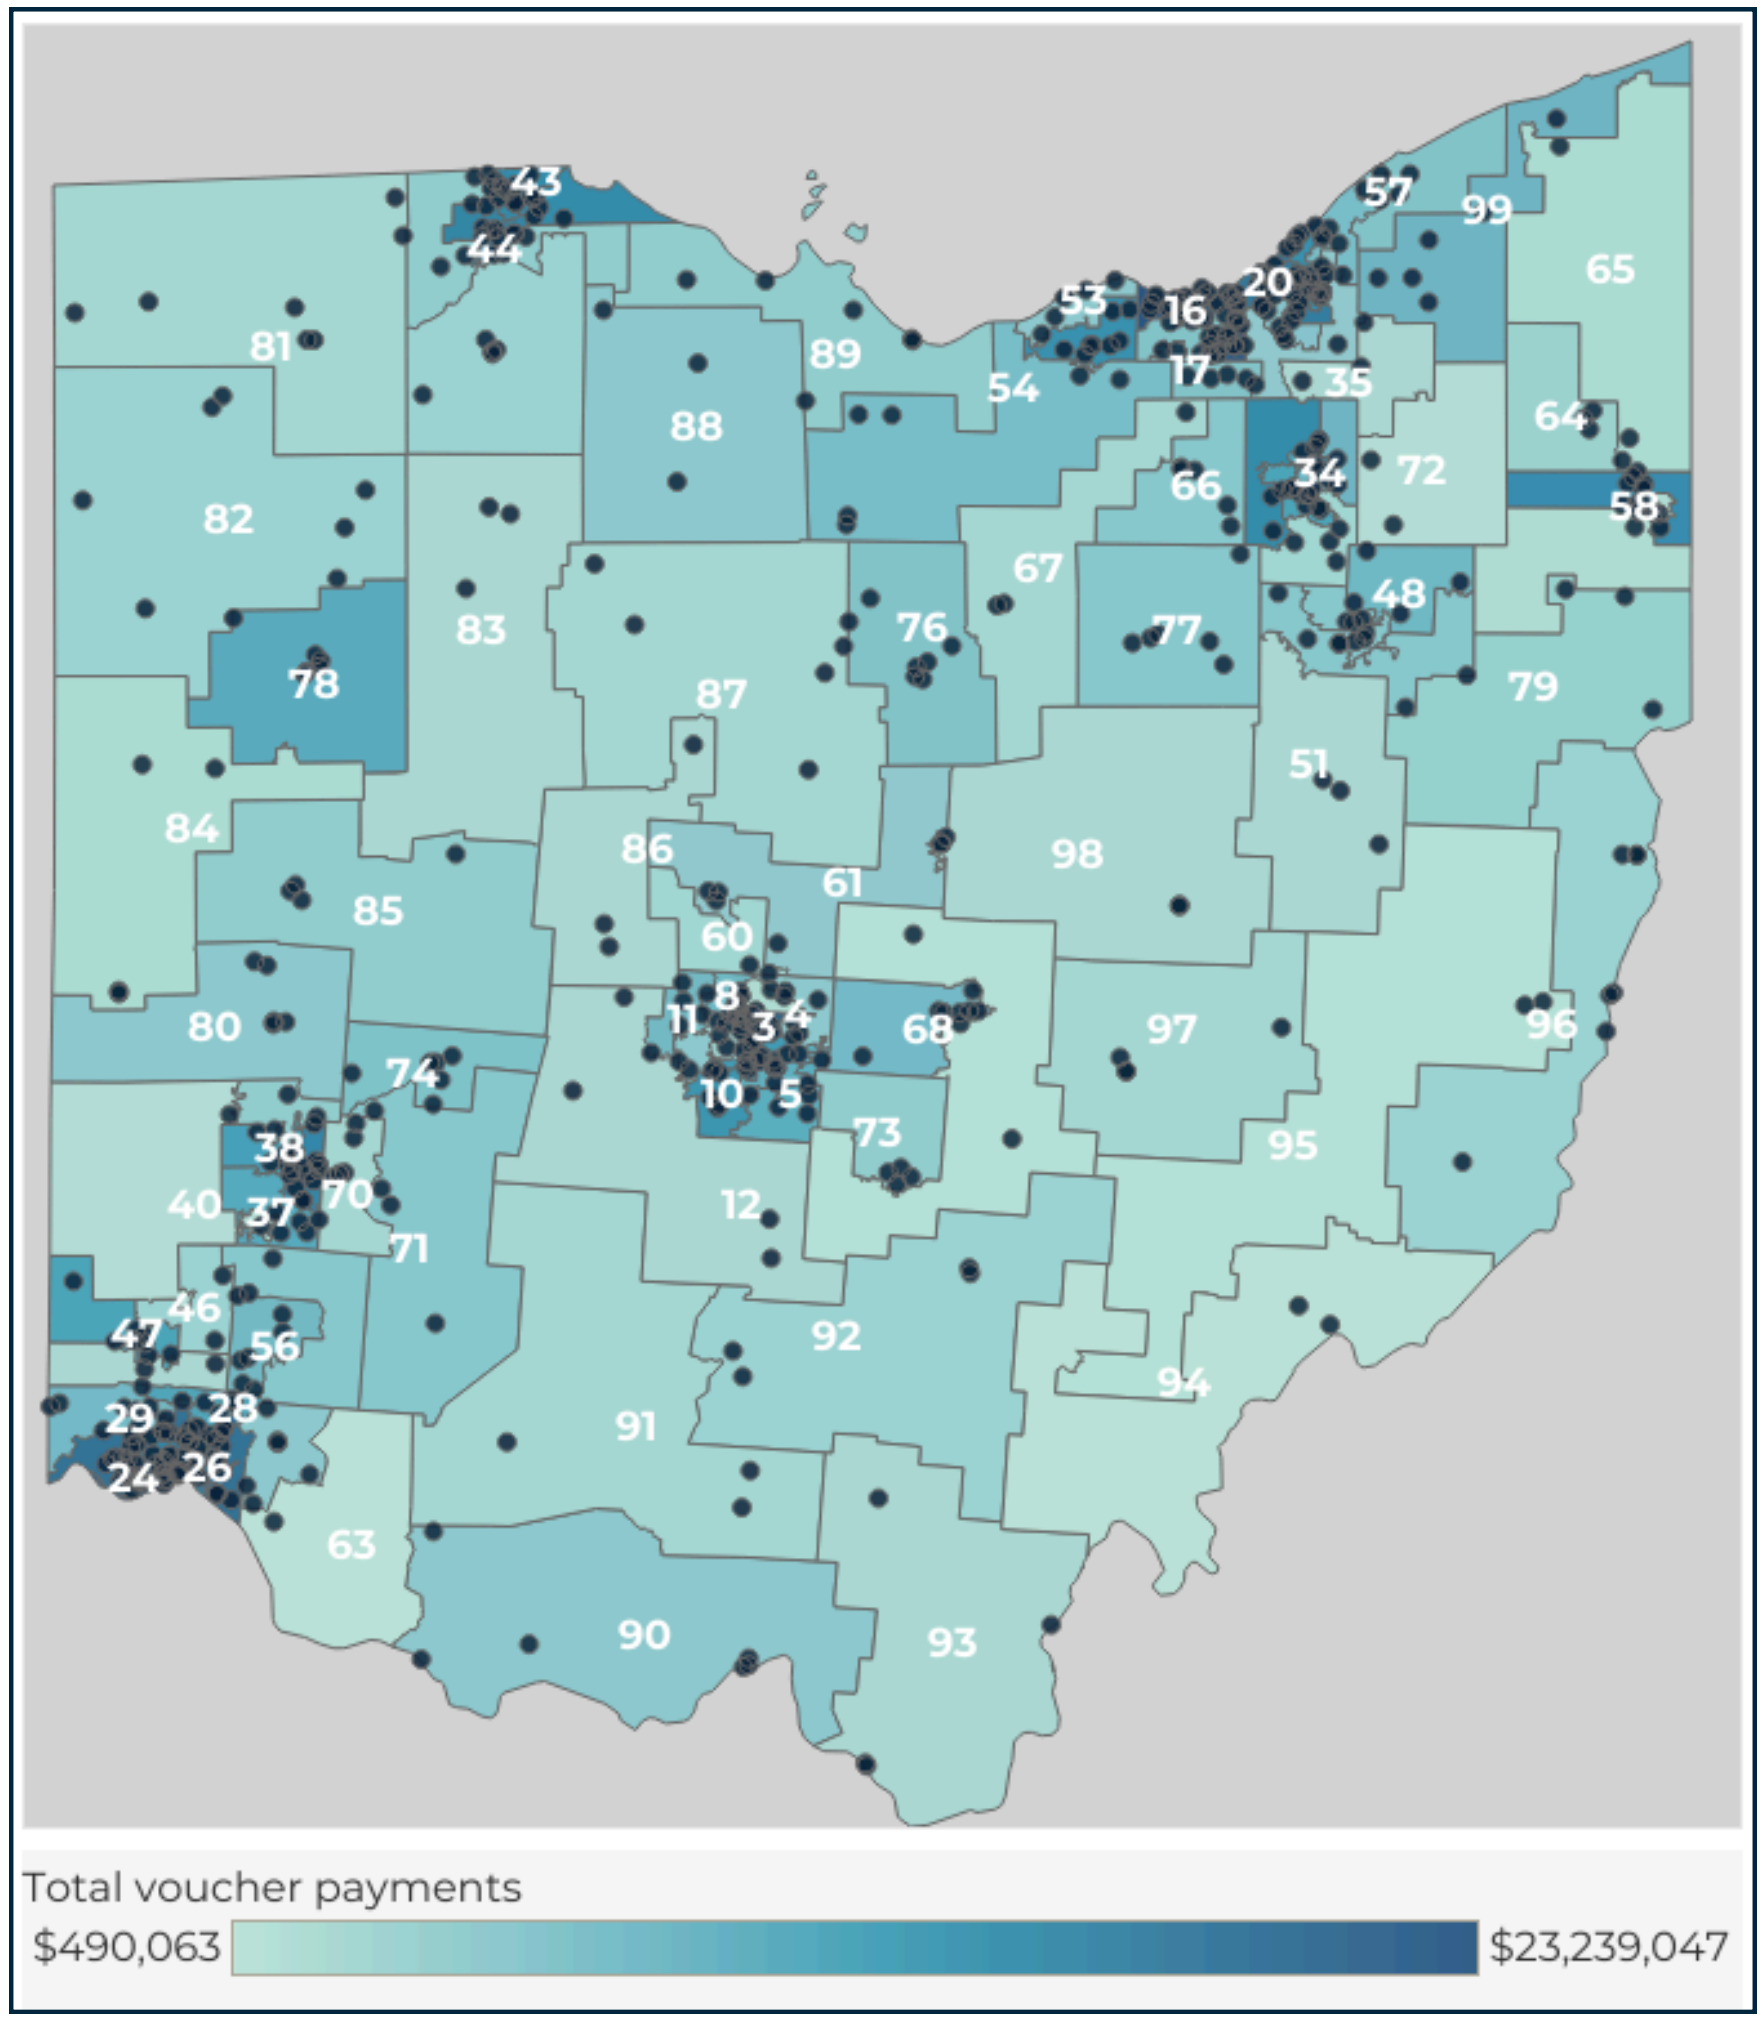
Email them at rep90@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2124

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 91

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 91 there are

3

private voucher schools attended by 413

voucher students.

In District 91 there are 45

public schools attended by 16,785

students.

Contact Representative Peterson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

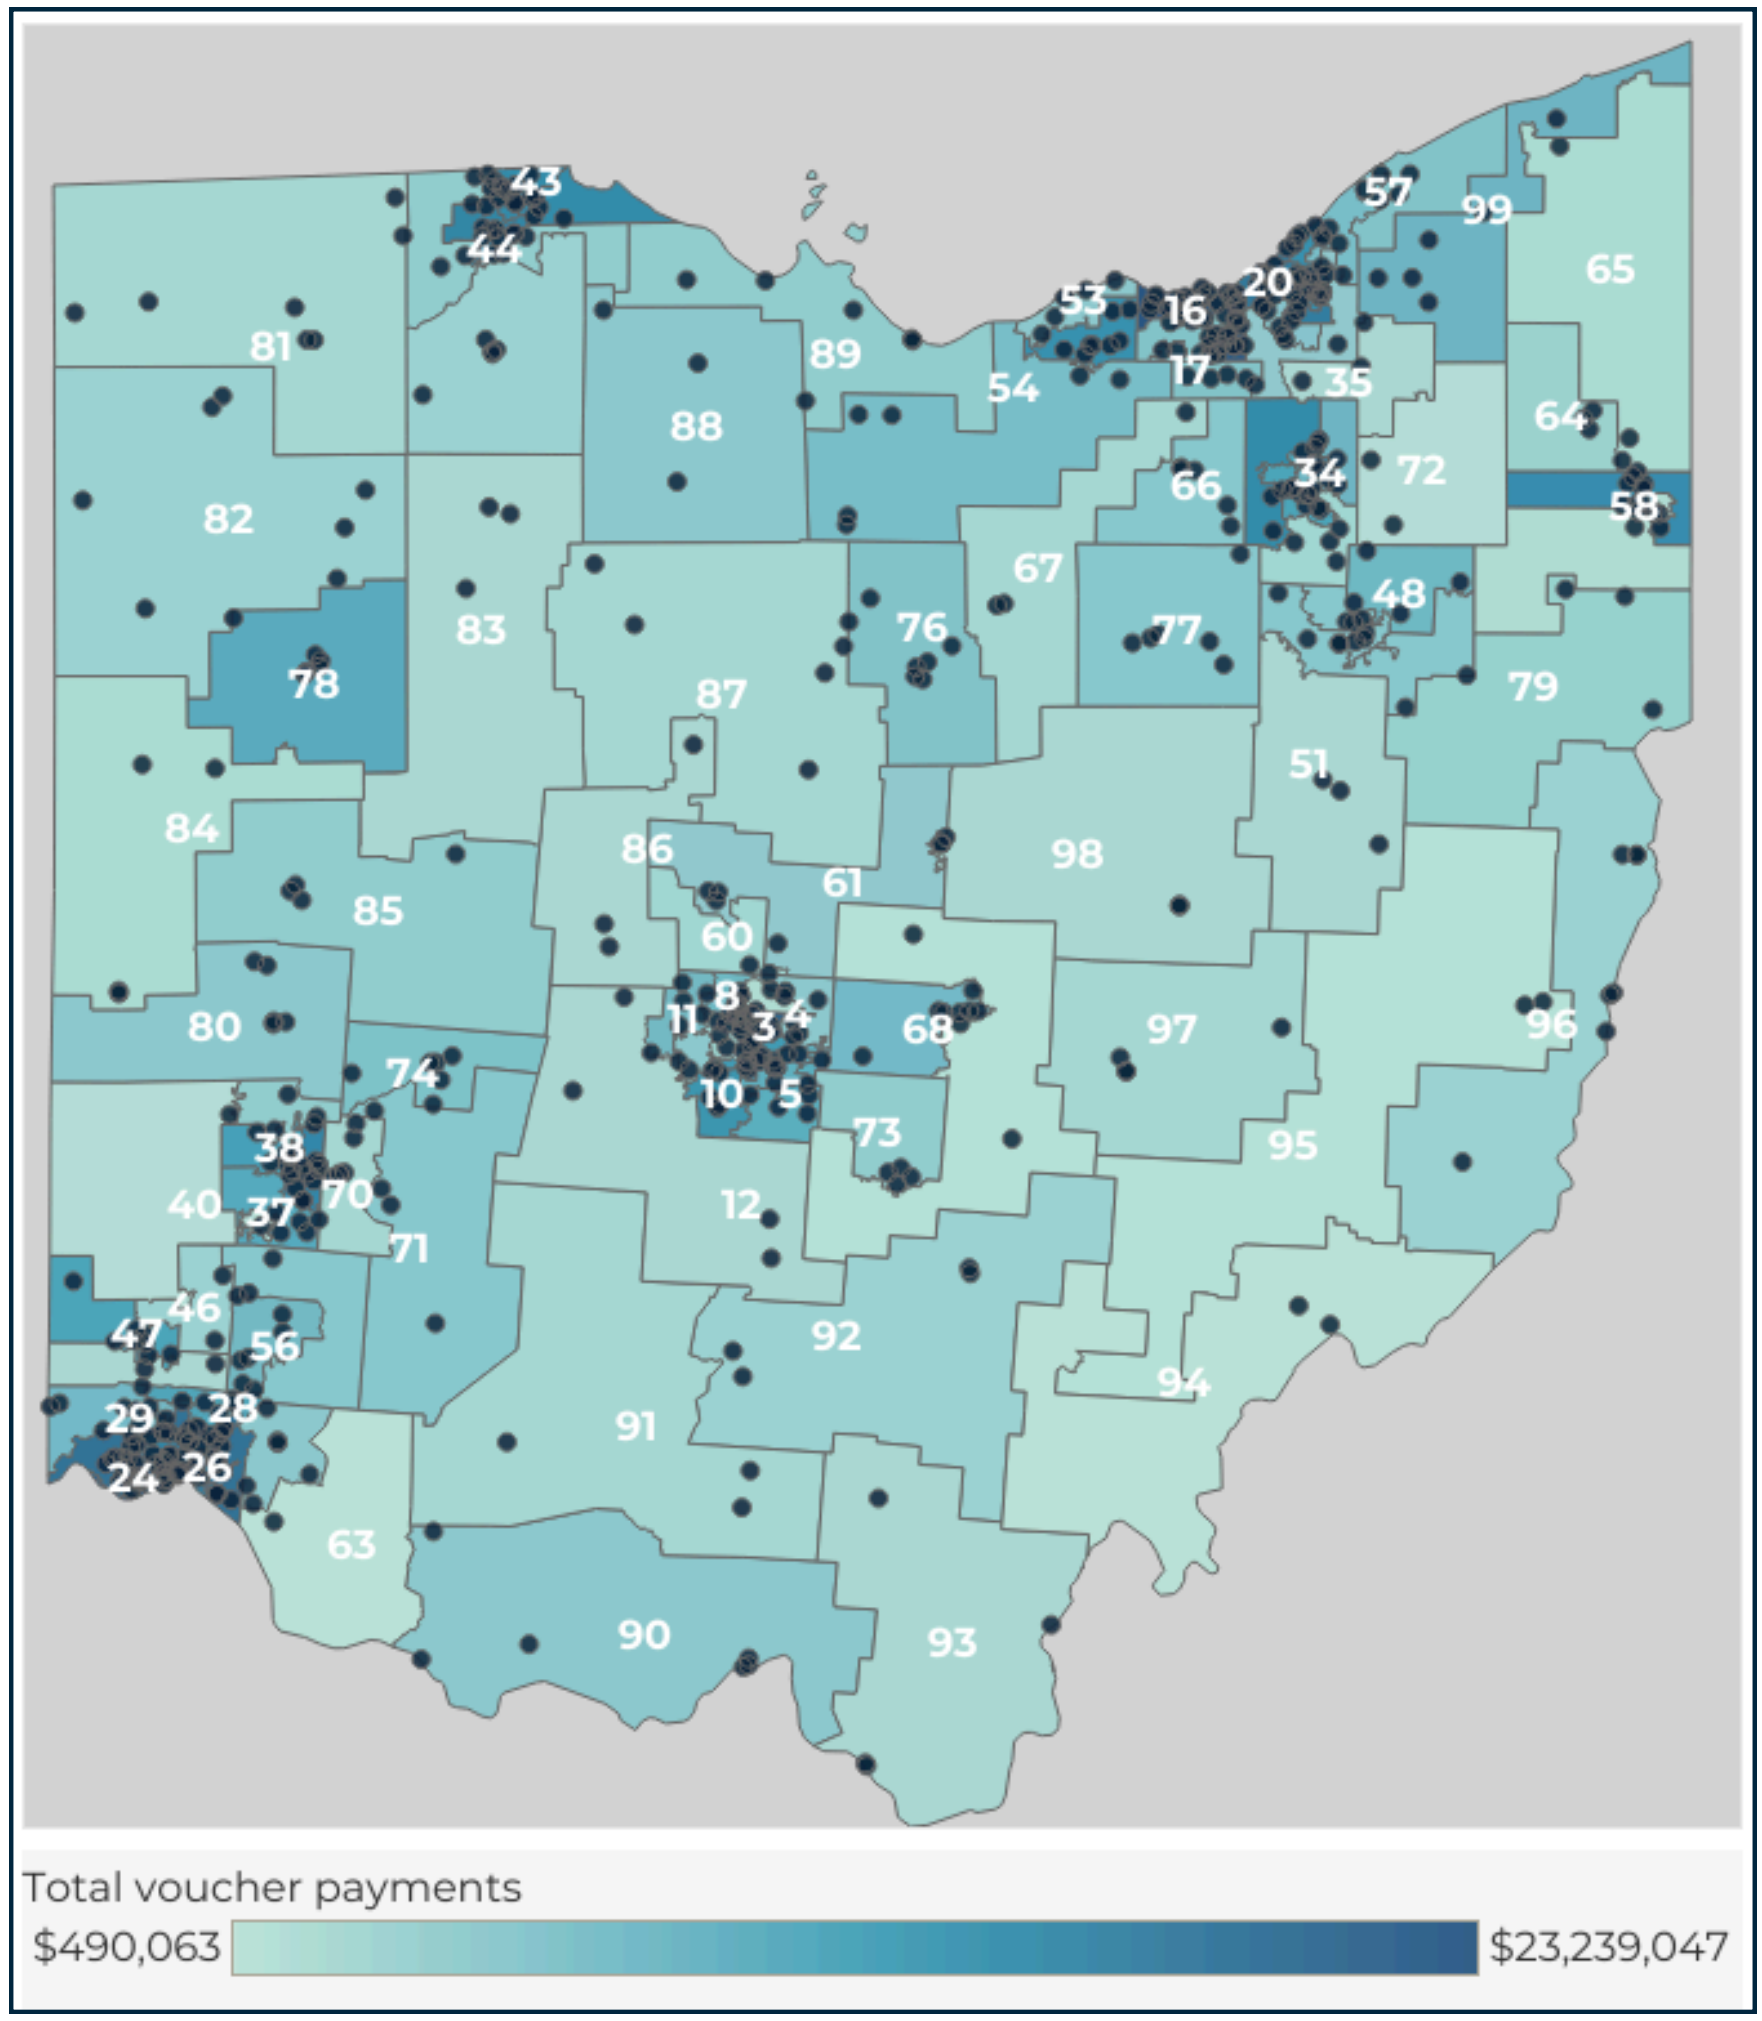
Email them at rep91@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3506

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 92

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 92 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 619

voucher students.

In District 92 there are 34

public schools attended by 15,270

students.

Contact Representative Johnson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

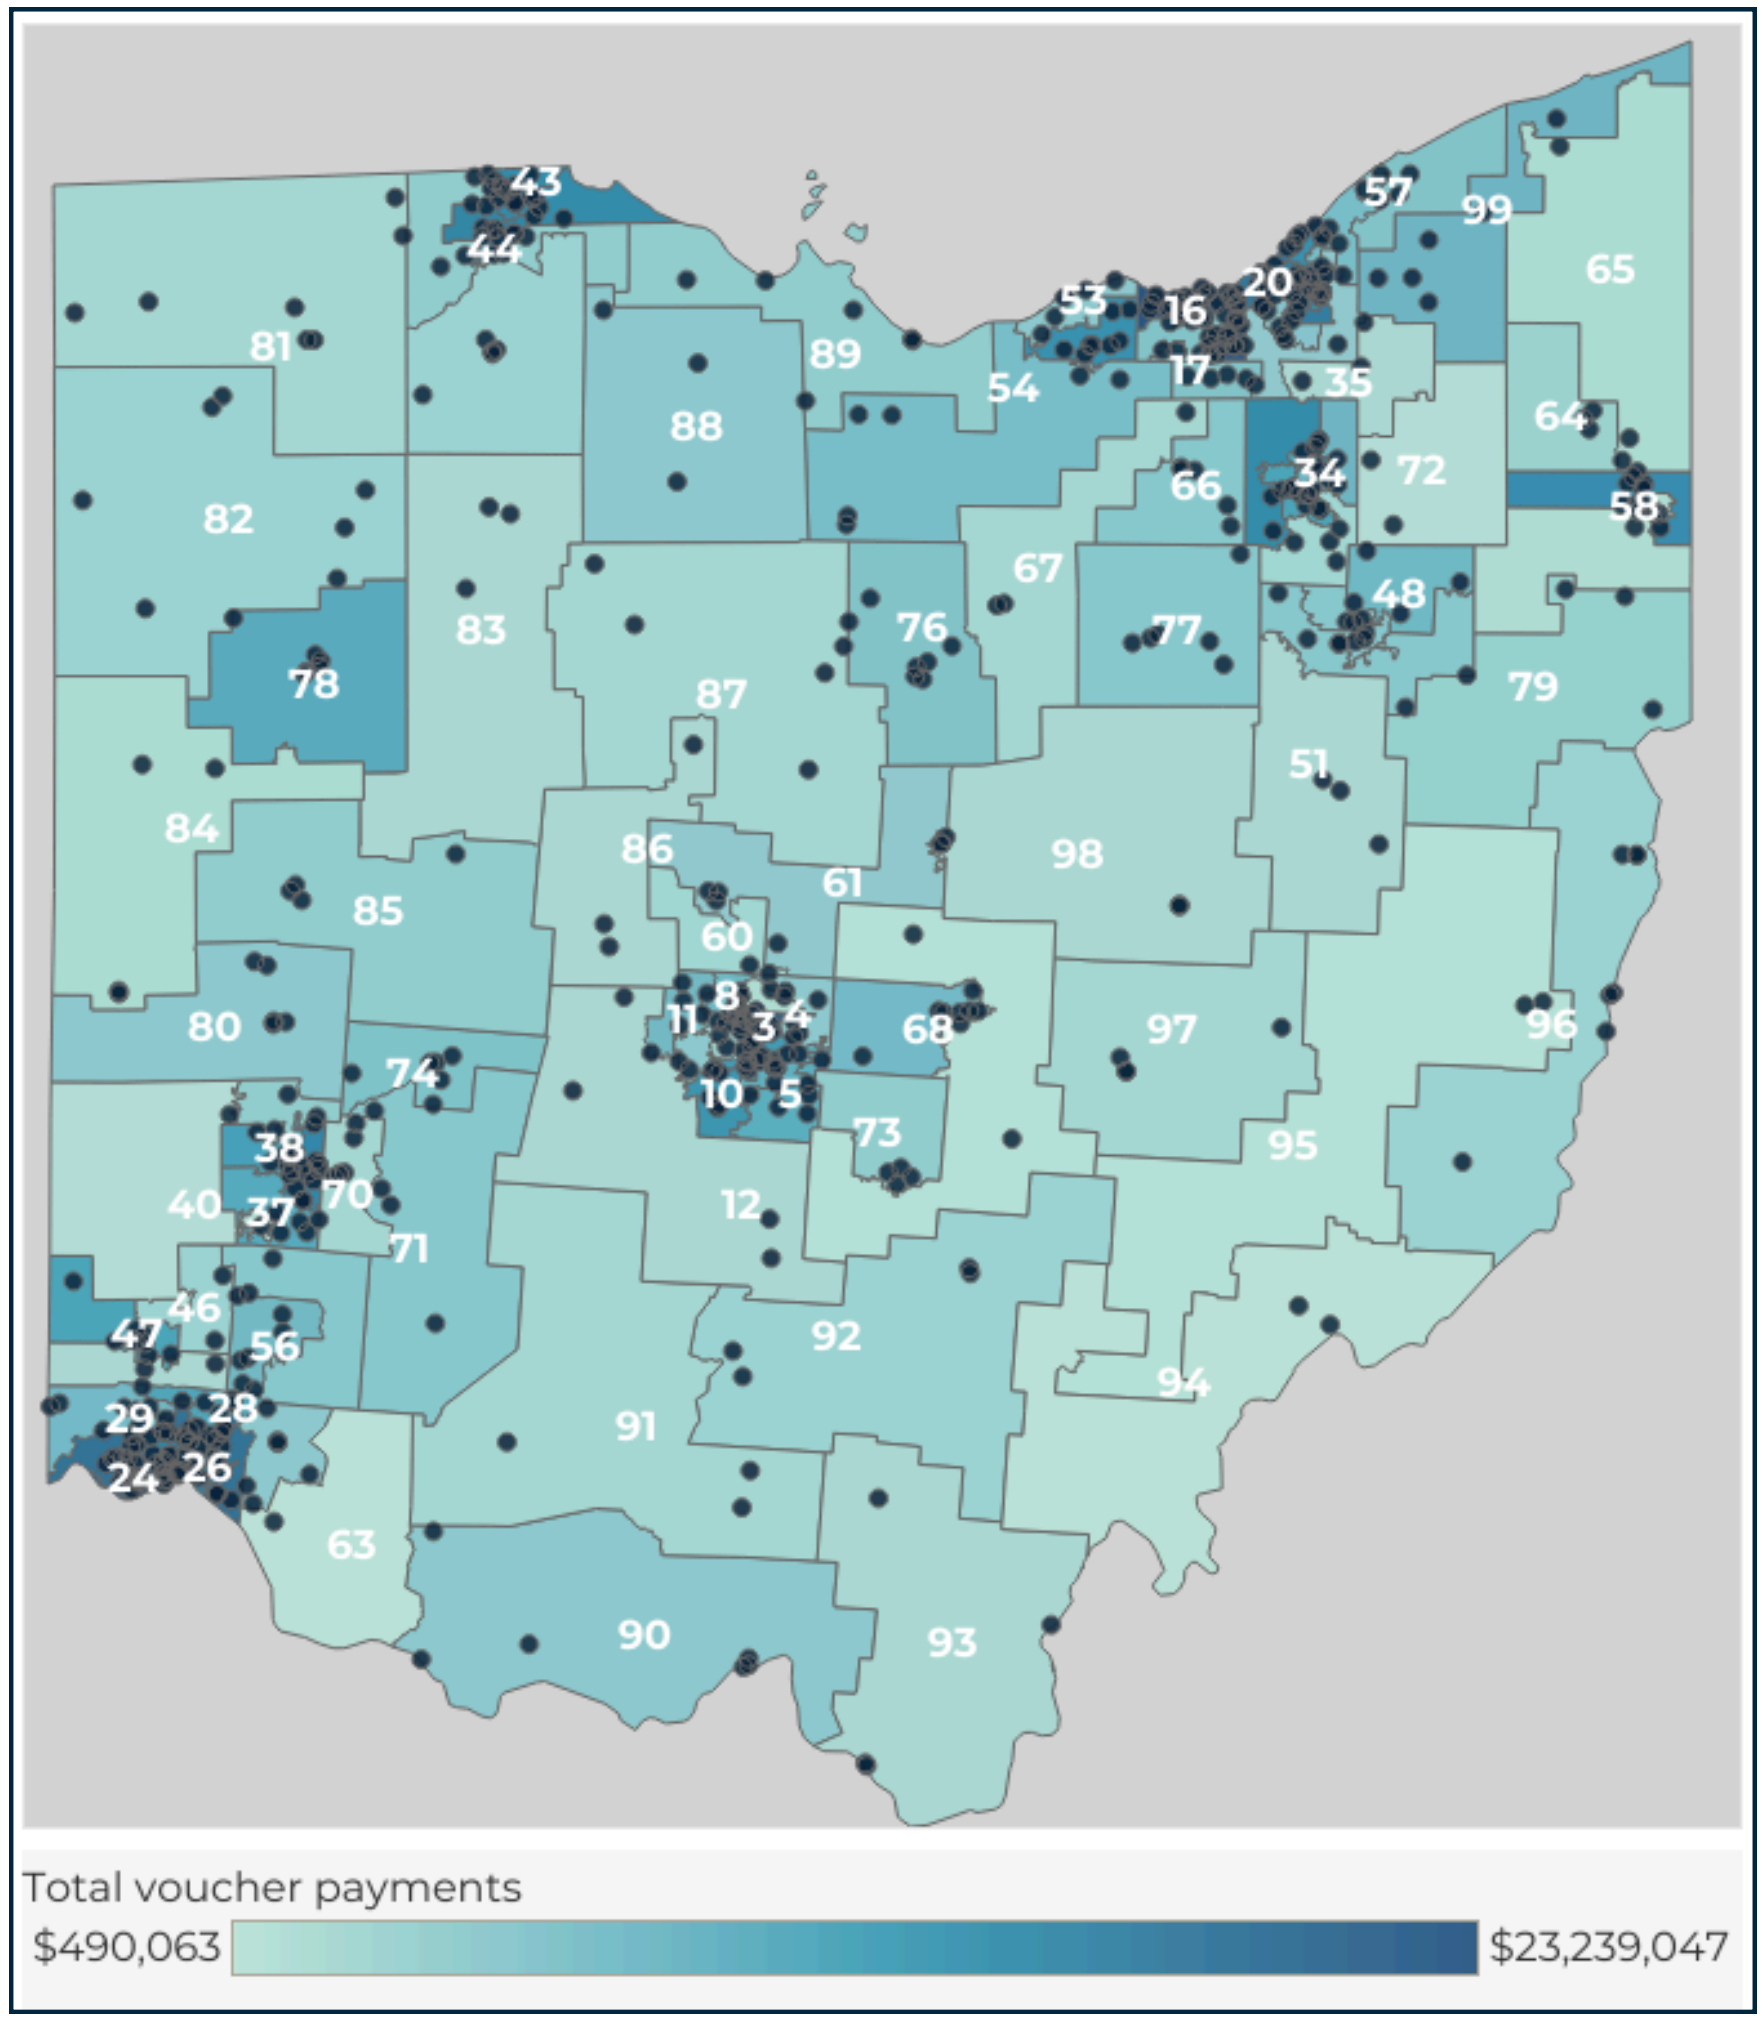
Email them at rep92@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-7928

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 93

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 93 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 424

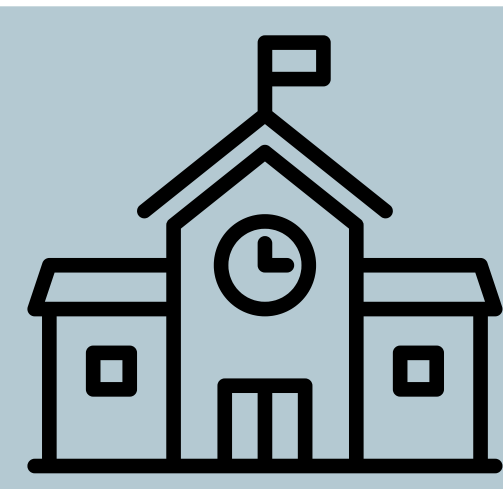
voucher students.



In District 93 there are

47

public schools attended by 16,514

students.

Contact Representative Stephens and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

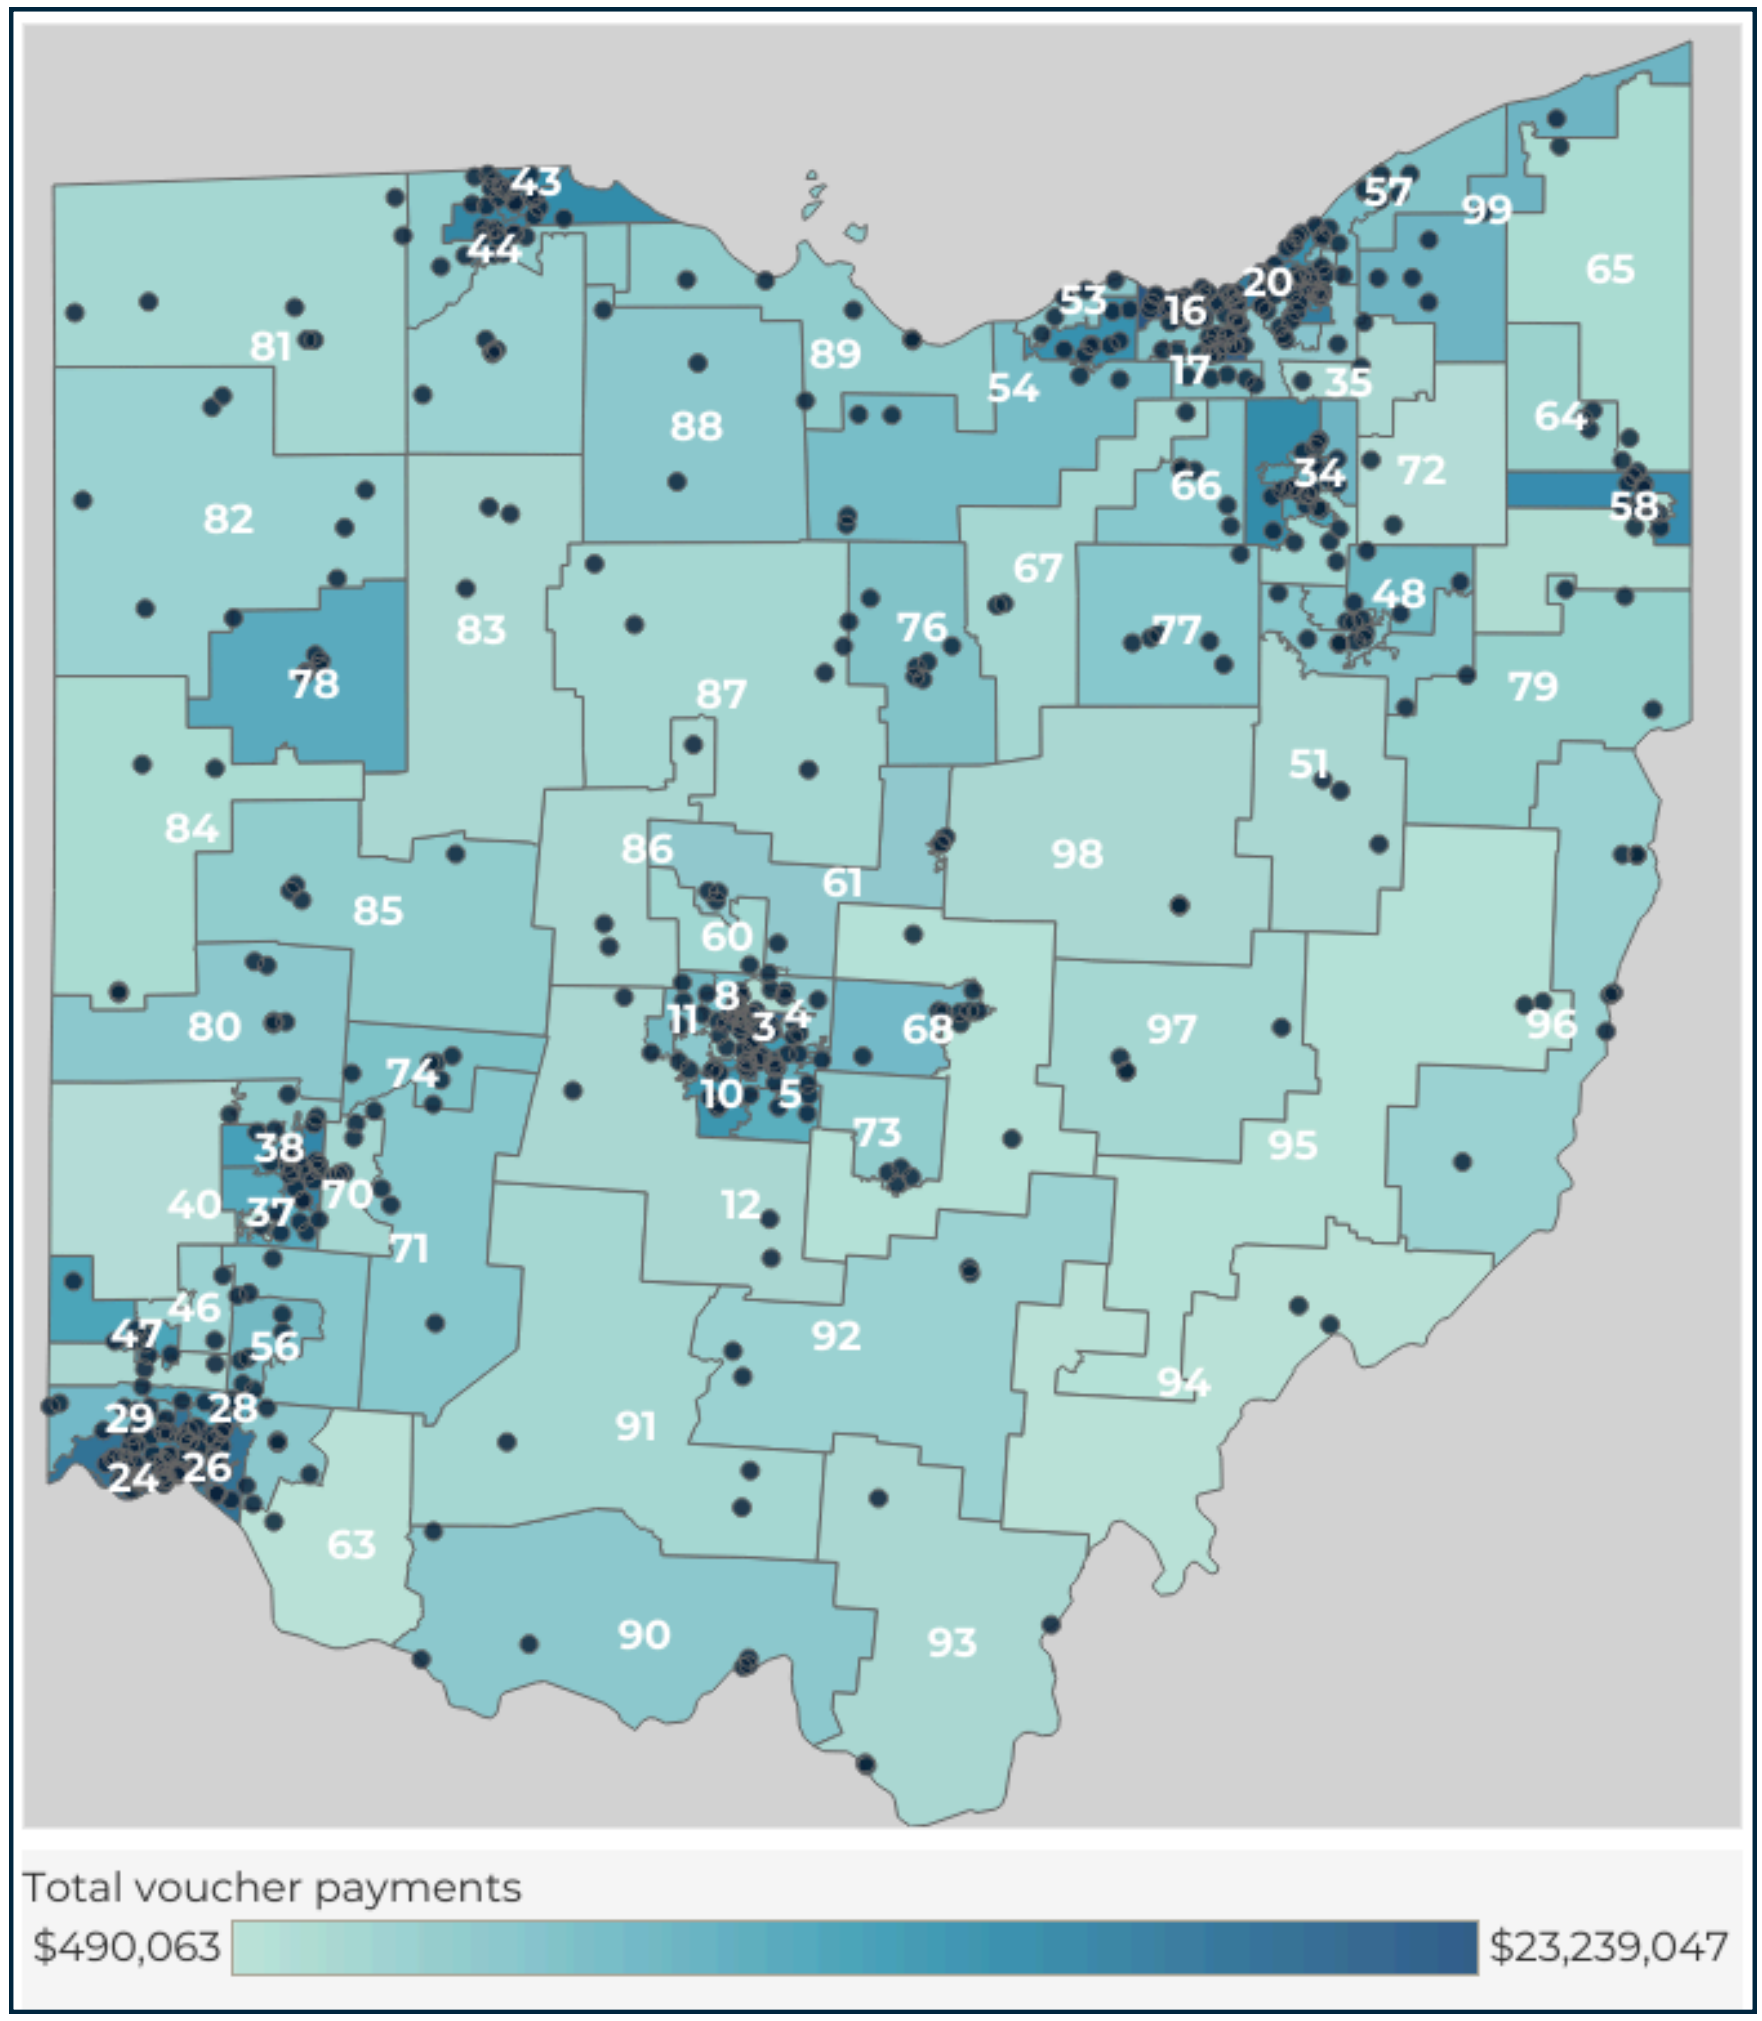
Email them at rep93@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1366

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 94

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 94 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 154

voucher students.

In District 94 there are 45

public schools attended by 14,657

students.

Contact Representative Ritter and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

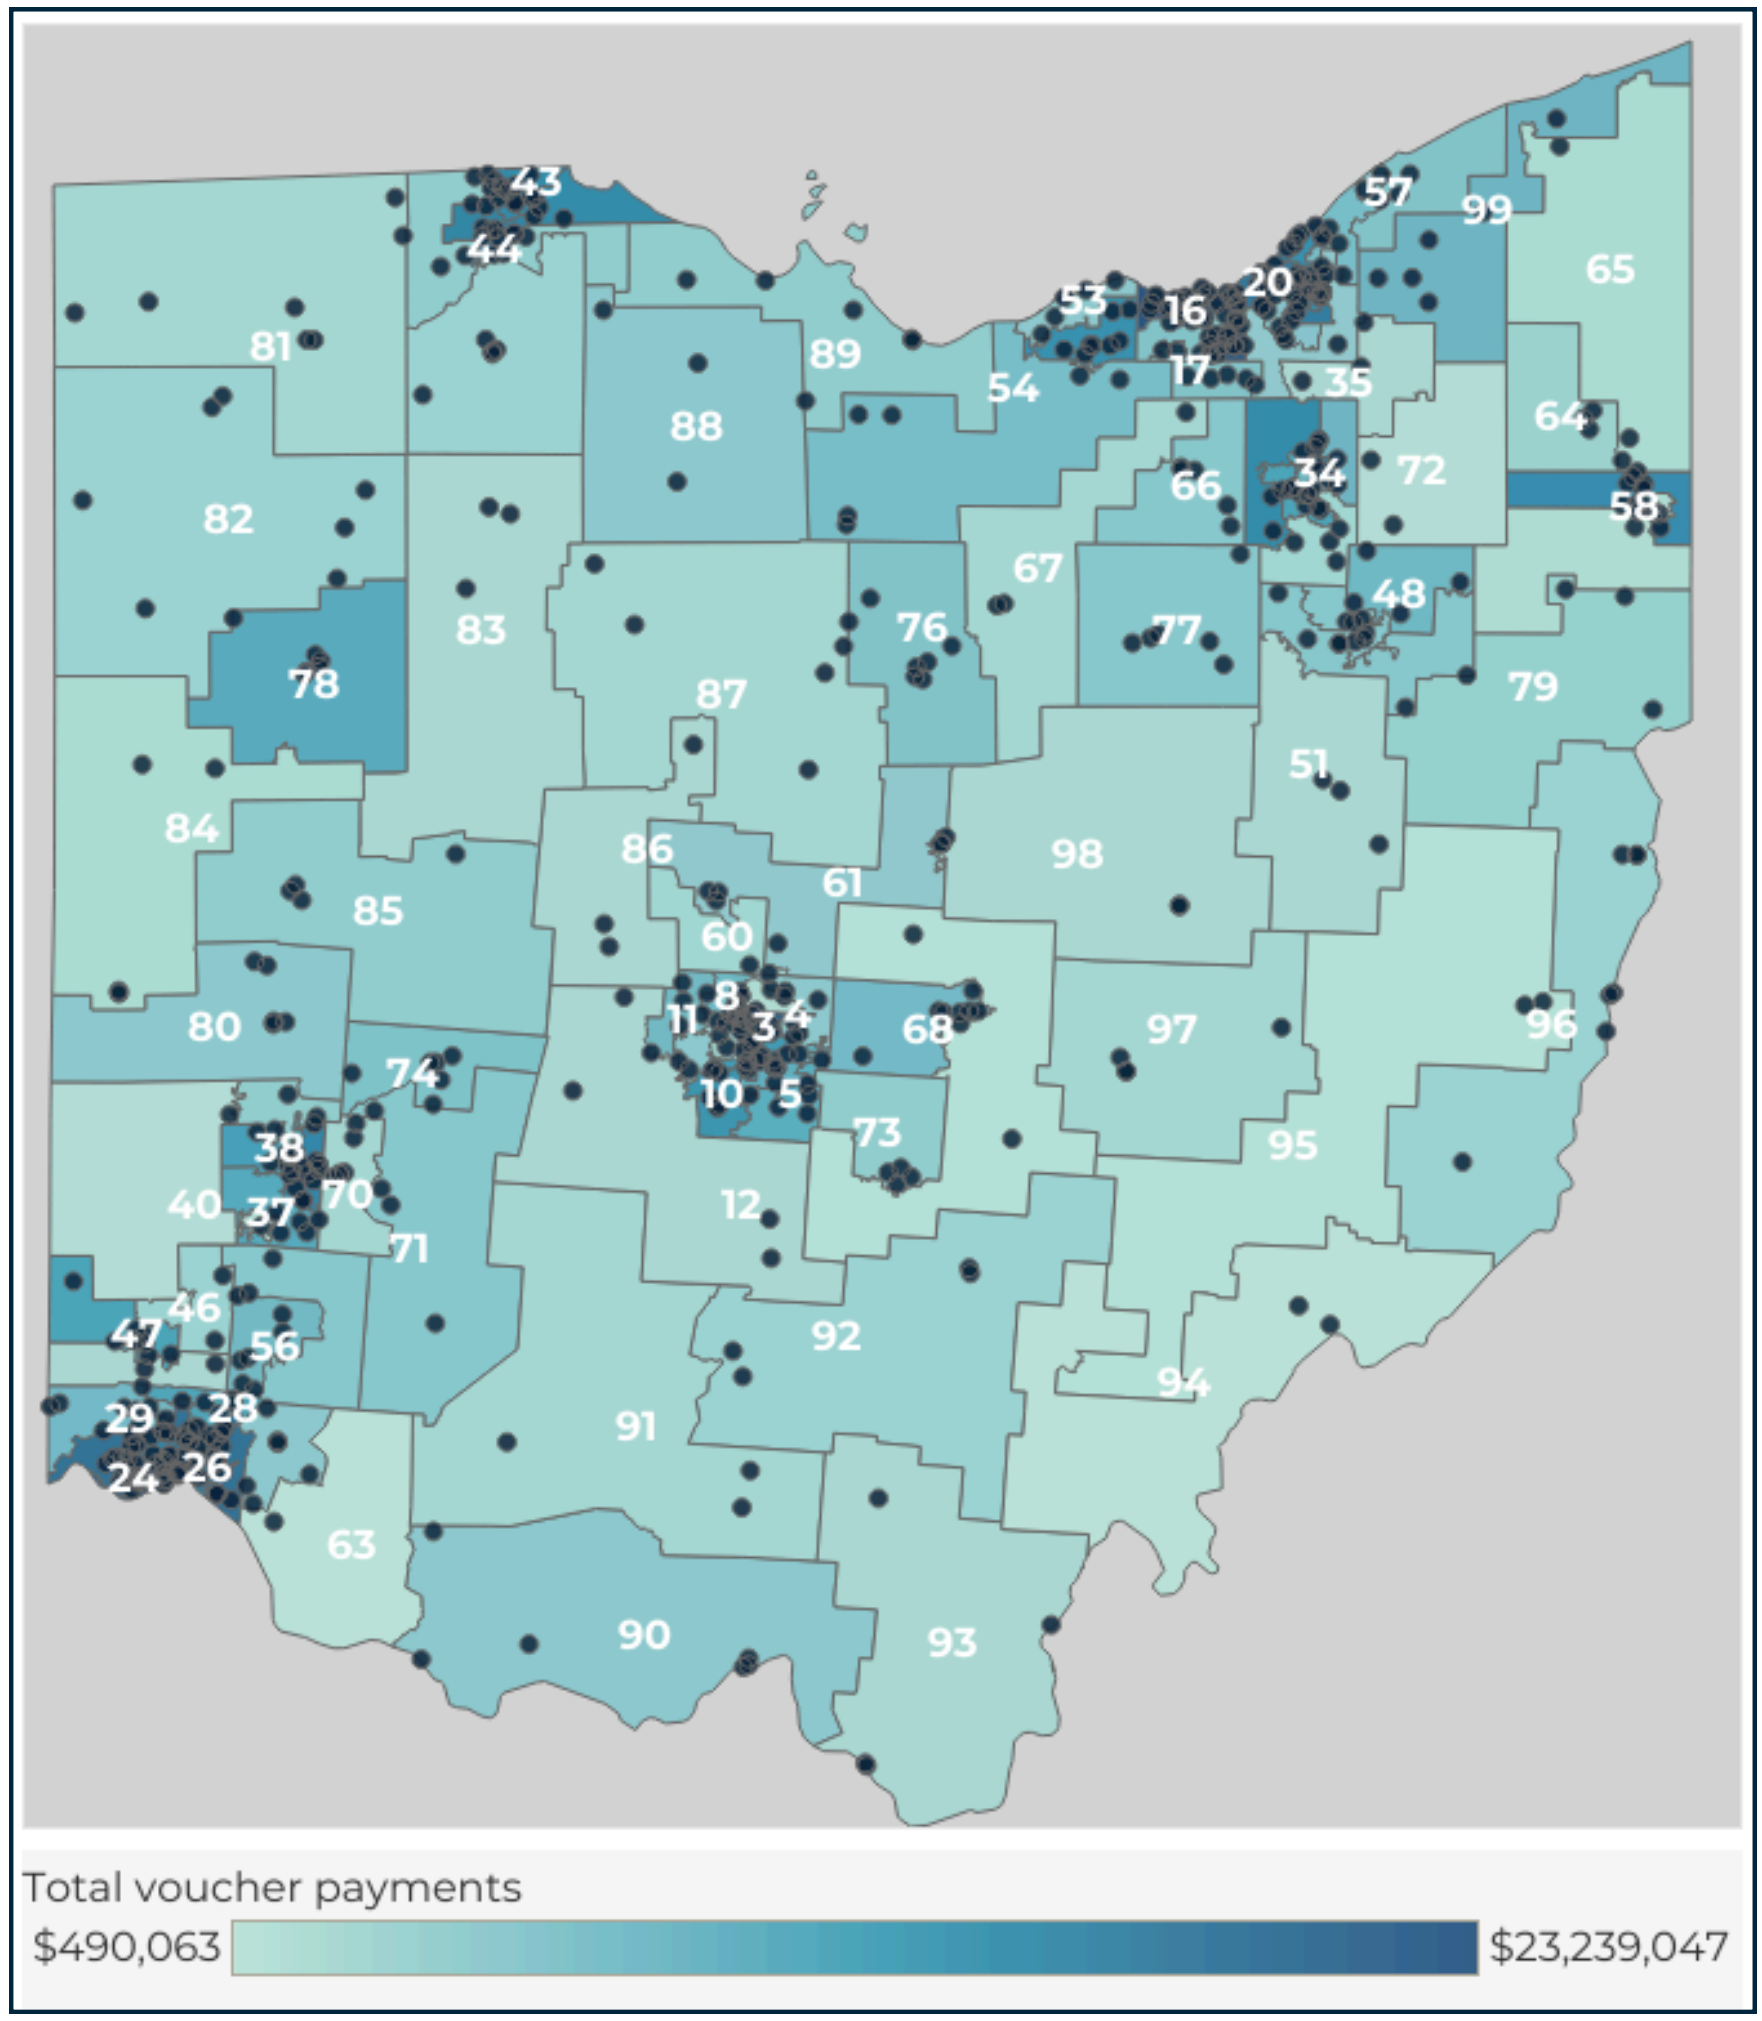
Email them at rep94@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2158

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 95

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 95 there are

2

private voucher schools attended by 260

voucher students.

In District 95 there are 30

public schools attended by 11,225

students.

Contact Representative Jones and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

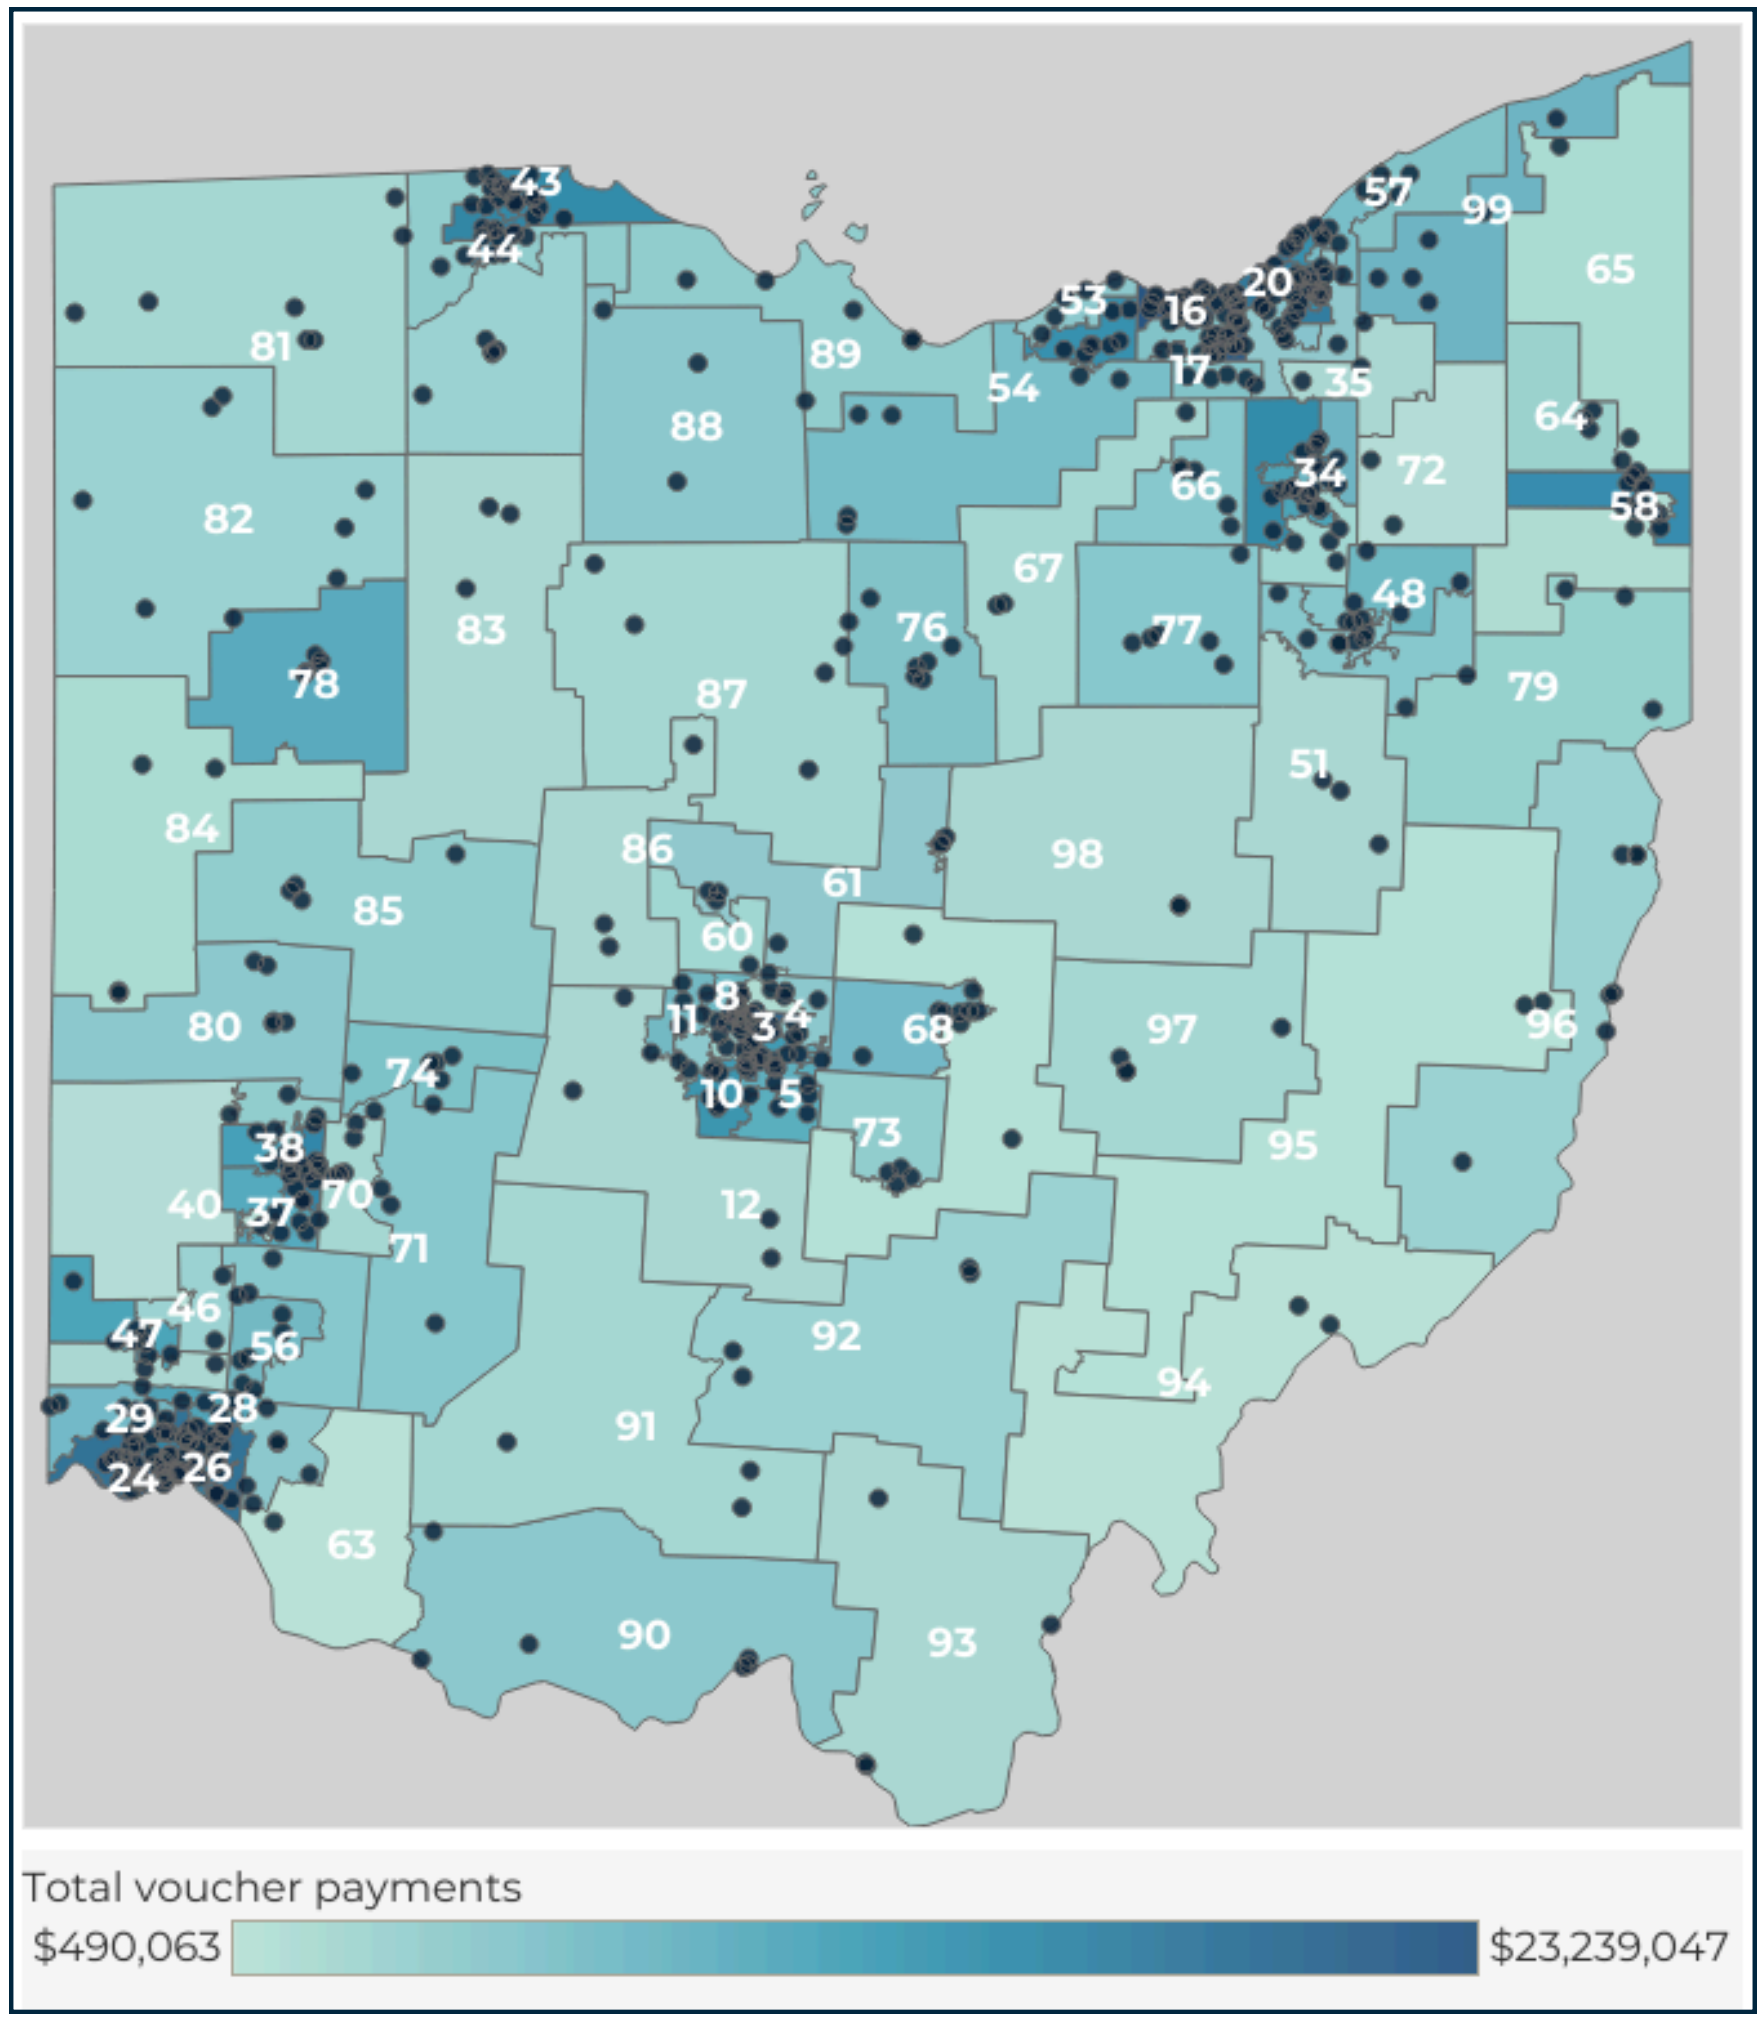
Email them at rep95@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-8728

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 96

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 96 there are

8

private voucher schools attended by 827

voucher students.

In District 96 there are

43

public schools attended by 13,193

students.

Contact Representative Ferguson and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

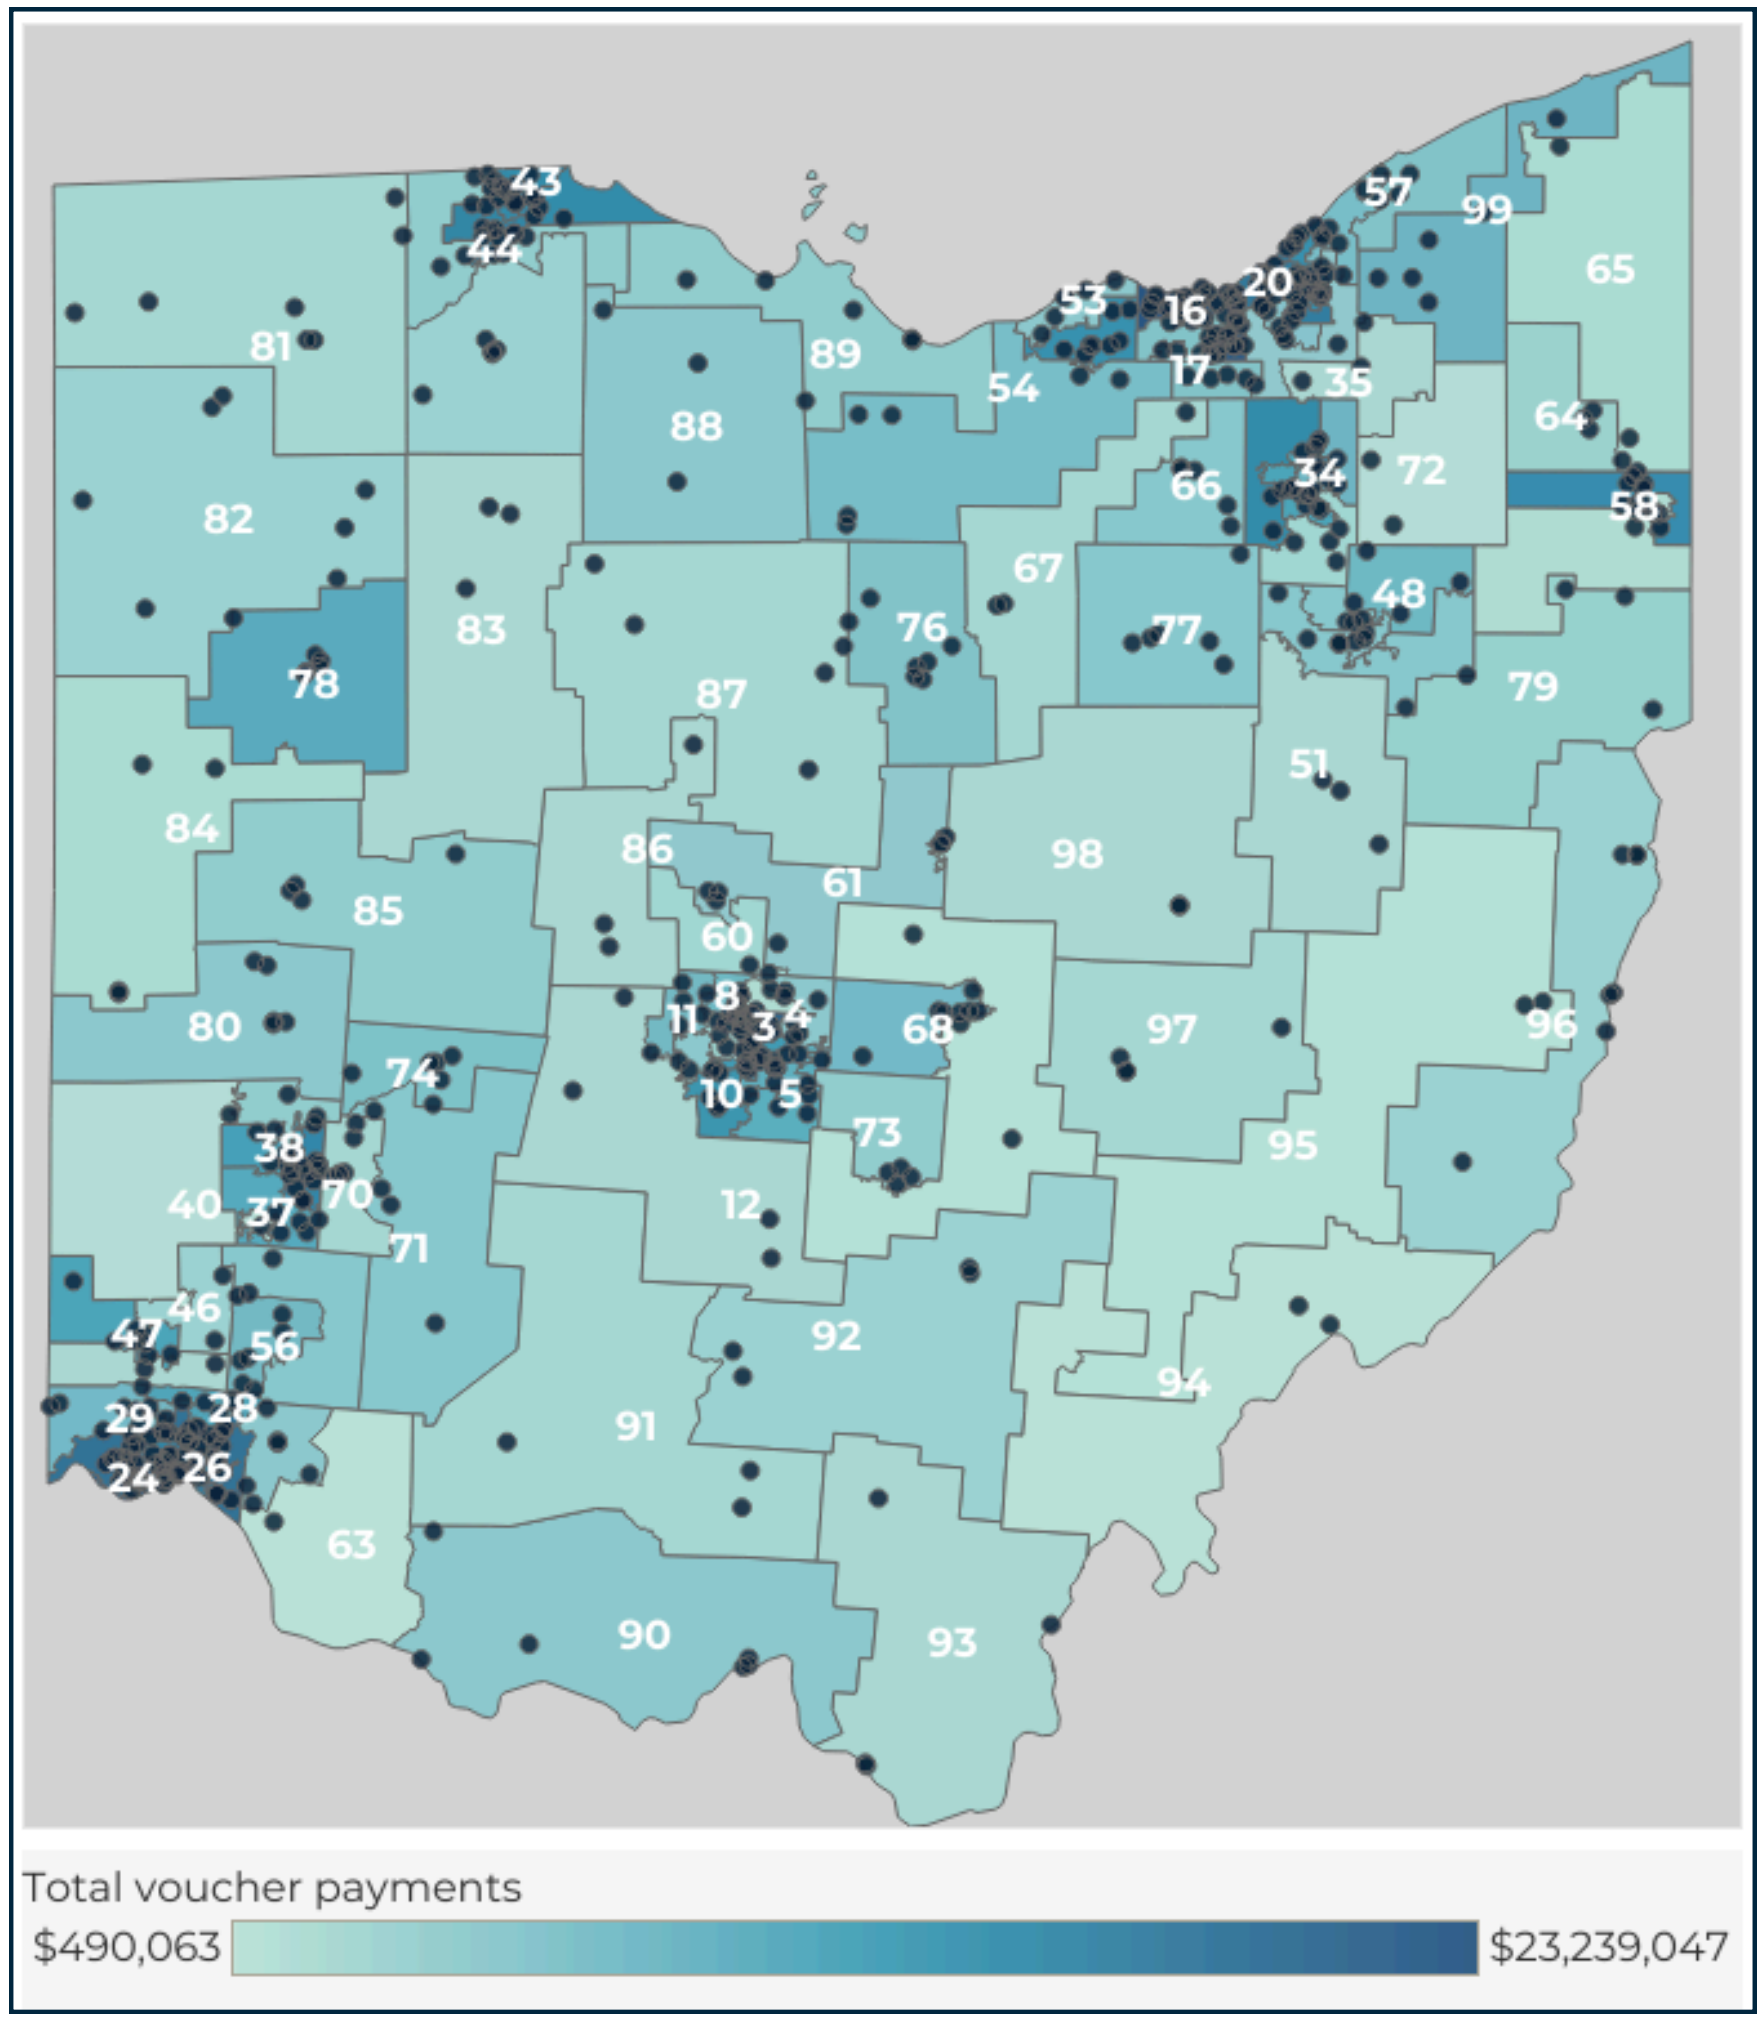
Email them at rep96@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-3735

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 97

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 97 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 436

voucher students.

In District 97 there are 35

public schools attended by 15,528

students.

Contact Representative Holmes and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

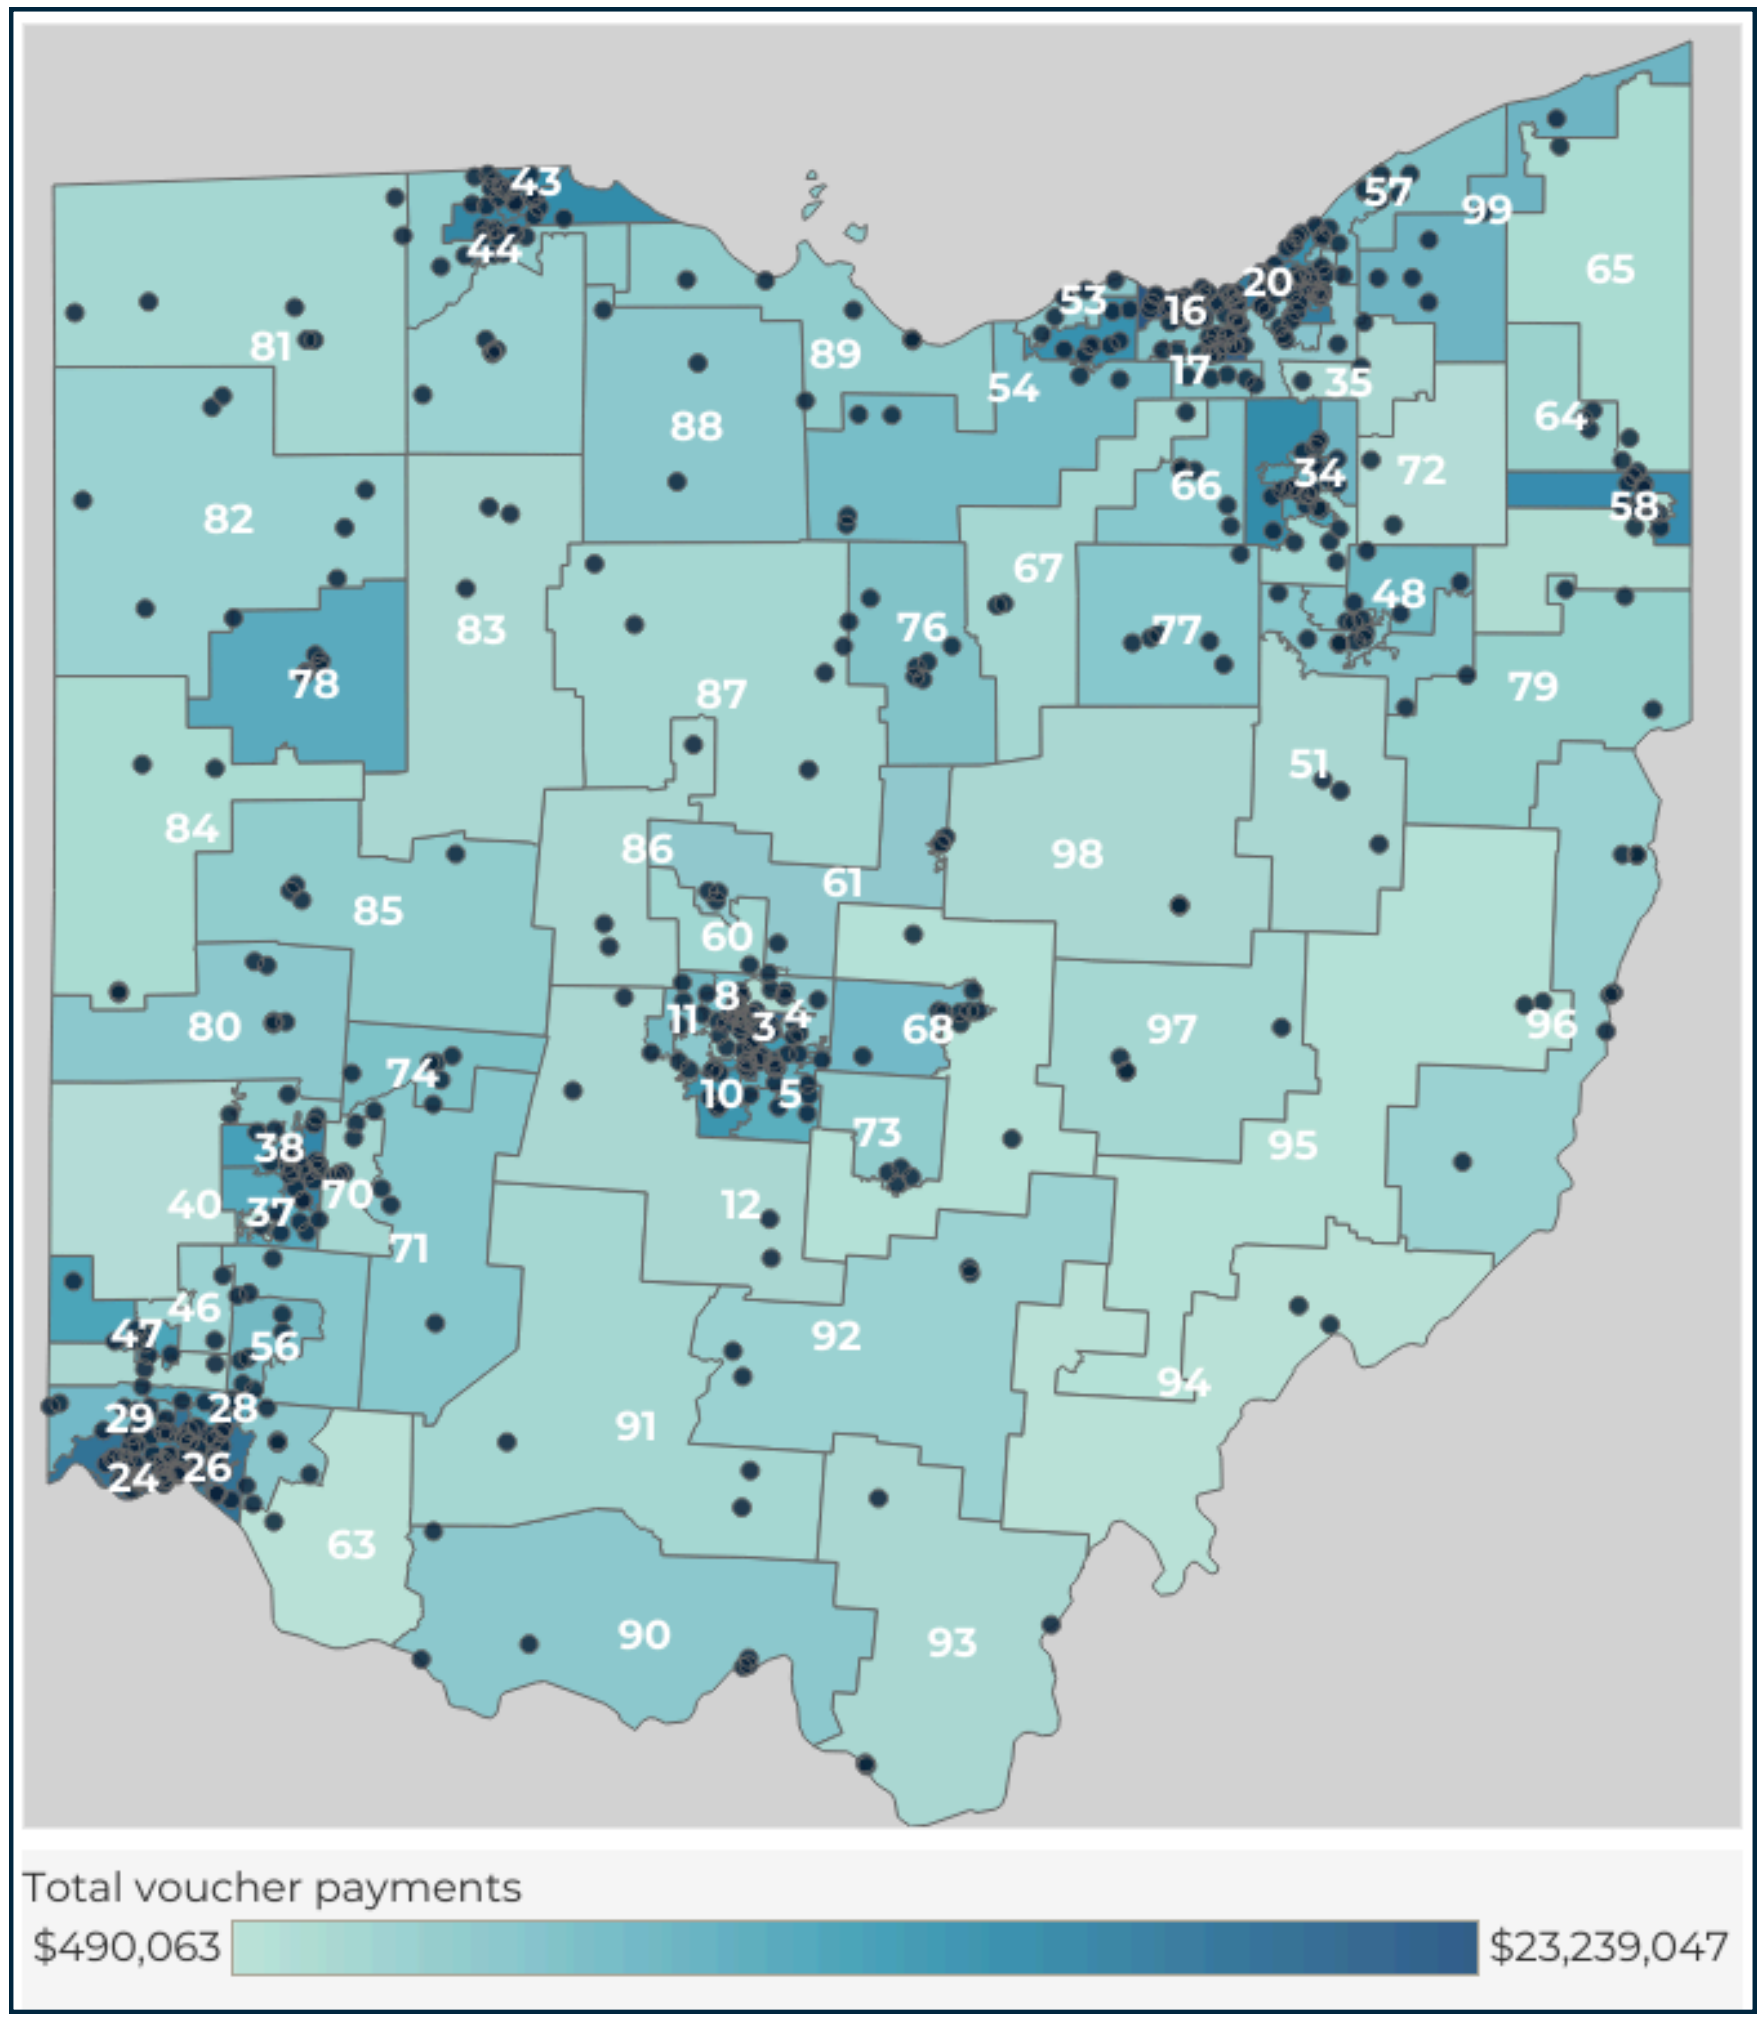
Email them at rep97@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-644-6014

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 98

Policy Matters Ohio

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 98 there are

4 private voucher schools attended by 423

voucher students.

In District 98 there are 35

public schools attended by 12,269

students.

Contact Representative Hiner and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

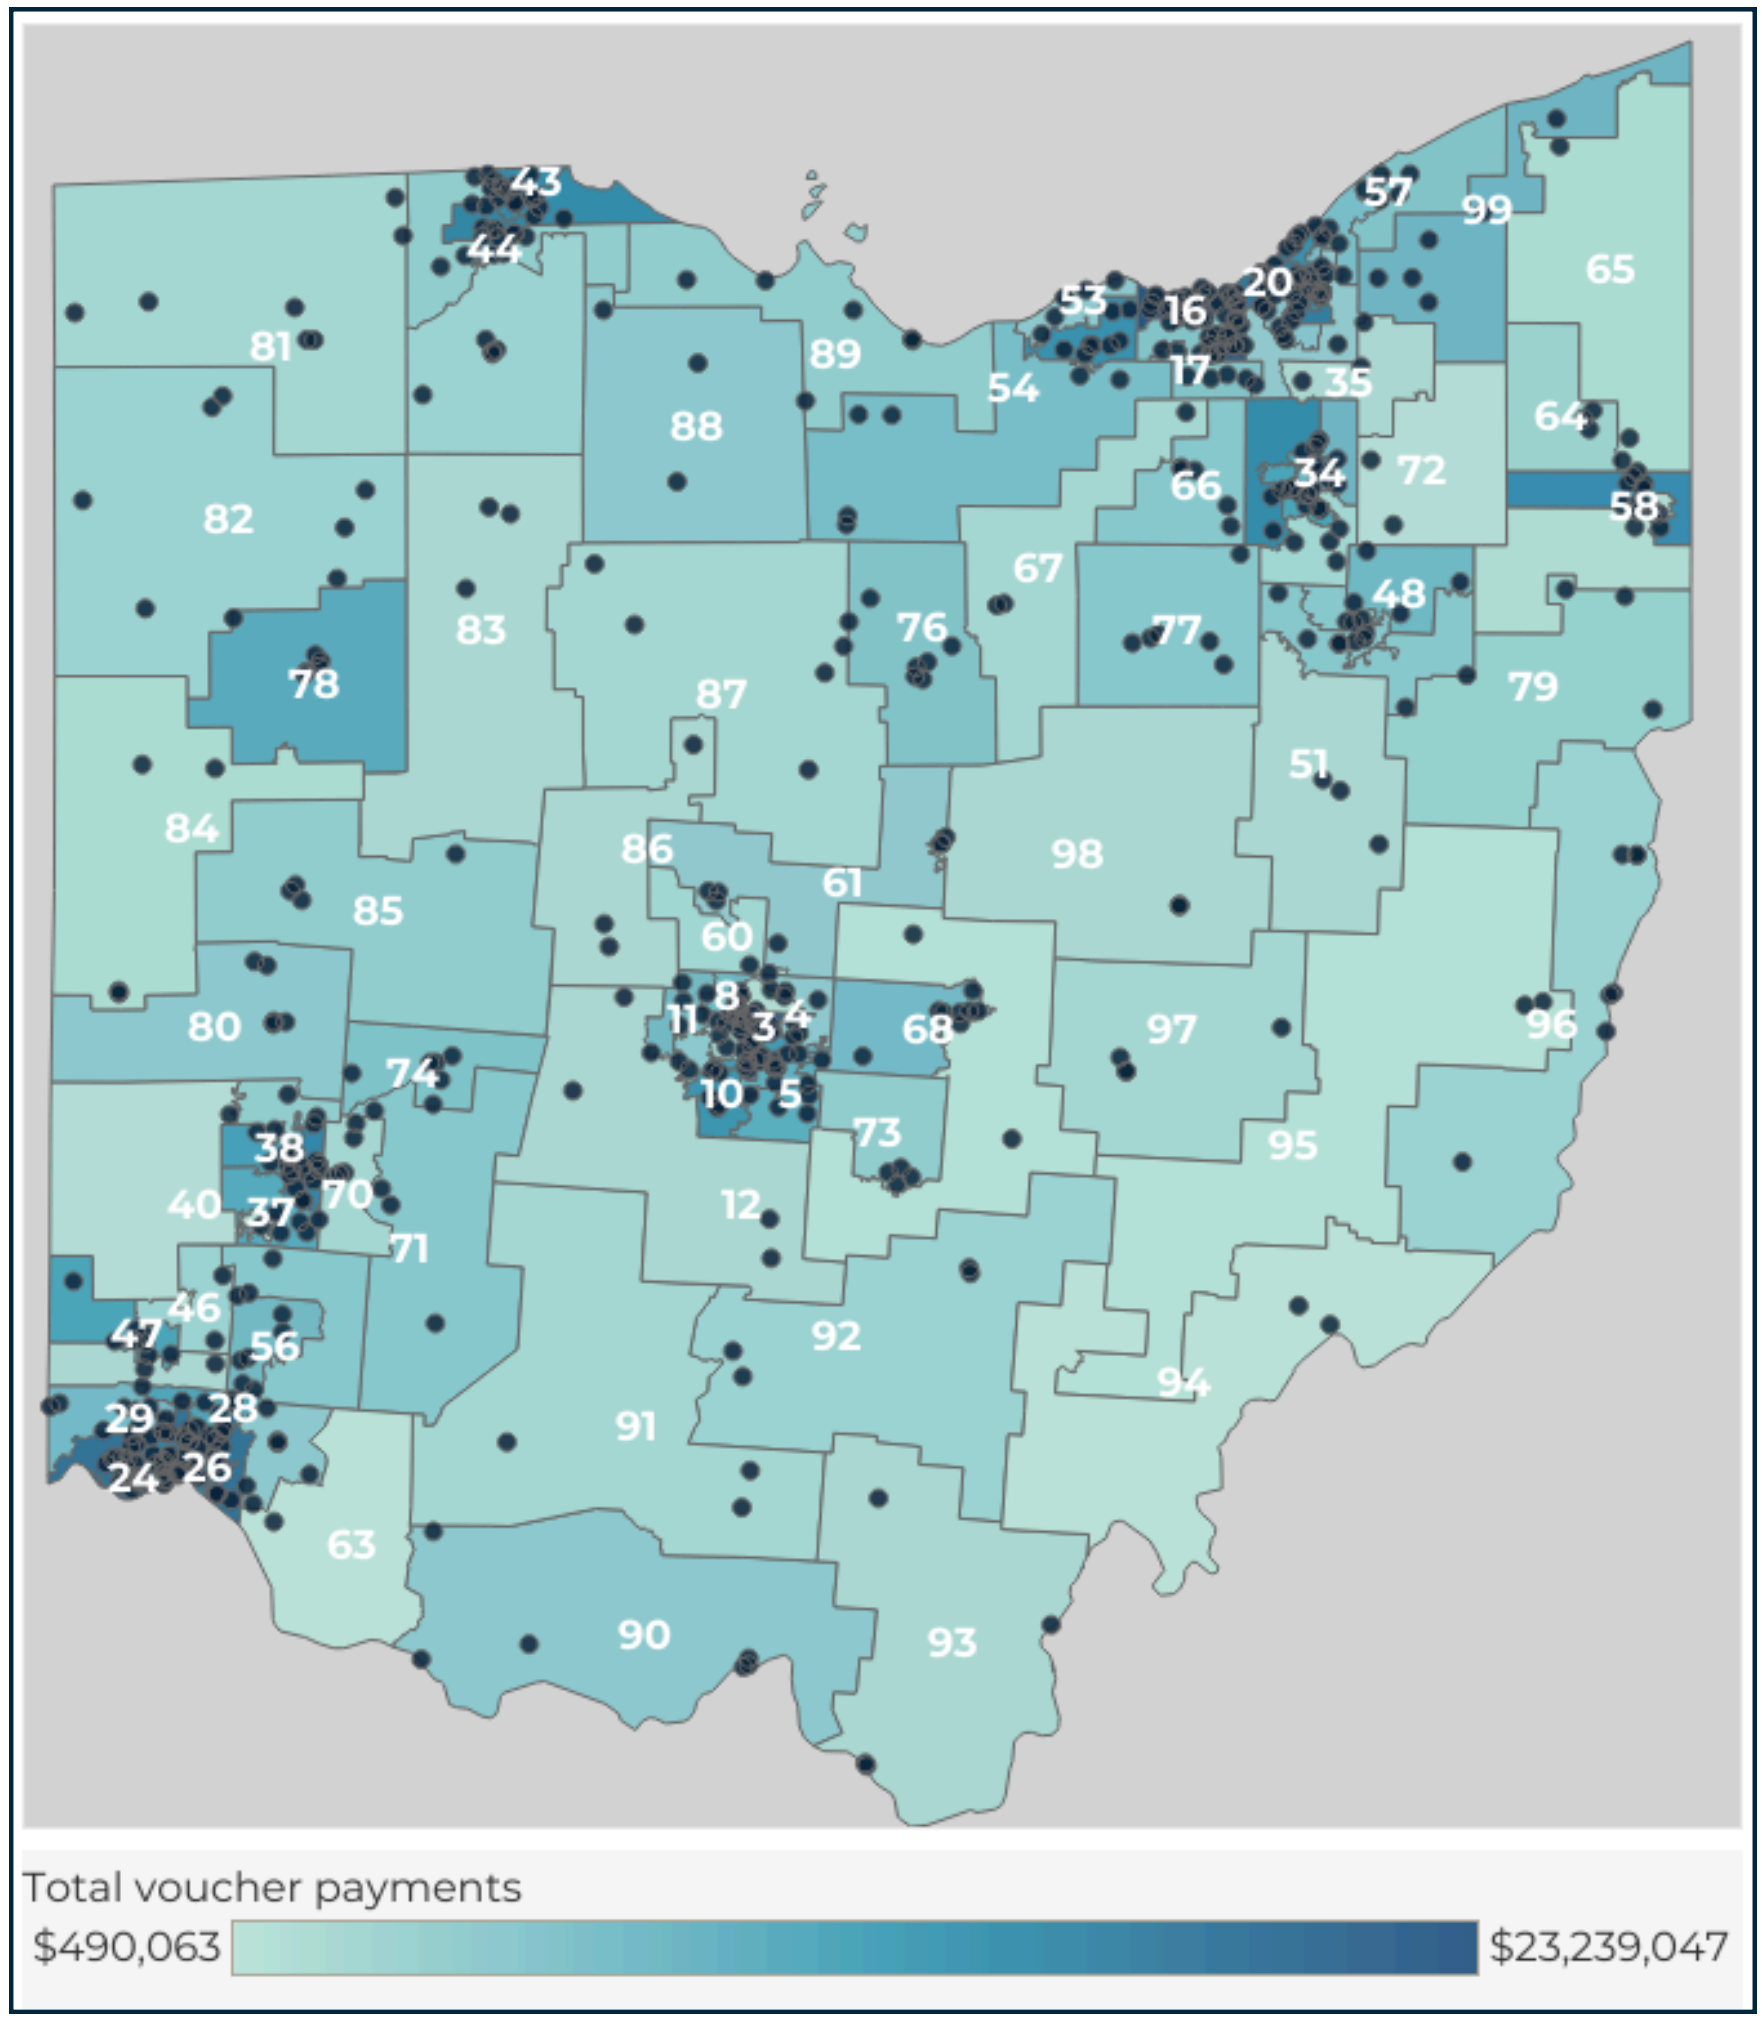
Email them at rep98@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-2994

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org

Mapping vouchers in Ohio

Vouchers use public dollars to pay private school tuition. Private schools can reject students with disabilities or behavior issues, or if they don't do well academically. They don't operate transparently like public schools do and aren't held accountable like public schools.

Private schools are concentrated mostly in Ohio's metro areas, siphoning public funds that should go to public schools from smaller cities and rural areas in particular.



Schools that accept EdChoice, EdChoice Expansion or the Cleveland voucher by Ohio House district.

HOUSE DISTRICT 99

For the 2023-24 school year, state legislators made the EdChoice Expansion voucher available to any family, regardless of their income or whether their kids already attended private schools. As a result, Ohio gave out nearly 69,000 new EdChoice vouchers, while private school enrollment increased by fewer than 3,000 students. That same year, only 17% of EdChoice users qualified as low-income, compared to 68% the year before.

In District 99 there are

7

private voucher schools attended by 1,685

voucher students.

In District 99 there are 30

public schools attended by 12,433

students.

Contact Representative Fowler and tell them to make sure the state budget being negotiated in Columbus fully funds the public schools that educate the majority of Ohio's kids.

Email them at rep99@ohiohouse.gov
or call them at 614-466-1405

Arthur

Questions? Contact Piet van Lier at pvanlier@policymattersohio.org